Recognizing Anti-Bullying Art Contest Winners in Hawthorne

The Anti-Bullying Art Contest winners were recognized in the Hawthorne City Council Chambers. All students in the Hawthorne High School District from grades 6-12 were invited to enter. Each student was challenged to develop a visual image or spoken word that best represents: Friendship, Compassion, Kindness, Respect, Acceptance. Councilmember Haidar Awad presented prize certificates to the winners. Photo: City of Hawthorne.

A Revamped City Council in the Works After Recent Election

By Derrick Deane

In their first meeting since Election Day, the Hawthorne City Council discussed a number of issues including the upcoming Hawthorne Business Expo that will once again be led by Councilmember Olivia Valentine. The Council approved a request from Valentine to allow the event to be declared as City-sponsored. “For the past three years, I have led the team which has produced the Hawthorne Business Expo to showcase Hawthorne businesses and give them the information and tools they need to sustain their viability and help them grow,” Valentine said. “The event is a collaboration between the City of Hawthorne and the Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce and I have been fortunate enough to pull together a team of really talented people in the business community and the City of Hawthorne to work on my committee.” The event is scheduled to take place on Jan. 23, 2019, from 3-7 p.m. at the Hawthorne Memorial Center.

The meeting also marked a turning point for the Council following Election Day. Valentine won back her seat on the dais leading all candidates with 32.95 percent of the total votes. “I want to thank the voters of Hawthorne. I am grateful and humbled that you placed your faith in me and reelected me to a new term as Council member,” Valentine said. “I will continue my ongoing quest which I first articulated in 2011 – to make Hawthorne a destination in the South Bay by increasing opportunities for economic and job growth and expansion of commercial development.”

Meanwhile, a new yet familiar face will join the dais next month. Longtime community activist Alex Monteiro edged out incumbent Angie Reyes English 5,315 votes to 4,959. Jason Gromski rounded out the voting for the City Council seats with 3,746 votes or 17.91 percent. “I want to thank the voters of Hawthorne because it was a tremendous turnout last Tuesday night,” Monteiro said. “I haven’t seen those kinds of numbers in a long time and I’m glad people came out to vote.”

Meanwhile Councilmember Nilo Michelin also won his election bid to join the El Camino College Board of Trustees and will vacate his seat soon. How the City Council plans on filling that vacancy was not discussed at the meeting on Tuesday, but will likely be addressed in the coming months.

Other issues that the Council approved included appointing Valentine as the City’s delegate to the Independent Cities Risk Management Authority governing board and adopting an updated City investment policy. City Treasurer David Patterson spoke briefly on the matter during closing comments, saying, “I’m proud in having my hand in helping update that policy. I suggest we do that regularly and update the language to make sure it’s current.”

Patterson also stated that he would be talking with City Manager Arnie Shadbehr about “creating space between when a check is requested to be paid and when it is actually paid. The mayor’s signature and the treasurer’s signature are automatically printed onto a lot of our checks and so we want to create an opportunity to have more time for approval.”

With the Council not scheduled to meet again until after Thanksgiving, there are a number of food drives and giveaways to families that will be taking place around town. One of those will be Operation Gobble, which English has led for the past 10 years. The event will take place Thursday, Nov. 15 at City Hall. “It’s something that I’ve been working on for 10 years, since I think I was in the City Clerk’s office, and the families that are being helped and assisted with that will include Mayor Pro Tem’s basket giveaways,” English said.

Michelin took time in his closing statement to congratulate Valentine, Monterio and English on well-run, issue-based election campaigns. “Thank you, Angie Reyes English, for running a clean campaign based on the issues and the 4.7 percent increase in the [Hawthorne] economy happened under your watch,” he said.

Del Aire Baptist Church will also participate in a food giveaway from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Lead Pastor John Jefferson, who had run for City Clerk in the recent election, made the announcement at the meeting and also called out Hawthorne Chamber President Patricia Donaldson for an allegedly libelous letter that had circulated through the community. “To pass that letter out to the community is clearly a defamation of character,” Jefferson said of a note stating that he and the church allegedly owed Chris McCullough $21,000. The letter was written by “someone named Patricia” on McCullough’s behalf.

“Del Aire does not owe Chris McCullough $21,000. He never gave $21,000 to Del Aire and that is entirely false,” Betty Jackson, office manager at Del Aire Baptist Church said.

“It was a full-frontal assault to prevent me from becoming City Clerk. I serve this community with integrity, with honesty, I’m upfront and I go to bat for every person. It takes all of us working together to build a stronger community,” Jefferson added.

With Donaldson seated directly behind him while he talked, Jefferson stated that he wanted a written and public apology within 30 days or he would proceed with legal action against Donaldson and the Hawthorne Chamber for defamation of character. “We say that we are a good neighbor city. Good neighbors don’t cast dirt on another neighbor. We hold up and support the weakest of us because that’s how we become stronger,” Jefferson said. •

Queen and Mercury Reign Supreme in Bohemian Rhapsody

By Morgan Rojas
for www.cinemacy.com

I wasn't born when Queen performed at the legendary Live Aid Benefit show in July of 1985. I was barely three years old when front man Freddie Mercury died from AIDS-related symptoms in 1991. But man, did I feel like I was experiencing the mesmerizing talent of the iconic glam rock superstar in person, with a front row seat to one of the greatest moments in musical history. No, I wasn't alive when Queen reigned supreme, but seeing Bohemian Rhapsody in theaters was the next best thing.

Bryan Singer's musical biopic about the enigmatic Farrokh Bulsara, aka Freddie Mercury, is a colorful and whimsical dive into the life of a societal outcast who found confidence and compassion within his chosen family of musicians. As an Indian immigrant who suffered from physical and sexual insecurities, Mercury consciously suppressed his negativity by putting his undeniable talent front and center, and it didn't take long for people to notice. His vocal capabilities were a way to swiftly (my only criticism is at times, the journey seems a little too easy), but the most impressive feat is how mind-blowing the performances are -- especially the concert footage in the last scene. From small stages at local bars to London's Wembley Stadium, Singer recreates the crowd's uncontrollable energy and transforms the audience's theater seats to stadium risers.

It's quite audacious to take on the role of such a well-known individual, and it's another feat to completely become him. Rami Malik nails Mercury's nuanced mannerisms with his flamboyant stage prancing and exaggerated overbite (due to having four extra incisors that made his mouth much larger than most), while also respecting his internal emotional struggle. Malik is magnetic on screen and gives a performance that makes Bohemian Rhapsody what it is: bold, in your face and unforgettable.

Queen was a band of misfits and they were universally embraced because of their authenticity. It was their creative spirits and steadfast dedication to musical exploration and inventive storytelling -- fronted by an enigmatic override his anxiety, as he quickly bonded with his Queen bandmates Brian May (Gwilym Lee), Roger Taylor (Ben Hardy) and John Deacon (Joe Mazzello). He became engaged to the lovely Mary (Lucy Boynton) and went on to have international acclaim with number one hits, and too much money to know what to do with. Talk about Killer Queen...

The band's musical style evolved from anthem rock to opera soliloquies to disco-inspired dance beats to emotional ballads and beyond. Mixing these genres was intentional, as Queen always wrote and performed their songs with the audience in mind. They wanted to create music that made the audience feel like it belonged to them too. They wanted the audience to feel a part of the band. And the audience loved it. But despite seemingly having it all, Mercury was selfish, self-admittedly "hideous," and often alone. While his outward confidence continued to grow with the band's success, behind the curtain his off-stage persona was still an isolated immigrant teenager who longed for authentic, personal connections. It's poignantly ironic that the film's beginning montage is "Somebody to Love" -- which, like every other song, left me with chills.

Singer, who is best known for the X-Men series, portrays Freddie as a flawed but lovable man who may have been blinded by fame. Yet throughout his journey of self-discovery, he ultimately comes to a place of self-acceptance. Singer keeps the story moving along quite lead singer -- that landed them on the top of the charts. Freddie Mercury left absolutely everything he had on the stage and fought until the end. A bittersweet account of a man who dared to be different, Bohemian Rhapsody is a film for the optimists, the music lovers and the champions of the world.

P.S. While this film should definitely be experienced in a theater with surround sound, I also recommend watching it again in the comfort of your own home so you can rock out with no judgment.

Bohemian Rhapsody is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, suggestive material, drug content, and language. 134 minutes. Now playing in theaters. •

By Roz Templin, Library Assistant,
El Segundo Public Library

The Photo Ark is a 25-year documentary project to save species and habitat. National Geographic Fellow and contributor Joel Sartore is the founder and photographer of these beautiful animals in both The Photo Ark and

Birds of the Photo Ark, prime examples of his talent. This ambitious project endeavors to document every species in captivity. When that process is completed, the project will become a record of the animals' existence and hopefully will encourage humans to act to preserve our endangered world.

Actor Harrison Ford provides a foreword to The Photo Ark. Why, you ask? Well, I didn't know that he was the Vice Chair of the Board of Directors for Conservation International either. He writes of his love of nature and also points out that when species disappear, such as pollinators, our crops decline. Predators that are gone disrupt the food chain. The trees of our diminishing rain forests will not provide clean air and fresh water, which causes the imbalance in our climate. We are all joined and need to recognize our "sacred duty" (as ecologist E.O. Wilson is quoted) to preserve life.

Douglas H. Chadwick is a wildlife biologist and journalist for National Geographic. He is also a founding board member of the Vital Ground Foundation, which protects wildlife habitat in the western US and Canada. He writes in his introduction that the world's population doubled between the years of 1970 and 2012, but the total population of large wildlife declined by half. Extinctions are taking place at a rate a thousand times higher than the average in the past. If this continues, one of every three species could vanish at the end of this century. He also gives us a brief background on photographer Joel Sartore who has created this amazing portfolio of the earth's animals in vivid detail.

There are only 12 pages of text because the main draw of these books are the photos. Pages and pages of beautiful portraits of insects, birds, reptiles and mammals... every kind of creature you can think of. You can drink in these pictures for days and then return again to them and find something new. You can definitely relate to these animals. They tug at your heart and gain your respect.

Following the photos are extras that describe how the photographs were made and a helpful index of the animals and where they were photographed.

Birds of the Photo Ark is self-explanatory: its focus is on birds rather than all the animals of the world. Again, there are Joel's exquisite photographs with helpful little essays and bits of information. Bird aficionados will enjoy this book for sure.

The Annenberg Space for Photography in Los Angeles is hosting a special event spotlighting The Photo Ark now through Jan. 13, 2019. A selection of large format prints of Joel's portraits of the animal world are presented along with a documentary film, interactive games and a studio where guests can be photographed with their favorite animal as a backdrop! You can find more information at this website: <https://www.annenbergphotospace.org/exhibits/photo-ark/>

Hawthorne Happenings

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

WILDFIRE RELIEF

And you thought earthquakes were scary? The wildfires that hit all over California last week were horrific. The videos of those fortunate folk who made it out alive are chilling. My brother-in-law, Rev. Donald Jordan, former resident of Hawthorne, is now pastor at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Chico, CA. Chico has become the center point for help and assistance given to the 25,000 displaced residents of Paradise, CA which was totally wiped off the map last Thursday. If you would like to give to families who lost everything in the fires then there is an easy way to do so and you will know for sure that your money will do some good without any administration or overhead costs. Pastor Jordan’s church elders are screening families and confirming that these folks lost their homes and all of their earthly possessions. They are working with over 30 families from Paradise who were connected to the Lutheran church in Paradise that burned down totally along with over 6,000 other structures. The monies given will help these families get back on their feet. Some had no clothes other than what they were wearing. Most had to leave everything behind. If you would like to help financially, go to the church’s website at: redeemerchico.org and you will find a wildfire fund set up. You can either donate using PayPal or send in a check.

100% of all donations will be given directly to these families. I will be traveling up to Chico this Saturday to help put on a pancake breakfast/fundraiser/community support event at Redeemer Lutheran. The smoke will still be heavy. The smoke this past week has been hazardous. We also pray for the So-Cal wildfires. The loss of lives and property this past week has been again a reminder of how precious life is. All of that “stuff” we accumulate and work so hard to obtain can be taken away in a moments notice. Our loved ones and ourselves can be here today but there are no guarantees that we will see tomorrow. Even in times like these, there is so much to be thankful for. Our prayers goes out to all of those who have suffered a loss.

COST PLUS MOVING TO HAWTHORNE

Rumor has it that the Cost Plus store located in El Segundo will be moving to the shopping center at Rosecrans and Isis sometime in early 2019.

WINTER WONDERLAND

Make plans to attend one of the most fun events in Hawthorne all year. The Parks and Recreation and Community Services Department of the City of Hawthorne started something really good last year at Christmas time. The Winter Wonderland had snow, games, gifts, food, fun and a real Santa and Ms. Claus. The turnout for the event was more than expected. This year it most likely will be even bigger. The Winter carnival will be held over at the Memorial Center on December 19th. Mark your calendars now for this super event.

KIWANIS CLUB SENIORS LUNCHEON

The Kiwanis Club of Hawthorne will host their annual Seniors luncheon for all of us older folks on December 7th, Pearl Harbor Day. My oldest daughter’s birthday is on December 6th so I always can remember the next day is the “Day that will live in Euphony”. Just this past week we remembered the end of WWI with the 100th Anniversary observation. The eleventh month, the eleventh day and the eleventh hour. American history is fascinating. We thank all of our vets once again for their service to this great country.

NATIONAL DAY OF THANKSGIVING

The American tradition of Thanksgiving began with a three-day feast that took place in 1621 to celebrate a bountiful harvest. It became cemented as an annual celebration in 1863, when President Lincoln declared a “day of Thanksgiving” in the midst of the Civil War. So, is it a religious holiday or not? I guess it depends on whether you know who you are thanking. If you are not thanking God for the many blessings that we receive in this most affluent country, then who are you thanking? Mother Earth? Are we thanking the farmers who grew the crops and raised the turkeys we eat? If we recognize that all of life and the world we live in is a gift from God then we truly have a day of Thanksgiving. Our thanks should include “everything”, even all of those cold ones that we consume throughout the year. It’s hard for me to imagine life without a cold one and life not knowing that God loves me. This Thanksgiving relax, celebrate, eat up, drink up and thank the one true God for life and everything else that makes our lives so great.

Last Tuesday, students voted too! William Green Elementary students voted for the “Hero of Green School.” After learning about Christopher Columbus, Susan B. NASA Retires Kepler Space Telescope, Passes Planet-Hunting Torch

Based on a Press Release from JPL,
Provided by Bob Eklund

After nine years in deep space collecting data that indicate our sky to be filled with billions of hidden planets -- more planets even than stars -- NASA's Kepler space telescope (<https://www.nasa.gov/kepler>) has run out of fuel needed for further science operations. NASA has decided to retire the spacecraft within its current, safe orbit, away from Earth. Kepler leaves a legacy of more than 2,600 planet discoveries from outside our solar system, many of which could be promising places for life.

"As NASA's first planet-hunting mission, Kepler has wildly exceeded all our expectations and paved the way for our exploration and search for life in the solar system and beyond," said Thomas Zurbuchen, associate administrator of NASA's Science Mission Directorate in Washington. "Not only did it show us how many planets could be out there, it sparked an entirely new and robust field of research that has taken the science community by storm. Its discoveries have shed a new light on our place in the universe, and illuminated the tantalizing mysteries and possibilities among the stars."

Kepler has opened our eyes to the diversity of planets that exist in our galaxy. The most recent analysis of Kepler's discoveries concludes that 20 to 50 percent of the stars visible in the night sky are likely to have

This illustration depicts NASA's exoplanet hunter, the Kepler space telescope. small, possibly rocky, planets similar in size to Earth, and located within the habitable zone of their parent stars. That means they're located at distances from their parent stars where liquid water -- a vital ingredient to life as we know it -- might pool on the planet surface.

The most common size of planet Kepler found doesn't exist in our solar system -- a world between the size of Earth and Neptune

-- and we have much to learn about these planets. Kepler also found nature often produces jam-packed planetary systems, in some cases with so many planets orbiting close to their parent stars that our own inner solar system looks sparse by comparison.

"When we started conceiving this mission 35 years ago we didn't know of a single planet outside our solar system," said the Kepler mission's founding principal investigator,

William Borucki, now retired from NASA's Ames Research Center in California's Silicon Valley. "Now that we know planets are everywhere, Kepler has set us on a new course that's full of promise for future generations to explore our galaxy."

Launched on March 6, 2009, the Kepler space telescope combined cutting-edge techniques in measuring stellar brightness with the largest digital camera outfitted for outer space observations at that time. Originally positioned to stare continuously at 150,000 stars in one star-studded patch of the sky in the constellation Cygnus, Kepler took the first survey of planets in our galaxy and became the agency's first mission to detect Earth-size planets in the habitable zones of their stars.

Before retiring the spacecraft, scientists pushed Kepler to its full potential, successfully completing multiple observation campaigns and downloading valuable science data even after initial warnings of low fuel. The latest data, from Campaign 19, will complement the data from NASA's newest planet hunter, the Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite, launched in April. TESS builds on Kepler's foundation with fresh batches of data in its search of planets orbiting some 200,000 of the brightest and nearest stars to the Earth, worlds that can later be explored for signs of life by missions such as NASA's James Webb Space Telescope. •

"The universe is a pretty big place. If it's just us, seems like an awful waste of space."

Memories, glances, smiles, all engulfed the dirt, solidified by a steel shovel. The funeral, a rather glum event, basked in the aroma of a colorful dirge. Her family and friends consumed themselves with tissues, melting with tears and hollow cries. Of all things to die from, she was not hit by a bus or plagued with a death-defying illness; she choked on bowtie pasta. The vengeful, shaped and dried dough wrapped itself around her windpipe and held on, as though hugging her larynx. However, her family and friends were the least distraught at this solemn ceremony. Her long-time boyfriend Kyle was too distraught for words. He could not fathom how such a vibrant young life was ripped from his clutches, nonetheless by a bowtie-shaped Italian dish.

Arriving back to his humble abode after the funeral, Kyle felt like something was different -- or better yet, wrong. The colors of the wall, fruits, even the books on the shelves glared at him. In an attempt to rid himself of her presence, Kyle abolished anything in the house that had a color. He suffocated himself in a monochrome environment, confining himself to the pleasures that came in black and white.

However, one day while Kyle was returning the library book he checked out every Thursday, he came upon a fantastic revelation -- or so, one came upon him. He walked up the steps to place the book in the return slot when he smelled it. That wondrous, elusive smell captivated him and he forgot what he was just about to do. Frantically running towards the addictive scent, Kyle clutched his book and forgot his monochrome agenda. However, when he arrived he saw a child eating pasta. His heart sank and plummeted to the bottom of his chest. He could not move, he could not speak and he could not stop licking his lips.

Noticing his helplessness and quite awkward stamina, the child ran over to him and called for help. In an attempt to save his life and appease the growing crowd around her, the little girl began shoving pasta down Kyle’s throat. In that moment, he forgot why he abstained from the scrumptious carbohydrate. He chewed and chewed and rejoiced as his taste buds galloped across his tongue, as if a small procession had celebrated in his mouth. Feeling returning back to his limbs, Kyle sprung up and stared. He stared at the girl, he stared at the crowd, and looking in the clear reflection in his phone, he stared at himself. Something was different about him. He had a peculiar expression tattooed on his mouth; it was curved upwards. He was smiling.

From that day forward, Kyle began to live his life. He painted the walls, purchased a vibrantly colored wardrobe and began reading colorful stories. He even opened a noodle restaurant, the name of which served as a constant reminder of what he should never become: an “Impasta...”
