Biting Dogs Have Mail Carriers
in Every City on the Defensive

By Rob McCarthy

Something about the sound of footsteps approaching the front porch sends dogs into a defensive posture. Your dog may be friendly with everyone, but it doesn't matter. Regardless of the breed, the size or the animal's temperament, dogs will bite if they feel threatened.

That's why the United States Postal Service on Saturday started a public awareness campaign for pet owners across the South Bay. The mail carrier doesn't trust your dog as much as you do. Vice versa for your pet. And a screen door separating isn't enough to stop an attack.

South Bay mail carriers last year were on the receiving end of 31 dog bites, according to the Postal Service. With summer nearing, the postmaster for the Los Angeles region that includes Inglewood, Hawthorne, Lawndale and El Segundo reminds pet owners that dog attacks on mail carriers and children can happen in a split second.

Here are some suggestions for how to prevent a dog from biting the mail carrier or a stranger at the front door. When a letter carrier delivers mail or packages to a front door, place a dog in a separate room and close that door before opening the front door. Dogs have been known to burst through screen doors or plate glass windows to attack visitors.

Parents should remind children and other family members not to take mail directly from letter carriers in the presence of the family pet. The dog may view the letter carrier handing mail to a family member as a threatening gesture.

If a letter carrier feels threatened by a dog, or if a dog is loose or unleashed, the owner may be asked to pick up mail at a post office facility until the letter carrier is assured the pet has been restrained. If the dog is roaming the neighborhood, the pet owner's neighbors also may be asked to pick up their mail at the area's post office.

The number of dog attacks on postal employees locally and nationally declined last year, proof that the public-awareness campaign and safety tips for pet owners works, according to Postal Service spokeswoman Evelina Ramirez. The national dog bite awareness campaign ran for one week in mid-April, but South Bay mail carriers will participate in a more targeted campaign that will last through the summer months.

The Los Angeles postal region had the second highest number of dog attacks on mail carriers in the country last year. Houston was the worst city for dogs mauling letter carriers, followed by L.A., Philadelphia, Cleveland and Dallas. San Diego made the list at number 12.

Mail carriers across the Los Angeles region have started wearing t-shirts on Saturdays that ask all households with dogs to be responsible for pets. Postcards were left in mailboxes on Saturday for households with a known dog as reminders that dog bites affect everyone: the carrier, the Postal Service, the homeowner and the neighbors.

"Although our employees are provided with extensive training in preventive measures against dog attacks, we are asking for dog owners to aid USPS in lowering the number of attacks," said Los Angeles Postmaster Joe Zapata.

Those postcards bear the hashtag slogans #preventdog bites and Be a #ResponsibleDogOwner. The regional campaign asks homeowners living in Inglewood, Hawthorne, Lawndale and El Segundo to "help us to deliver safely." Each city had at least one reported dog bite of a mailman or woman last year, according to USPS figures. Gardena had the highest number of dog attacks on mail employees at six. Lawndale, Lynwood and Torrance had five dog bites reported by postal employees. Inglewood had four attacks, while Hawthorne and El Segundo had two and one bite respectively.

The actual number of pet attacks on the mail delivery person is probably higher, says the USPS spokeswoman Ramirez. Incidents involving aggressive dogs are left to the employees' judgment whether it was serious enough to warrant a report to a supervisor. The dangers to letter carriers are so serious that they receive special training to prepare them for the inevitable confrontation with a dog upset that somebody is trespassing in his territory. Bites are on the decline locally and nationwide since the training began.

Sixty carriers in the South Bay and Metro L.A. were bitten in 2018, which was an

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

JOHN BAKER MEMORIAL CRUISE NIGHT AT FOSTERS FREEZE

Calling all Hawthorne High School Alums. June 22nd is the date set for another Cruise Night at Fosters Freeze. All of the details can be found somewhere on Facebook. The weather should be a little nicer by then. So, make plans to see your friends and old classmates on the Blvd.

50TH YEAR CLASS REUNION FOR HHS CLASS OF '69

All Hawthorne High School Alums are invited to attend a very special celebration this September 20-21st at the Ayres Hotel in Hawthorne. It will be the 50th Class Reunion for the HHS Class of 1969. I'm old enough to remember back to the sixties. It was quite the time. Catch all the details of the reunion by going to several postings on Facebook. It looks like it will be a great time to reunite with old friends and classmates.

Hawthorne Continues to Make History Happen

Thanks to that world renown, smart guy over there on Crenshaw Blvd. Hawthorne, CA continues to be in the world news. One day last week, SpaceX successfully launched a telecommunications satellite into orbit that will allow people in very remote places on our globe to join us on the internet. Several days later, Las Vegas announced that they will be spending $47 million to contract The Boring Company to dig a 2 mile long tunnel that will connect parts of their convention center with other expedition halls. Visitors will be able to move about freely without going out into the scorching desert heat. I know, us Hawthornians had very little to do with these things happening, but it's still nice to live in the same city where technology is leading the world in innovations. Did you see the text/post that Hawthorne PD released showing how fast cars move about in the tunnel right here under 120th Street in Hawthorne? There was a split screen showing one car in the tunnel and one car on surface streets fighting the usual traffic. You can guess who won the race. No speeding tickets were issued in the tunnel.

Love, Proposal, Engagement, Wedding Planning

Me and my old lady have been blessed with three children and two grandchildren. We are fortunate to live only four miles away from our oldest daughter, son-in-law, and our two grandkids who are 8 and 5 years of age now. Our youngest daughter, Katie, chose to move up here to NorCal with us last year. She met Paul via a Christian dating service. They have been dating for a while. Now for the good stuff, they seemed to have fallen in love. It's been fun seeing this whole love-thyng progress. Paul asked me for my daughter's hand. I told him he would have to take all of her, not just her hand. He told me secretly about the day that he was planning to propose down on the beach by Santa Cruz. It was fun to greet them when they returned to our house to make the announcement. It seems so refreshing to see two young people who are so sincere and honest with each other. Since they are both around 30 years of age, they didn't want to drag out a long engagement, so immediately Katie, Linda, my ol' lady, and Paul began the wedding planning. Finding out when most of the relatives could make the event, checking with our church to see if that date was available and whether or not Pastor was in town, finding a reception venue was one of the biggest decisions, especially for my wallet. Some people spend their life's savings on this one special day. Everything seems to be going well. They are planning on reciting their vows to each other on Saturday, October 12th. I will be there to walk Katie down the isle, of course with tears in my eyes. For all of this tough crap I write about here in this rambling, for all the cold ones I tell people to drink and relax, I'm just a softie inside. I wear my emotions on my beer mug. All 17 of you loyal readers, please remember to hoist a cold one at 7 p.m. on 10/12/19 while I am toasting the newly weds. As usual, I will simply close my rambling speech that evening with the same advice that I've been giving out for years to you folks, "Have a Cold One!" I almost forgot to tell you the bad part of this love story, my future son-in-law, Paul, does NOT drink. He seems like a nice guy, like my other son-in-law came across when he was courting my eldest. My, oh my, how marriage changes things. Anyway, I will still tell Paul to have a cold one, but he will stick with his lemonade. Marriage is for life, for better or worse, in sickness or in health. I'll let you know when he starts having cold ones with me. If that kind of commitment doesn't scare someone to start drinking, I don't know what would.

Revenues, Expenditures Increase as City Council Approves Budget

By Derrick Deane

Hawthorne’s cash reserves continue to increase as the City Council unanimously approved the 2019-2020 budget at its Tuesday meeting. The City of Hawthorne will see a yearly revenue increase from $140.4 million in 2018-2019 to $151.4 million in 2019-2020. The increase includes more than $3 million from taxes, including the recently opened hotels near City Hall as well as more than $700,000 from vehicle license fees.

Of the $151.4 million, $77.67 million is from traditional revenue streams such as taxes and fees while the remaining $73.8 million comes from grants and the City’s restricted funds. The restricted funds are monies the City has already set aside for project payments or known upcoming costs to avoid running into a serious spending deficit.

While revenues grow, so do expenditures. The City will see a yearly expenditure total of $77.6 million for 2019-2020, up from $72.7 million in 2018-2019. The increases are due primarily to the minimum wage hike, while certain departments also have unique circumstances in regards to expenditure increases. “Those [spending] increases are due to benefit rate increases, health, worker’s comp, liability, the increase in the debt service and the fire contract, part-time wage increases – that’s all affecting this increase,” Director of Finance Felice Lopez said.

One area that won’t be seeing a spending increase is the City Council, whose expenditures went down with the newly elected members choosing not to have health coverage. The year-over-year cost dropped nearly $5,000 from $145,113 in 2018-2019 to $140,424 in 2019-2020.

Despite the overall surplus, the City would have been operating with a spending deficit if not for the funds generated by Measure HH.

Councilman Alex Monteiro acknowledged that the City thanks the voters of Hawthorne for passing that measure in last November’s election. “We have to say thank you to the voters of Hawthorne for passing Measure HH because we would be in trouble if they didn’t vote for Measure HH,” Monteiro said. “Thank you to all the voters who voted ‘Yes’ on Measure HH.”

Of particular benefit was the ability of the City to split the Fire Department budget between regular funds and Measure HH money. All totaled, the cost went up from $11.2 million in 2018-2019 to $12.1 million for 2019-2020. “Since Measure HH is being used for safety programs, we want to make sure the County Fire, the RCC which is $3.4 million which is our 9-1-1 program, those are covered by Measure HH,” Lopez said. “Any time there is an increase in revenue from Measure HH, those funds will be spent directly on these programs.” Public safety -- which includes fire, police and 9-1-1 operators --will make up 72 percent of the 2019-2020 budget at a total of $55.5 million.

The City Attorney costs went up by more than $240,000 year-over-year, crossing the $1 million mark in expenditures for 2019-2020, due primarily to the hiring of a full-time prosecutor.

On the other side of law enforcement, the Hawthorne Police Department’s budget increased by more than $3 million. The 2019-2020 budget will see an expenditure of just over $39 million versus the 2018-2019 total of $36.7 million. “The Police Department has 173 employees, whereas the rest of the departments have anywhere between five to 40 employees... that’s why you see such a large increase,” Lopez said.

Minimum wage increases also weigh heavily on the overall budget. In addition to raises for

A Week of Tributes to Inglewood’s Brave Service Men and Women

By Haleemon Anderson

Inglewood’s finest were celebrated this week in a pair of tributes honoring those who put their lives in harm’s way to protect the freedom and safety of others. On Monday, the City of Inglewood held its 71st Annual Memorial Day Service, under the shadow of the Inglewood War Memorial on the south lawn at City Hall. Known as “the obelisk,” the 16-foot monument bears the names of 255 Gold Star Service men and women. Veterans of every United States conflict since World War II were on hand, proudly answering the request to give their name, rank, unit and years of service.

Keynote speaker Dennis Tucker noted the first Memorial Day was commemorated in 1865 by newly freed slaves who decorated the graves of fallen Civil War soldiers. Tucker, a 22-year Army combat veteran, thanked his mother, whom he said rejected a recruiter three times before finally allowing her 17-year-old son to enlist.

Tucker talked about the pressing needs of surviving veterans. “Homelessness, mental health, suicide, employment...these are the issues,” he said. “Most people are one or two generations removed from a serviceman. And less than one percent actually serve. So few of us get to see this patriotism with our own eyes.”

Tucker asked the audience to be mindful also of families and caregivers who survive veterans “for those who hold the fort down when we’re gone. For us, the living, it’s our duty to fill that silence with our love, our gratitude and our actions.”

Mayor James T. Butts said his goal is to give Inglewood’s veterans a city they can be proud of. He said he instituted a renovation of the obelisk when it had fallen into disrepair. “That represents immortality,” said Butts.

Special guest speaker Congresswoman Maxine Waters thanked the military families. She vowed to lobby for legislation to combat payday loans with exorbitant interest and to ensure disability benefits are delivered. “I want $13 billion for veterans and the homeless,” said Waters, “We’ve got to have the money to end homelessness in America. I’m going to look out for you.”

Last Thursday, four Inglewood police officers were feted at the 45th Annual Medal of Valor luncheon. This event, sponsored by the South Bay Police and the Fire Memorial Foundation, recognizes the “conspicuous acts of bravery” of police officers and firefighters. Law enforcement and civic leaders from the nine participating cities gathered to honor public safety officers who distinguished themselves through “bravery, heroism or other outstanding meritorious actions beyond the normal demands of protection service.” Officers are nominated by senior officers in their departments and then screened by their department chiefs for approval.

Officers Matthew Amendola, Nicholas Bobbs, Sara Booth and Stuart Sato of the Inglewood Police Department were recognized with the “Distinguished Service” Award. Twenty-two officers from the other South Bay Cities were also awarded for “distinguished or life-saving” service.

No Medal of Valor was awarded this year. The primary distinction for awarding the Medal of Valor, according to the Foundation, is “imminent threat of great bodily harm or loss of life” to the officer, a colleague, or a citizen.

The Inglewood City Council meets every Tuesday, unless otherwise noted, at 2 p.m. in the Council Chambers on the 9th floor, Inglewood City Hall. •

Echo in the Canyon: A Celebration of Folk Rock

By Jane Greenstein for Cinemacy

Echo in the Canyon is as much a hybrid of a movie as the “California Sound” it pays tribute to in the film. A love letter to a time (the mid-1960s) and a place (Laurel Canyon, nestled off the Sunset Strip in the Hollywood Hills), Echo in the Canyon, now playing at ArcLight Hollywood and The Landmark, is equal parts documentary and concert film.

Although the film is directed by music industry veteran Andrew Slater, it’s musician Jakob Dylan who is front and center, dissecting the folk rock music that emanated from this hilly enclave – showing how the “echo” of this musical genre have plenty to say not just about their union, but also about their involvement in Buffalo Springfield and The Byrds. Ringo Starr is on hand to relate The Beatles’ encounters in the canyon, and both he and The Beach Boys’ Brian Wilson speak of the friendly competition that fueled their bands’ work. Echo is dedicated to the late great Tom Petty, who reminisces about how these California bands inspired his music, a different sound that would take hold in L.A. about a decade after the Laurel Canyon scene was no more.

While Wilson, as well as Stills and Eric Clapton, take their turns in the studio, most of

is still going strong some 50 years later.

Dylan entices those who lived the dream to share some choice anecdotes about the chance meetings and communal vibe that led to the creation of some of the greatest pop music ever made.

What’s largely unspoken is the impact the narrator’s father had on the musicians who appear in both archival footage and current interviews. After all, it was Roger McGuinn’s band The Byrds, credited as the godfathers of the jingly jangly sound that emanated from this area, who famously electrified Bob Dylan’s “Mr. Tambourine Man.”

So while the elder Dylan is barely mentioned, his peers -- including McGuinn -- revel in telling stories of this truly magical time: Michelle Phillips (of The Mamas and the Papas) reveals the story behind “California Dreaming” (as well as some good gossip about her band’s love triangle) and David Crosby, Stephen Stills and Graham Nash (interviewed separately)

the singing in the movie is left to Dylan and his posse of stellar contemporary collaborators including Beck, Fiona Apple, Regina Spektor, Cat Power, Norah Jones and Jade Castrinos. Dylan and company record some choice selections from the Laurel Canyon repertoire (“Go Where You Wanna Go” is particularly effective) and also perform them at a 2015 concert.

Whether too much time is spent on the 2015 show is debatable. Clearly, Dylan and Slater use the concert as a way to introduce these seminal songs to a younger generation. One thing we could have used less of are random scenes from Model Shop, a 1969 film by French writer-director Jacques Demy that reportedly inspired Slater and Dylan to make their own movie capturing a truly unique era in Hollywood. While the thread between Model Shop and Echo in the Canyon may be tenuous, we aren’t let down. Echo does its job, paying tribute to a truly bohemian movement that will likely never be replicated. •

What Do They Do with All That Poo? by Jane Kurtz

Reviewed by Kristen Morell, Librarian I, Youth Services

For those who are curious about zoo animals and their bodily functions, check out Jane Kurtz’s What Do They Do with All That Poo? I am always excited when I find a great nonfiction book to share with young readers. This factual picture book has it all: catchy rhyming, interesting facts and a wide variety of animals to learn about. Not to mention very bold and colorful illustrations by Allison Black. For those who want a funny book to read, or those who are genuinely curious about animal poo, you will enjoy this great read. This book will share not only what the animal’s poo looks like, but what the zoo does with it all at the end of the day. You’ll learn about elephant, panda, giraffe and hippopotamus poo, to name a few! I think this would make a great read aloud and I would recommend it for preschool and elementary-aged children. ‘ full-time employees, the City’s part-time workers are also seeing a year-over-year increase in pay. The Police Department in particular has 23 part-time employees, the most of any department, to go along with 150 full-time employees.

“Most of the increases that you will see in personnel costs are due to increased workers comp, liability and health care costs,” Lopez said of the Police Department budget. “The other reason for the increase is because we had a minimum wage increase and the Police Department is one of the departments that works with quite a few part-time employees.”

The Recreation and Community Services Department also has a large part-time workforce and saw a budget increase of nearly $2.5 million. It will employ 10 part-time workers along with 13 full-time employees for 2019-2020.

In the Public Works Department, the biggest increase came from street improvements on El Segundo Boulevard, Rosecrans and Prairie avenues, and Imperial Highway. The year-over-year costs jumped from $9.479 million in 2018-2019 to $17.9 million for 2019-2020. The funding will be drawn from the City’s restricted funds. The department also lost funding for CDBG (Community Development and Building Grant), which accounts for a $114,000 increase in personnel costs. The CDBG decrease also hit the Planning Department, which lost almost $130,000 for code enforcement, according to City Manager Arnie Shadbehr.

Monteiro clarified that the City didn’t actually lose the federal CDBG money from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). It was just reallocated to other departments. “They don’t support those programs anymore,” Shadbehr said of the funding loss for code enforcement and graffiti removal. “Just like how they used to support non-profit service groups, they no longer support activities like code enforcement.”

Shadbehr did take time to thank the City Council members for their efforts to grow the City’s revenues. “If you look at the report in 2015-2016, the City only had $5 million in cash -- which was not enough for one month of operating cost,” he said. “Today, you should be proud of this accomplishment by taking prudent measures to be where we are today not only with sufficient money for operating cash, but also for making investments.”

The Council later voted to approve an authorization to allow Shadbehr, Lopez and City Treasurer David Patterson to invest excess funds into a savings account with Bank of the West to continue to grow additional revenue. • improvement from the previous year. The number of dog attacks was 67 in 2017, Postal Service figures show. Statewide, the number is dropping too, from 911 two years ago to 791 last year. Knowing which houses keep dogs has helped the carriers to avoid injuries. The Post Office outfits delivery workers with a handheld device for pet detection.

Knowing a dog is in the vicinity only works so well, though. Many letter carriers say they were bitten from behind as they left the property. They have to be alert at all times when entering or leaving a property. The South Bay carriers will be attired in dog bite awareness shirts on Saturdays for the next three months.

The Postal Service’s technology supports carrier safety in two ways. Handheld scanners used by carriers to confirm customer delivery have a feature that indicates whether a dog lives at the address. The Package Pickup application asks customers to indicate if dogs are at their address when they schedule package pickups, and carriers receive alerts.

“Most dogs will never bite, but it is important to remember that any dog can bite regardless of breed or type,” cautions State Farm Insurance. In 2017, the insurer said it paid $132 million as a result of 3,600 dog-related injury claims. California was the number one state for dog bites last year, according to State Farm. Those claims reached $18.7 million.

A data-reporting group for the insurance industry estimated the average payout for a dog bite claim exceeded $37,000. When a postal employee is bitten, the pet owner is liable for the injuries caused by the animal. The Postal Service can sue to recover medical expenses and damages, including the cost to replace temporarily or permanently a carrier who was attacked. Owners are responsible for the actions of their pets under California law, even if they didn’t have reason to believe a pet was dangerous.

There’s liability for the Postal Service too if it hasn’t done enough to protect employees with warnings, protective measures and warnings about where dogs live on mail routes and whether the animal has been aggressive in the past. L.A.-based law firms advertise themselves as dog bite experts in the law. A January attack on a mail carrier in Whittier highlights the dangers from an aggressive dog getting loose in a neighborhood. The mail carrier was knocked to the ground and bitten on the face by a pit bull mix, according to Whittier news reports. She survived the Jan. 8 attack and was taken to the hospital for treatment of her bite wounds. •

Slow Cooker Golden Split Pea Soup

Provided by Campbell Soup Company

Adding raisins, leeks and cumin to this slow-cooked split pea soup gives it a deliciously different, Persian-inspired flavor. You can use lamb instead of beef for a more traditional dish, but we preferred it with beef because it added richness while still allowing the flavors to meld together.

Ingredients

- 5 cups Swanson® Chicken Broth or Swanson® Organic Chicken Broth or Swanson® Natural Goodness® Chicken Broth
- 2 pounds beef for stew, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 3 leek (white parts only), cut in half lengthwise and sliced
- 1 large onion, chopped (about 1 cup)
- 1 1/2 cups dried yellow split peas

- 2 medium carrot, peeled and diced (about 1 cup)
- 5 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 bay leaf
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1/2 cup golden raisins
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/4cup chopped fresh parsley

Directions

- Step 1: Stir the broth, beef, leeks, onion, split peas, carrots, garlic, bay leaves, oregano, cumin, raisins and lemon juice in a 6-quart slow cooker.
- Step 2: Cover and cook on LOW for 7 to 8 hours or until the beef is fork-tender. Remove the bay leaves. Season to taste. Sprinkle with the parsley before serving. •

Recipe Tips

Easy Substitution Tip: You can substitute lamb for the beef. •
