Crash Danger Predictions from Electric Scooters Coming True

By Rob McCarthy

To no one’s surprise, electric scooters that showed up last year in South Bay cities before being banned are sending people to hospital emergency rooms with an assortment of injuries. And it’s not only the riders who get scrapes, bruises and broken bones. The walking wounded include bystanders, too -- some of whom are fighting back against the trendy mode of transportation.

Recent developments have slowed the introduction of the sleek scooters from Bird and Lime into Southern California. More cities have banned them for now, preferring to take a wait-and-see approach to how the Santa Monica experiment works. That South Bay city is the testing ground for what happens when a new motoring technology that offers little protection for riders merges into urban traffic. The introduction has come with some bumps and bruises, but no traffic deaths.

Nine people who were injured by electric scooters filed a class-action suit last October in Los Angeles County Superior Court. It accuses startups Bird and Lime — as well as their manufacturers Xiaomi Corp. and Segway Inc. — of gross negligence, claiming the companies knew the scooters were dangerous and deployed them in a way that was certain to cause injuries.

Two of the plaintiffs were injured by tripping over scooters left on the sidewalk, according to the lawsuit. Four were hit from behind as they walked, including a 7-year-old boy whose teeth were broken by the force of the collision, the suit alleges. Another 75 people reportedly have contacted the law firm about injuries caused by electric scooters. One man said he suffered a brain injury.

Bird and Lime argue that vehicles are the real problem. However, a growing number of cities disagree. They’ve banned the vehicles with emergency ordinances or restricted where scooters can be left. Pedestrian injuries from tripping over the scooters is a concern cited by the cities that have told Bird and Lime to remove their fleets of two-wheelers until further notice.

Electric scooters -- with their risks to riders and pedestrians -- came on the scene last September, and yet already have been labeled one of the “polarizing technologies” in transportation in decades. The electric-driven scooters can reach top speeds of 15 to 20 mph, and they are to be ridden in the street and not on sidewalks. Helmets aren’t provided by Lime and Bird, and not surprisingly riders who crash are susceptible to head injuries, according to a first-of-its kind analysis by UCLA doctors.

Fractures and head injuries are commonly the outcome when a scooter collides with a vehicle or the pavement. That’s the initial finding by UCLA researchers after studying 249 injury cases involving the two-wheelers. Santa Monica is the only South Bay city that currently allows Bird and Lime to operate in its boundaries. Riders unlock the scooters with a smartphone and ride for 15 cents per minute.

Nine in 10 of the injuries were to riders, though the danger of tripping over a scooter left on the sidewalk adds to the body count in emergency rooms, the data showed. The riders, who often are inexperienced at operating the scooters and lack helmets, most often get hurt because they fall. Potholes and uneven pavement after weeks of rainstorms will only make the streets more treacherous ahead of spring break, when college students descend on warm-weather cities, too.

The UCLA research team did some firsthand observation of scooter traffic in Santa Monica and reported that riders weren’t wearing helmets 93 percent of the time. Protection against head injuries is clearly needed if the personal transportation device offered by Bird and Lime is going to coexist with vehicle traffic. The 249 injury cases present a small sample, yet the plastic surgeons at one Santa Monica emergency room have seen what happens when a rider is thrown to the pavement.

One-third of those patients were taken to UCLA hospitals in Santa Monica or Westwood in an ambulance over a one-year period that lasted through September last year. The work done at UCLA is a foray into a public health issue that hasn’t been analyzed and reported until now.

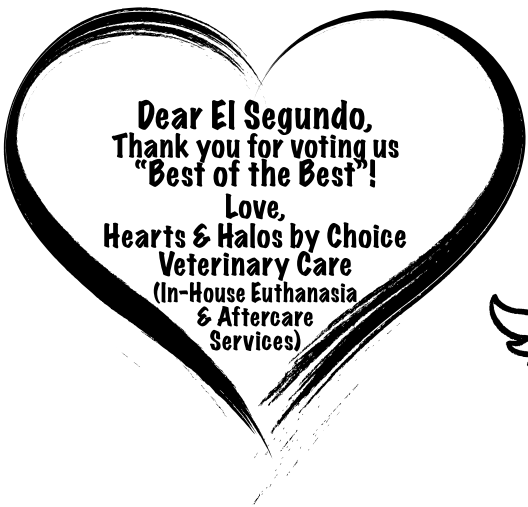

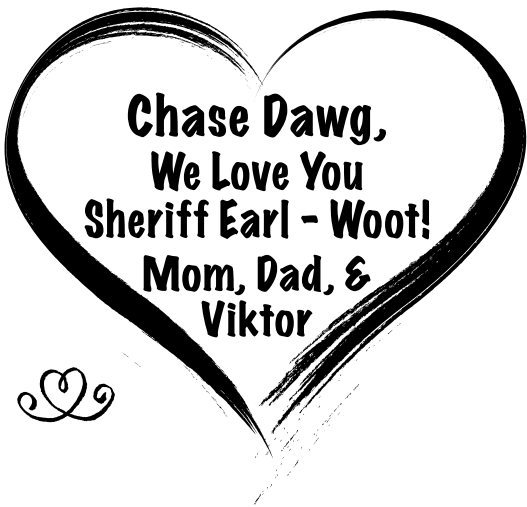

One of the typical scooter-related injuries to the head is not a pretty sight, according to Dr. Wally Ghurabi, medical director of one of the emergency departments at UCLA Medical Center in Santa Monica. His surgeons have spent hours picking asphalt out of facial wounds. “You can break your face, break your nose, break your facial bones, break your skull and bleed inside your skull,” Ghurabi warns about the demonstrated risks to riders.

Patients who made emergency-room visits or were treated for scooter crashes had a huge number of head injuries, in the UCLA analysis. Head trauma put 40 percent of those patients in the ER. The main cause of those injuries was a fall. In 80 percent of the reported cases, the rider tumbled and sustained some injury. Physicians saw plenty of bruises, scrapes and broken bones after Bird and Lime showed up in the South Bay last year.

Riders run into objects or collide with vehicles at a much smaller rate, about 10 percent, based on the Santa Monica sample.

Velvet Buzzsaw is High-Art Horror

By Ryan Rojas
for www.cinemacy.com

The term “velvet buzzsaw,” for those who don’t know, is slang for a rich person’s flatulence, and it’s this stuffy, hot air that writer-director Dan Gilroy derides so deliciously in his new film, the horror-comedy Velvet Buzzsaw (available to stream on Netflix this Friday). Having last mocked the vulture-like culture of tabloid journalism and consumption in his previous film, Nightcrawler, Gilroy returns to an arena of ridicule (and once again set in the beautiful but artificial city of LA) to satirize the self-important art world elites whose vanity and greed results in devaluing the meaning of art – if it doesn’t kill them first.

It’s business as usual in the art world – with vanity-plagued art dealers, buyers, agents and critics all “kiss-kiss”ing each other at the latest openings. That is, until the life’s work of an unknown artist is discovered, which shakes the art world for the mind-blowing reason that it actually has “substance” as flamboyant art critic Morf Vandewalt (Jake Gyllenhaal) remarks. Whether or not the paintings from the artist – Dease – should ever have seen the light of day or not (per the late artist’s intentions) means nothing to sales agent Josephina (Zawe Ashton) and her boss, Rhodora Haze (Rene Russo), who immediately look to sell and display the white-hot works. But as they, and the rest of the vociferous art world soon comes to find as each of the pieces are dealt and displayed, spiritual forces begin to haunt and lead each of the greedy superficial socialites

Mia Tang is not your typical fifth grader. She moved from China to America when she was eight years old. Her family was hired by the rich Mr. Yao to operate the Calivista Motel. The Tangs helped at the motel to the best of their ability, but always had the risk of losing their jobs looming over their head. They spent hours cleaning rooms, managing the front desk and fixing the building. A small room behind the office of the motel is also a place her family calls home.

The main character, Mia, faces many problems ranging from racist bullies at school and in her community to financial problems at home. On top of that, her love for writing is hindered based on her mother’s disapproval. Although she lives a life of hardship, she is always hopeful of a better tomorrow. With her love for writing, Mia positively disrupts her community by bringing awareness to problems plaguing her home.

Front Desk highlights many hardships that new immigrants face moving to the United States. Based on the author Kelly Yang’s first experiences as a new immigrant in America, she presents a fearless fifth grader, Mia Tang, who helps the readers experience the dreams of a young Chinese Immigrant. Yang does a great job creating an autobiographical read while portraying a young girl’s courage,

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

STATE OF THE UNION AND STATE OF THE CITY

President Trump had his 90 minutes to shine this past Tuesday night. The Democrats had their chance to respond. So now, that the State of the Union is over, they can get back to fighting and getting nothing done. That is not how our local city council works. It seems that in the past few years, there has been more of a coordinated effort to work together to get Hawthorne headed in the right direction. These efforts will be the highlight of the upcoming luncheon where the State of City is presented. The Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce's State of the City Luncheon to be held this year on March 7th. Mayor Vargas will be giving his 3rd update to the residents and stakeholders of Hawthorne. The Citizen of the Year Award will be announced at the event also. Tickets can be obtained by calling the Chamber office at (310) 676-1163. Nominations are now being accepted for the Citizen of the Year Award that is presented annually at the State of the City Luncheon featuring Mayor Alex Vargas. The deadline for nominations is Tuesday February 19th. You may write a letter nominating someone and either send it or drop it off at the Hawthorne Chamber office, 12519 Crenshaw Blvd, Hawthorne. Or you may email it to the Selection Committee Chairman Tom Quintana at quprs@aol.com. Past Citizen of the Year recipients will meet to make the selection.

HERE WE GO

Everything in one paragraph: It's raining in California and that is good. The snowpack in the Sierra Mountains is above average for this time of the year and that is good. The Rams couldn't get their offense going and when they did, a stupid penalty changed their momentum dramatically. At least the big game was interesting to watch right up to the end. Now that football is over, the NBA and college basketball get us through the early spring. Does anyone really care about baseball any more? I do. Spring training begins in about a week. Now that I'm retired, I would love just to go down to Arizona and see a few spring games. It wouldn't really matter what teams I see, it would just be a new experience. There are still too many cars getting broken into in Hawthorne. Crime is down, but my Nextdoor notifications still gives me updates on stuff happening on the residential streets of Hawthorne. The Hawthorne Historical Society is still very active and keeps the Hawthorne Museum open on Tuesdays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Museum is located over at Jim Thorpe Park at 141st Street and Prairie Avenue. The next Hawthorne City Council Meeting will held next Tuesday, February 12th beginning at 6 p.m. in the City Chambers at City Hall. If you have never seen your city governance, then next Tuesday would be a good first meeting to attend. If you have something to say, you have 3 minutes at the start of the meeting during oral communications to bring up a concern before the council and also the citizens present or who watch it via live streaming or on cable tv. February is Black History Month and my grandkids have learned all about Harriot Tubman in their schools. They know about the Underground Railroad and how Harriot was instrumental in leading many of the slaves to freedom. Here's a little snippet her life story: Harriet Tubman was an American abolitionist and political activist. Born into slavery, Tubman escaped and subsequently made some thirteen missions to rescue approximately seventy enslaved people, family and friends, using the network of antislavery activists and safe houses known as the Underground Railroad. America has a rich history. We tend to dwell too much on the bad stuff our country has done. For all of our bad, we still live in the best and most loving and most generous dreams and hard work.

What made this novel very easy to read was how straightforward the writing style is, which is perfect for young and curious minds. Yang’s writing style was very clean and honest and sheds a powerful message about racism and privilege in society.

This book captures America’s lifestyle in the 1990s for both people of color and those who experienced living in poverty. The book is an eye-opener for readers to understand the hardships a new immigrant can face. If you’re interested in checking this title out, please visit the El Segundo Public Library. • to their demise in different gruesome ways. Before long, it’s one death-by-art after another. One of the most deliciously fun parts of Velvet Buzzsaw is that, being an ensemble movie, we get so many different zany characters -- all played by an incredible list of actors all portraying wonderful, over-the-top versions of snobby art world elites who meet a bitter end. There’s Russo, who sinks her teeth into the part of Rhodora, former punk rocker-turned commercial art owner. Russo mostly plays opposite newcomer Ashton, who holds her own as Josephina, the agent who discovers the Deases. Toni Colette is a fantastic wit and energy as the gossipy art world advisor Gretchen, and we are also treated to John Malkovich as an artist looking for re-inspiration. But if there’s one person who seems to have the most fun here, it is Gyllenhaal, whose posturing as the flamboyant art critic Morf Vandewalt is a comically caricatured protagonist and a highlight throughout the film. Overall, Velvet Buzzsaw is less a breathtaking horror movie and more a perverse, comic watch, which allows Gilroy to have his fun in voicing the underlying thoughts of how art loses all meaning at the hands of elites, critics (ahem) and institutions that seek to focus on financial or social opportunity within its aesthetic value. While this also means that we don’t have the same bone-chilling uneasiness of a Nightcrawler, we get something that we can laugh at, and then think about long after. Velvet Buzzsaw is now streaming on Netflix. •

This amendment will affect the rates Allied charges to its customers in the City for solid waste and recyclable collection and for other services. The proposed amendment will make the following changes to the franchise agreement: 1) The portion of Allied's rates that are currently indexed to the CPI for All Urban Consumers as well as PPI and tipping fee will instead be indexed only to the CPI for Water, Sewer and Trash Services; 2) Allied will be authorized to charge the City for certain services to City owned facilities that had previously been provided without charge for a limited term; and 3) Allied will provide additional free bulky item pick-ups up to 20 items per year to residential and multi-family customers upon proper notification. Other provisions of the Allied Agreement will remain in effect.
