South Bay Cities Spark Interest in Going Solar

During last Saturday's Inglewood Earth Day Jazz Festival, the South Bay Cities Council of Governments (SBCCOG) unveiled a new program designed to encourage area residents to go solar. Known as Renewable South Bay, the program will connect residents with resources, education and materials about how to add renewable energy to their homes. Aerospace Contractor Answers a Rare Request from Washington

By Rob McCarthy

The nation's new Commerce secretary has asked manufacturers which federal regulations hold them back the most, signaling the White House intends to keep its promise to make it easier for companies to do business on U.S. soil. The chance to talk directly to a member of the White House Cabinet doesn't come around often.

Gino DiCaro, a spokesman with the California Manufacturing and Technology Association, said in the past his industry's calls for relief fell on deaf ears in Washington, D.C. But that's changing with the new administration. "More than ever, growing our economy through manufacturing is at the forefront of public opinion and policy discussions at every government level," DiCaro said. "Everybody wants good wages, jobs and innovation."

Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross in March invited manufacturers and industry groups to tell him which federal regulations hinder their businesses and expansion plans. An executive memo signed January 24 by President Trump tasked Ross to investigate the impact of federal regulations on the manufacturing industry. The president has said he wants to keep factory jobs here in the States.

It's unusual for a president to single out one industry with an offer of help. It's rarer that the manufacturers themselves got the chance to tell the Commerce Secretary which federal rules to reduce or eliminate altogether.

There were 175 comments and suggestions left for Ross and his staff on a federal website, including one by Northrup Grumman. The aerospace and defense contractor operates in three South Bay cities and in all 50 states. Robert Foster, a Washington, D.C.-based manager for Northrup Grumman, recommended that the environmental permit process be simplified.

He offered ways the administration could help Northrup Grumman to better suit the company's needs. Simplify the process for obtaining a federal permit to comply with clean air, clean water and wastewater rules. Require the same data, but share it among the agencies reviewing the application. Also, cut down on the nine- to 12-month wait to get a permit approved, Foster suggested.

Northrup Grumman must submit duplicate information to the California and federal agencies, Foster explained. Local and federal agencies should be working together, and a single agency could handle a Northrup permit application to make the process more efficient. Many federal environmental rules are enforced by the states. "Consolidate the review at a single level and within a single agency," Foster recommended. Where more than one state or federal agency is involved, he suggested to clearly define the lines of responsibility so the process isn't slowed by multiple requests for information.

State and federal agencies often want the same data to assure them a company has practices and procedures in place to comply with environmental rules. Northrup Grumman told Ross the current permit process is redundant and time-consuming. If the agencies could share the data submitted by Northrup, then that alone could speed up

SPRING BREAK

Vacation is great. No work, just fun. This must be how retirement must feel, right? I find myself working on my days off. I love to volunteer and help wherever I can. Sometimes I have to tell myself to stop working and just go have some fun. Golf is one of the ways I finally stop working, that's why I enjoy it so much. Oh, I forgot to tell you that my foursome won the Hawthorne Parks and Recreation Foundation tournament for the first time last week. We beat the gentlemen's club foursome and the trash hauler's foursome and the water company's foursome. After coming in second place several times, it was fun to win. The key to our victory was making some long putts. It's always great to see that little white ball drop into the cup. This all may sound weird to you non-golfers, but believe me, golf is a frustrating sport. But once you get hooked, it's hard to beat it for pure fun. It's truly an escape from the world of work. Writing this is getting me excited. Fore!

School Bond Refinancing Brings Savings to Lawndale Taxpayers

In November 2016, Lawndale voters supported Measure L--a local parcel tax that will provide funding for the Lawndale Elementary School District (LESD) to improve the quality of local public education by modernizing outdated classrooms, restrooms and school facilities with funding that cannot be taken by the state. In addition, LESD will make health and safety improvements such as repairing or replacing leaky roofs, updating electrical systems for modern technology, and replacing outdated heating, ventilation and air-conditioning systems.

In taking the Measure L Bonds to the market, the LESD Board of Education found this to be an opportune time to advocate for our taxpayers and consider refinancing the Series B bonds that were issued for campus modernization back in 1998. The District issued $5,080,000 in 2017 Refunding Bonds to refund the prior 1998 Series B bonds. This refinancing reduced the total bond payments assigned to Lawndale's taxpayers by $826,128, or 13.75 percent of the present value. The bonds went to the market at a favorable time and the actual savings from the refunding was significantly higher than the $600,000 that was initially projected.

"The Lawndale Elementary School District appreciates the ongoing support of its community and will continue to advocate for our students and our taxpayers," stated Dr. Gretchen Janson, LESD's new Assistant Superintendent of Business Services.

Inglewood Library Free Workshop on Retirement Benefits

you are entitled to as a widowed or divorced retiree, and how to coordinate Social Security with your other sources of retirement income.

The presentation will also answer questions such as: Will Social Security be there for me? How much can I expect to receive? Will my benefits be enough to live on in retirement? When should I apply for my benefits? How can I maximize my benefits?

This presentation is intended to help give people some direction on a highly cluttered topic. Kevin Kugley provides this seminar as a community service. The program is free and open to all. For more information, call 310-412-5380, or visit library.cityofinglewood.org.

Back-to-Back Games to Normans

By Adam Serrao

The Hawthorne Cougars baseball team has the perennially tough task of competing in the Ocean League. Naturally, head coach JC Romero and the rest of his team don't have to worry about their stringent competition until about halfway through the regular season. That halfway point has officially come for Hawthorne in the 2017 season and the Cougars are struggling to keep their heads above the salty water in Ocean League play. Back-to-back losses to the Beverly Hills Normans highlight just how tough inter-division play can be for a Hawthorne team that remains winless in league play and only has six more divisional games remaining on the schedule to try and scratch out a win.

Struggling to be competitive in Ocean League play isn't something that comes as a surprise to the Hawthorne baseball team. Last year, the Cougars only managed to win one game within their own league and it came against the very same Beverly Hills team that Hawthorne was just swept by last week. Coming away with a win against the Normans isn't necessarily an easy task, though. Beverly Hills consistently plays at a level that has the team seeking out a third place finish or better in the Ocean League standings--a division in which the Normans currently hold a first place standing this season. That's why when Zachary Geller took the mound for the Normans in the first of the two teams' matchups, coach Romero learned that his Cougars would be in for a long afternoon.

Hawthorne wasn't able to score a run off of Geller until the fifth inning. It was then that Hawthorne's do-it-all junior, Johnny Pacheco, came around for his team's first run of the game. Later in the inning, senior Andres Cordova came across the plate to tie things up after being hit by a pitch. It didn't take long, though, for the Cougars starting pitcher, Bernardo Robles, to give those runs and more right back to Beverly Hills. Robles would give up three runs in the bottom of the fifth inning as Beverly Hills' third baseman, Grant Gaon, continued to enjoy what eventually became an excellent game for the senior. Gaon tripled and knocked in two runs on the day for the Normans while going two for three at the plate. As the sparkplug on offense, it was Gaon that led Beverly Hills to a three-run fifth inning and eventual 6-2 victory in the first of the two-game set. Hawthorne had four errors in the game, which certainly didn't help their cause.

Game two was much closer for Hawthorne, but unfortunately for Romero, Pacheco and the rest of the Cougars, the outcome was more of the same. Each team scored a run in the first inning, as Gaon struck first again for Beverly Hills--this time against Hawthorne pitcher Andres Cordova. Cordova only pitched two innings before giving up four hits and three runs while striking out two. Pacheco and Carlos Jacobo both came on in relief and held the Normans scoreless from the third inning on. As a team that consistently struggles on offense, the Cougars are lucky if they ever get anything going on the base pads. Last Thursday night, though, Charles Phelps was the one willing his team to victory at the plate. Phelps was two for three with a run scored and a double. His strong offensive effort wasn't enough to overcome a stronger pitching performance from Victor Noval. Hawthorne went on to take a 3-2 loss to remain winless inside of league play and lose its third game in a row.

The Cougars (4-9, 0-4) will continue league play this Tuesday when they take on the Culver City Centaurs in the first of back-to-back games. With only six games remaining in the regular season, Hawthorne will have to start winning now if it wishes to stay out of last place in the final Ocean League standings of the year.

LAWNDALE HIGH

Robert Dempsey and his Lawndale Cardinals baseball team were recently able to come away with their first league victory of the season. Two weeks ago, the Cardinals took to the road to take on the Culver City Centaurs in the two teams' second meeting of the year. While the Centaurs were able to pull out a 3-1 victory in the first game, Lawndale was out for revenge in the second contest.

Culver City led the game off by scoring three runs in the first inning of play. At that point, it looked like Lawndale was destined for another horrible loss. Pitcher Leo Cervantes didn't give up, though. Cervantes eventually settled in and held the Centaurs scoreless the rest of the way while the Cardinals offense finally got going in the fourth. Cervantes and Michael Zambrano each doubled, walked, scored a run and knocked in an RBI to spark their team. Junior Julian Diaz was two for three on the afternoon with an RBI as Lawndale put together three two-run innings en route to a 6-3 victory. The win marked the Cardinals' second win in a row as Dempsey and company attempt to finish off the stretch run of the season sizzling hot.

INGLEWOOD HIGH

After beginning their regular season campaign with a remarkable 4-1 record, the Inglewood Sentinels hit a snag in the road when they took on the Palos Verdes Sea Kings in back-to-back games to open up divisional play within the Bay League. The Sentinels were outmatched and overpowered, to say the least. The Sea Kings put up 34 runs across the two games to Inglewood's meager one. A 23-0 shutout in Game 1 was followed up by an 11-1 route in Game 2 as the Sentinels learned the hard way that divisional play in the Bay league is never something to be taken lightly. The Sentinels will move on and attempt to steal another win or two when they take on the Redondo Union Sea Hawks this week in a two-game set.

Is the MVP Race Even a Race at All?

By Adam Serrao

Now that the NBA's regular season is officially over, it's time for an entirely new set of storylines to begin. Not only will basketball fans everywhere begin to focus their attentions on the playoff race, but there is another race of particular importance that has been garnering headlines as of late. This season may be one of the most hotly debated in basketball history as it relates to the NBA's Most Valuable Player. Four of the league's superstars are involved in the conversation, but only one can walk home with the hardware. Will it be LeBron James? The Spurs' Kawhi Leonard may be the best two-way player in the league. Then there are James Harden and Russell Westbrook, who are facing off in an epic first-round battle in this year's playoffs that will most likely have just a little bit more riding on the outcome than any usual playoff series. In the end, though, there can only be one winner--but when it comes down to it, this year's race really isn't even a race at all.

There may not be any one player in the league who is better at both ends of the court than Kawhi Leonard. Leonard has led a consistently great Spurs team for years now and has improved his game consistently year after year. In the final five games that Leonard played in the regular season, he averaged 23 points, 6.6 rebounds and 4.2 assists per game, proving just how much of an all-around player that he can be. When it comes to the national conversation of MVP candidates, though, Leonard simply falls short. As quiet and reserved as they come, Leonard and the Spurs are labeled as boring, year after year. Head coach Greg Popovich embraces that label, as he keeps his players out of trouble and on top of the standings as consistently as any other head coach has done in the history of the league. Leonard, despite his talent and ability (particularly on the defensive end) to lead his team to 61 wins this year, doesn't impact the game on a national level enough to gain the votes necessary to win the award.

There is a certain group of fans around the league whose easy (and lazy) choice to win MVP is LeBron James. Sure, James is always a candidate to take home the MVP award because as he proved in the Finals last year, he is, in fact, the best player in the entire NBA. Unfortunately for James and his supporters, the MVP award isn't about who is the best player in the league right now. It's about who is having the best season this year. Westbrook and Harden have both had better seasons than James this year. Even still, that doesn't mean that either Westbrook or Harden will start next year's regular season as the best player in the league. That designation will clearly still go to James. In a season when the Cavaliers have struggled down the stretch in the second half, though, it is almost impossible to give the award to James, despite the fact that he is putting up some of the best all-around personal numbers of his career. The Heat, Nuggets, Bucks and the Thunder, to name a few, all have better records than LeBron's Cavs in the second half of the season. He may be the best player in the league, and may even take home another title at the end of the postseason, but LeBron is not the MVP of the 2016-'17 NBA season.

There might not be any more efficient player in the NBA than James Harden. After new head coach Mike D'Antoni came in and Harden switched positions to point guard, "The Beard" has simply been able to do it all. Harden scores, gets assists, and his team finished with a better record than Westbrook's Thunder. Houston, however, was built around Harden so that he could accrue the kind of numbers that he has averaged this season. The Rockets were built for Harden to succeed and even still, Westbrook has the better season-long averages in virtually every major category this year except for assists (10.4 for Westbrook, 11.2 for Harden). Harden certainly deserves recognition for his accomplishments and should maybe even be in the running for the NBA's Most Improved Player Award. Unfortunately for Harden, there should only be one winner of the MVP.

There hasn't been a player to average a triple-double in the NBA since Oscar Robertson 55 years ago. If your vote is for any other player to win the NBA MVP, then naturally you'll dispute the triple-double as being a major accomplishment. No matter how you want to twist the numbers, though, there is no disputing the fact that Westbrook has made history in a season in which everyone expected the Thunder to fail with the departure of Kevin Durant. Not only has Westbrook willed his team to victory and back into the playoffs almost single-handedly, but he has made this NBA season one that will be looked back on and remembered as the one in which the Oklahoma City star simply went crazy. One of the main reasons Westbrook doesn't get his due from certain people around the NBA is because he makes it look so easy. The point guard has been so consistent this season that he has made what was once a spectacular feat look commonplace. Everyone who wishes to root against Westbrook is simply wishing to be different and have their own, unique opinion. But ask yourself this: If your favorite player in the NBA had the same exact season as Westbrook has had this year, wouldn't you expect him to win the MVP?

Unfortunately for fans of the game, you'll have to wait over a month to see the results of the season-long MVP race when they will be announced live for the first time ever on an NBA awards show held June 25 in Manhattan, New York. Filling out a ballot will certainly be an unenviable task for members of the media who are entrusted to do so this season. Those ballots should be cast before postseason play begins in what is one of the more thrilling MVP races that the league has ever seen. At the end of the day, voters can't ignore history. That's why Russell Westbrook will be named this year's NBA MVP. • - Asixlion@earthlink.net

French Bread

Ingredients

- 1 3/4 cups warm water (100 to 110 degrees F)
- 2 envelopes Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 1 tablespoon Mazola Corn Oil
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 5 to 5 1/2 cups all-purpose flour cornmeal
- 1 egg white beaten with 1 tablespoon water

Preparation

1. Place water in large, warm bowl. Sprinkle in yeast; stir until dissolved. Stir in oil, salt and enough flour to make a soft dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, about six to eight minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm draft-free place until doubled in size, about 30 to 45 minutes.
2. Punch dough down. On floured surface, divide dough in half; roll to 15x10-inch ovals. Roll up from long ends to make loaves. Pinch seams and ends to seal; taper ends.
3. Place, seam sides down, on large greased baking sheet sprinkled with cornmeal. Cover; let rise in warm draft-free place until doubled in size, about 30 to 45 minutes.
4. Brush with egg white mixture. With a sharp knife, make four or five diagonal cuts (1/4-inch deep), on top of each loaf. Bake in a preheated 400 degree F oven for 25 minutes, or until done. For crispier crusts, brush two more times with egg white mixture, after 15 and 20 minutes of baking time. Remove from sheet and cool on wire rack. •

Secrets Smart Investors Use Year-Round To Save On Their Taxes

(BPT) - Come tax time, many people work to locate tax breaks. While this is always a smart financial move, a little-known way to help build your net worth is to keep taxes top of mind throughout the entire year.

Reducing taxes means you keep more of what you earn, according to Nick Holeman, a financial planning expert at Betterment.com.

“You can’t control the stock market, but you can control some of your taxes,” Holeman said. “Knowing how your investments affect your tax bill can help you save money not just on April 15th, but for years to come.”

Check to see whether your long-term investment strategy is running efficiently with these tips from Holeman.

Invest your tax refund: One smart place to invest your tax refund is in an IRA. Normally, investors might divert a portion of the refund into this account as part of a well-rounded investment strategy and claim the deductions for next year’s tax time. Invest your refund, and you may get a portion of that back in tax savings. Stay in the habit of investing that refund if you can and watch those small returns add up over time.

Think several moves ahead: Investing is complex and from time to time you will have to sell some of your investments; everybody does. It might be to rebalance your portfolio or maybe your goals have changed and your investments no longer match their intended purpose.

Still, smart investors need to think ahead before blindly selling parts of their portfolio. This is because selling could potentially lead to taxes. By carefully choosing which investments to sell, you can help minimize that hefty tax consequence.

One way to do this is to partner with an investment company that has the tools to make this information easy to access and understand. Betterment.com, for example, offers Tax Impact Preview, which lets investors see estimated potential tax on a sale before making the trade. If you don’t think the pros outweigh the cons, don’t do it.

Reorganize your investments: Another way to potentially leverage even small tax advantages into long-term growth is to build your portfolio like an energy-efficient engine, built to run for more miles with less need to refuel. You can help accomplish this by reorganizing your portfolio. Move inefficient investments like international stocks and other assets that are taxed more often into a tax-deferred account, such as an IRA or a Roth IRA. That way, you can enjoy the high growth for less tax. Then, move less-taxed assets, such as municipal bonds, into taxable accounts.

Benefit from losses: Help keep your portfolio in balance by selling off the laggards and replacing them with a similar investment. You can receive a tax deduction from your losses that can help cancel out the taxes you owe on assets that have gains. This is done automatically for investors at many automated services through a strategy called tax loss harvesting. Smart investors should always remember that investments involve risk and may result in loss.

Give to a worthy cause: While it’s important to secure your future, many investors see community support as an important goal. Consider donating a to a nonprofit organization in your community. Not only are you helping to improve the quality of life in your locale, you can potentially claim a deduction from your income tax. It can pay to do the right thing. •

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call, 916-939-0772 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this Internet Web site, www.nationwideposting.com, for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, T.S.# 9646-0054. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. NBS Default Services, LLC 301 E. Small Nest Egg, Big Dreams?

Tips For Buying Your Retirement Home

(BPT) - Planning for retirement means making a lot of decisions, including when you'll stop working, how much you'll withdraw from your savings each year, and where you'll live. Many Americans view retirement as an opportunity to move into a house they'll love and live in for all their golden years. In fact, 64 percent of retirees either have moved or plan to move, according to a Merrill Lynch survey.

Some retirees move to be closer to children or grandchildren, to down-size into a more manageable home, live in a warmer locale, or to secure a more luxurious home where they can easily age in place.

"The decision of where to live in retirement is important and can directly affect quality of life in your golden years," says Geoff Lewis, President of RE/MAX, LLC. "Research by Trulia shows that in virtually all areas of the country, it makes better financial sense for retirees to buy a home, rather than rent. In fact, buying is nearly 42 percent cheaper than renting for seniors across the country."

Have a Plan

Ideally, you should think about where you want to live long before retirement, but it's never too late to think about your priorities.

Do you want to be close to family or health care resources? Do you desire a home in the mountains or somewhere you'll never see snow again?

Don't Delay

If possible, don't wait until poor health or declining finances force you to move somewhere that's not your ideal location. Move while you're still young enough to enjoy your dream retirement home.

Get professional financial advice

It's important to protect your nest egg and keep it growing throughout retirement. A professional financial planner can help you understand what size mortgage is right for you, so your dream home doesn't strain your finances.

Be Mindful of Amenities

When choosing a location and a home, in addition to your personal priorities, it's important to keep in mind accessibility to amenities important to seniors. Community features such as good transportation, quality of roads, safe neighborhoods, and access to health care, socialization opportunities, shopping and cultural venues are all options to consider.

Rely on Real Estate Pros

Once you know where you want to be, it's time to find a real estate agent. Well-versed on local real estate trends, RE/MAX agents can help retirees sell their current home so they can make the purchase of their dream retirement home a reality. Visit www.remax.com to search for an agent.

Focus on Must-haves

Make a list of must-have features and those you would like your retirement home to have. Share the list with your agent to help him or her focus on properties that meet your criteria. Your list of must-haves and desirables will likely be very different from the list you made when you bought your first home. Now, a single-level house with large bathrooms and a level lot may be more desirable than a two-story with lots of bedrooms and a big backyard.

Finally, says Lewis, keep in mind whether you plan to age in place. "More Americans are looking for homes that will allow them to stay independent and living on their own throughout their retirement years," he says. "If that's your plan, look for home features that will help facilitate that, like wider doors, few or no exterior stairs, and good lighting." • the process and make the company's wait times shorter.

The federal comment period closed on March 31. A spokesman with the Commerce Department confirmed that manufacturers' recommendations would be reviewed and used by Ross to prepare a report for the president. The Commerce Department hasn't said when that might happen.

California's association for manufacturers is encouraged because for the first time in a decade, policymakers in Washington, D.C. are interested in the well-being of South Bay companies like Northrup Grumman and Boeing with huge workforces. Boeing also took the opportunity to advise the White House on which regulations it considers the biggest stumbling blocks to its business. "It's promising that the administration in Washington is ... doing everything it can to understand and fix what impedes a manufacturer's ability to grow in the U.S.," said DiCaro with the California Manufacturing and Technology Association.

The White House is concerned about automakers relocating their assembly plants outside the U.S. An industry representative for the Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers praised the Commerce secretary for undertaking a fact-finding mission about U.S. regulations that pose the biggest burdens. Light-duty passenger vehicles are the "most highly regulated sector of our economy," a spokesman for the carmakers told Ross. "Any initiative to remove unnecessary regulatory burdens encourages domestic manufacturers to increase investments and jobs in the United States," the auto industry trade group said. It represents the 12 largest automobile manufacturers in the United States, which account for 70 percent of all car and light truck sales in the country. Alliance members are BMW Group, FCA US LLC, Ford Motor Company, General Motors Company, Jaguar Land Rover, Mazda, Mercedes-Benz USA, Mitsubishi Motors, Porsche Cars North America, Toyota, Volkswagen Group of America, and Volvo Car USA.

Several manufacturers left comments indicating that overlapping federal and state rules are their biggest frustrations. For the carmakers, they deal mostly with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the California Air Resources Board, the association said. The group told the Commerce secretary that what manufacturers want is a common-sense approach to protecting the environment.

"Certainly, many regulations that impact auto manufacturers originally were intended to serve useful purposes and continue to have value. However, many are or have become outdated, unnecessary, or ineffective," the association said, adding they just need to be reviewed and updated occasionally.

Given a rare opportunity to speak directly to the White House, Northrup Grumman and Boeing were the representatives for the South Bay. Boeing said in its comments what happens with environmental permits and regulations will influence whether it expands and creates high-tech, U.S.-based manufacturing centers. The aerospace and defense systems contractor is predicting global demand for 39,000 new aircraft by 2037. •
