City Making Major Technological Strides With Its Latest Projects

By Brian Simon

Since coming aboard just about a year ago, City of El Segundo Information Systems (IS) Director Charles Mallory has had quite a full plate with a slew of much-needed technology projects on the docket. But it could have been especially overwhelming had it not been for the help of department directors, staff and the City Council. “They prioritized projects before I even arrived,” he said. “The projects were teed up and ready for me to implement.”

Recently, Mallory detailed the accomplishments of his department and the City’s Technology Committee since the beginning of 2018 and emphasized that there “is still a lot of work to do.” Said committee formed just over two years ago and at that time, information technology was still the responsibility of the El Segundo Police Department as the City previously consolidated certain divisions and services when dollars were especially tight. In 2017, the City Council pointed to the need to markedly ramp up its progress in the IT realm and ultimately allocated funding to hire Mallory and form a new department around him. As with other departments, its objectives are to align with the City’s long-range strategic plan that among other goals aims to provide unparalleled customer service; develop as a choice employer and workforce; and support effective, efficient and proactive operations.

Mallory noted that it was vital from the start to devise a project management office and establish a project chart with a rundown of scopes, associated milestones and benchmarks for success. He credited the other directors for their support and guidance during the process and saw the up-front planning as a “foundational item” going forward.

To date, Mallory reported the completion of 21 projects of which 10 came from the Technology Master Plan. The rest were “operational” and resulted in reduced paper usage while increasing overall efficiency. The key list of 10 included online business license renewal, a payment gateway for credit card processing, and the Eden cashing system for the Finance Department; public Internet workstation upgrades at the El Segundo Library; a dispatch pre-alerting system for the El Segundo Fire Department; in-car and body-worn cameras for the El Segundo Police Department; the new CivicRec management software and Aquatics Center technical infrastructure for the Recreation and Parks Department; fiber installation for the IS Department; and email archival plus committee, commission and board City email systems for the City Attorney/City Clerk’s Office.

Large-scale projects currently underway include a revamped City website that will function as a “one-stop shop” with a variety of online services available. Mallory hopes to see that launched within the next nine months. Another major item is a refresh of the City’s entire technology infrastructure, which will involve replacing the existing storage area network, servers and network switching components to bolster processing and storage capacity. Here, Mallory sees improved desktop processing and streamlined business data for analysis and decision report – not to mention greater system security and resiliency. The estimated completion timeline is for this project is the end of 2019.

Mallory and staff also recently received proposals from a group of vendors bidding to revamp the City’s building permitting system. Proposals will be graded according to stringent criteria set forth by the Planning and Building Safety Department with oversight by the Technology Committee. This project will take a little over a year to complete, according to Mallory. When implemented, he said it will “improve the quality of life for local residents and business partners as well as enhance staff efficiency.”

Future projects planned include an update of the Technology and Information Systems Master Plan to further align it with the City’s strategic goals, as well as implementation of city-wide data governance standards to ensure those meet predetermined definitions and quality so staff can best analyze trends and support decision-making. Mallory estimated another 12 to 18 projects will be completed by the middle of next year with about $4 million allocated in the budget. Of course,

Deal Makes Filing Software Free to Millions of Taxpayers This Year

By Rob McCarthy

Tax season opened on Monday with predictions of smaller federal refunds and more questions about standard deductions under the revised tax code and which write-offs are still in play. Taxpayers expecting refunds - a practice known as the "Uncle Sam Savings Plan" - may be disappointed. However, a deal with tax Software companies and the government could soften the blow.

The Internal Revenue Service estimates 100 million U.S. taxpayers can file their federal returns for free this year because of a deal the government has with the leading tax software companies. In exchange for not releasing its own free tax software, the IRS cut a deal with software developers, including TurboTax, to let taxpayers prepare and file their federal taxes at no cost.

The arrangement between the revenue-collection agency and private industry will run through the fall of 2021. The software partners include H&R Block, TurboTax, Credit Karma Tax, TaxAct and FreeTax USA. Uncertainty about the new law laws should boost interest in the free offer.

Taxpayers who claim $66,000 or less of income after deductions for last year are eligible for the free software and filing. Individuals and couples with more than $66,000 of adjusted income are able to prepare, but not electronically file their returns online. Instead, they must download, print and mail their federal returns. This public-private partnership began in 2002 and has some new features.

Active-duty military personnel in the South Bay with incomes of $66,000 or less may use any Free File software product offering a military option, the IRS said last month as it struggled to get ready for the Jan. 28 start of tax season. The government shutdown left the IRS severely shorthanded because thousands of agency and field employees were furloughed, waiting to be called back to work.

The top official at the IRS called the file-for-free choice a great partnership with the software developers. This is the first year taxpayers and their preparers will apply new tax brackets and standard deductions. Past filers may notice additional features while taxpayers who haven't tried Free File should think about it, says IRS Commissioner Chuck Rettig said. "This is a great year for people to consider using this option for preparing their taxes," he believes.

After all, why pay for something that's being given away for nothing? That's the substance of the deal between the IRS and TurboTax and other branded companies that sell their software to taxpayers from late January through April 15. The IRS estimates this freebie offer can be used by 70 percent of taxpayers. Californians have a similar free option from the Franchise Tax Board, too.

Eagles Soaring from Troop 267

By Gregg McMullin

The Boy Scouts of America have been around a long time. The first Eagle Scout, the highest rank in scouting, was earned on Aug. 21, 1912 by Arthur R. Eldred of Oceanside, New York. El Segundo started a chapter of the Boy Scouts of America, Troop 267, and on Nov. 12, 1928, George Eason became the troop's first Eagle Scout. Ninety years later, Troop 267 celebrated its 89th Eagle Scout.

To become an Eagle Scout isn't an easy task. It is estimated that just two percent of all boys entering Boy Scouts advance and achieve the most prestigious rank. Each Eagle Scout will have earned the Scout Rank, Tender Foot, Second Class, First Class, Star Scout, Life Scout and culminate by earning their Eagle Scout rank all before they turn 18 years old.

To imagine that Troop 267 has had 89 scouts earn their Eagle rank is an achievement

"While her husband Tom was the Scoutmaster, Karen developed and held meetings for the 'Path to Eagle' and wrote the book on the process of becoming an Eagle Scout," he said.

Troop 267 welcomed four new Eagle Scouts including Aiden Johnson, David Tinoco, Sam Loose and Arturo "AJ" Rodriguez. Each spent over a 100 hours of time developing and making a unique Eagle project that would benefit different parts of our community and schools. Aiden Johnson knew the need for a storage shed for the El Segundo Little League Challenger Division and built one. David Tinoco built needed shelving for the choir at the El Segundo United Methodist Church. Sam Loose built a trophy case for El Segundo High School that will house the array of trophies and awards the marching band has won. AJ Rodriguez restored the Mychal's Learning Center Garden for children not many other troops can boast. When you consider that this troop resides in a small community like El Segundo, it's even more of an accomplishment. Troop 267 could promote some 15 scouts within 18 months.

Former Scout Master Steve Kigawa believes one reason for so many scouts' advancements is the support from the community and parents. "There is so much parent support to be active with their son's scouting career," he said. "And the community and schools get involved in the Eagle project that benefits everybody."

Current Scoutmaster Eric Kari says the recent success of promoting so many Eagle Scouts of Troop 267 can be traced to former Committee and Camp Chair Karen Walker.

Two others scouts were honored back in October when Brent and Troy Dyckman achieved their Eagle rank. Troy spent some 105 hours developing and working on his Eagle project. The community can view the fruits of Troy's labor each day walking or driving down Main Street and looking at the El Segundo Church Directory. It took Brent 130 hours to develop, supervise and build a garden for the El Segundo Middle School that each student will benefit from going forward.

Look for more Boy Scouts to earn their Eagle rank from one of the four troops in El Segundo and the Eagle projects that will benefit our schools and community. •

Native Son and Honey Boy Prove Riveting Watches at Sundance 2019

By Ryan Rojas

Native Son, directed by Rashid Johnson

Adapted from the classic 1940 novel, Native Son is the story of a young, low-income African American male, who, after securing employment in the world of a wealthy white family, finds himself at the center of an accidental death that puts him in the direct crosshairs of cultural tensions. Adapted from the classic 1940 novel, first-time feature film director Rashid Johnson (along with Pulitzer Prize-winning screenwriter Suzan-Lori Parks) have made this updated version entirely their own. By highlighting the story's underlying social issues and wrapping them up in his polished punk aesthetic, it's a tale that feels as timely now as it must have been then.

It's undeniable that Rashid Johnson is a flourishing visual artist and one who we should all be watching to see what he does next. The biggest obstacle holding Native Son back from being even more impactful is in the jumps in its tonal shifts, which happen when the story plays on and the stakes are raised. The story's pivotal and climactic plot point is surprising, but this hard crank of the

Wiseburn Board Covers Much Ground Despite Brief Meeting

By Duane Plank

Bereft of special presentations, last Thursday evening’s meeting of the Wiseburn School Board may have set a meeting record for brevity, with President JoAnne Kaneda calling the open-session to a close at the 30-minute mark. As is the norm, Board member and administration reports were near the top of the agenda. Dr. Neil Goldman noted that he had met with the teaching and learning advisory council to begin the Wiseburn Unified School District’s strategic planning process. “We spent four hours together and it went well,” he said. “The group was engaged.” Goldman added that “it was really fun to have representatives from every school site intermingling and deliberating what the big pillar contributions, the value-drivers” would be. He mentioned that meetings will be held with different constituent stakeholders that will hopefully align all concerned, implementing their vision for the District.

Wiseburn is in the beginning process of developing the extensive strategic plan, the implementation being led by Goldman. According to District-provided notes, the plan will involve matching all stakeholders’ interests to “create a vision through their feedback, opinions and ideas.” The idea is for the community outreach to provide a “roadmap” that will assist staff to refine, improve and implement new programs that will support all students to become either college- or career-Ready.

Member Nelson Martinez shared that he had recently had the opportunity to attend District sporting events, mentioning the Wiseburn High School soccer and volleyball teams. Vice President/Clerk Roger Banuelos thanked the Dana Middle School staff for hosting a recent special event. Kaneda, in her remarks, commented, “I am both happy and sad that we don’t have a lot of community members here tonight,” which she said she would take away as a positive. “Everything must be going quite well.” She also thanked the gathered Board members and administrators, as well as District staff. “There is a lot to keeping all of our kids educated, our families satisfied, our staff satisfied. I don’t want to take that for granted.”

Chief Business Official David Wilson addressed a recent Board member query regarding the District’s expenditures of so-called “one-time revenues,” and how those expenditures are calculated on the financial balance sheet. He summarized recent expenditures and how the District was spending “carryover” available money accrued from past fiscal years.

Assistant Superintendent, Educational Services Dr. Aileen Harbeck said that 23 staff members were to participate in a Project Lead the Way (PLTW) training session on Jan. 26, with a follow-up session slated for Feb. 9. Harbeck said the instructors were “on fire” to participate in the training sessions. She added that after the second training session, “we will be able to discern how PLTW will look in our elementary schools.”

Wiseburn elementary teachers will participate in the training days to facilitate them in becoming certified PLTW instructors. Grants bestowed by Chevron have allowed local school districts to not only train teachers, but help them guide students in improving in problem-solving skills and critical and creative thinking, as well as bolster their scholastic and outside-the-classroom teamwork and perseverance. “PLTW is such a wonderful program -- I just want all of our students to have the opportunity to be a part of the science-and-technology based program,” Banuelos said.

Superintendent Dr. Blake Silvers then reported out, noting his recent excursion to Ontario to participate in the Governor’s preschool services program. “We got good information,” he said, and noted that he and other District personnel had made the Ontario road trip during the recent spate of inclement weather -- but that it was well worth it and provided “bonding time” for Silvers and Wiseburn attendees.

Silvers also noted that the Wiseburn High gymnasium was now hosting events and “coming to life.” He said he perused a portion of a recent boys varsity basketball game and that the well-attended event created “energy and a buzz in the room that was incredible.” Added member Israel Mora, “It is a beautiful gym.”

Silvers wrapped up his report, stressing how there has been a landscape change in education initiatives in the state and that the District is creating a “slow and steady pathway so that we can make sure that we are addressing the areas that we need to.”

Action items were dealt with next, which included construction change orders, service agreements and construction contingency funding as the District churns forward buttoning up details regarding the high school facilities construction.

The Board also approved a fiscal action item to add another school crossing guard who will be stationed at the intersection of Isis and 135th. The contract, with All City Management Services, will run until June 13 at an additional cost not to exceed $6,253.

There was Board unanimity on the need for another security guard to bolster student and staff safety. Silvers called it “money well-spent.” Martinez echoed the sentiment, saying the expenditure was “well worth it” after noting a recent contentious driving experience that he had near a school site. Kaneda said that “people do pay attention to crossing guards,” while they may not pay as much attention to streetlights or people gathering on a corner ready to cross the street.

In other District news, Cabrillo Principal Lisa Baggio emailed prior to the meeting that her school has some “amazing learning initiatives going on,” including “sustaining our CGI math practices,” as well as again partnering with the Cotsen Foundation, which had donated another $8,000 this year to bolster Wiseburn. Baggio also noted that Cabrillo has ramped up its “small differentiated reading group instruction.” Teachers, she wrote, are garnering and utilizing multiple forms of data and analytical information to formulate lessons that will benefit students at their current reading levels. She said the program is proceeding “wonderfully” and that Cabrillo instructors are looking forward to receiving more training in that subject area.

The next regularly scheduled Wiseburn School Board open meeting is on the docket for Thursday evening, Feb. 21. •

Eagles Stumble Down the Stretch

Story and Photos by Gregg McMullin

The winter sports schedule for the Eagles is winding down this week and wraps up today. The CIF Southern Section playoffs start next week and each of our local teams is poised to advance to the postseason. The boys soccer team has wrapped up an Ocean League title and the girls basketball team needs to sweep this week to win its first league title. The Lady Eagles water polo team is a win away from winning its first Ocean League title in years. Both the boys basketball team and girls soccer team have played well and are both poised to advance to the playoffs too.

Boys Soccer Team Wins Ocean League Title

The Eagles have won their first Ocean League title in three years with their 4-1 win over Beverly Hills and the 3-0 shutout of Culver City. The defending CIF and Southern California Region champs have picked up where they left off last season. They have done it with a solid offense led by Malcolm Holtzmann-Cisse and a stingy defense that has allowed 17 goals, which is the second least amount given up in the CIF-SS Division 3.

Hannah Chang drives for a basket against Culver City.

Beverly Hills was determined not to be the team that would allow the Eagles to win the Ocean League title with a victory. While El Segundo controlled the pace and shots on goal, Norman goalkeeper Raffi Haroutunian continued to turn scoring chances away. Before halftime, Denis Vezina found an opening and slid a shot into the net for a 1-0 lead.

The Eagles’ frustrations with Beverly Hills play drew one player’s yellow card, meaning El Segundo was playing one player down. Sam Twigg ended up scoring three second half goals to give the Eagles their share of the Ocean League title.

Against Culver City the Centaurs dictated the midfield play, but El Segundo’s defense never relented. On the other end, Casey Lund’s scoring opportunity sailed over the cross bar. El Segundo dictated the game on both ends and Holtzmann-Cisse powered a goal in for the Eagles’ first goal in the first half. Midway through the second half, Jack Finders found an opening from a set position to make it 2-0. Ciaran Feeney volleyed a rebound to the back of the net for the Eagles’ final goal to give El Segundo the Ocean League title outright.

El Segundo will enter next week’s CIF Southern Section Division 3 playoffs as one of the top four seeds and will have a first round home game. The Eagles finished up their regular season yesterday against Santa Monica.

Girls Basketball Close to Winning First League Title

The Lady Eagles are on the verge of winning a share of the program’s first Ocean League title. They faced Beverly Hills in a game that was virtually over after the first quarter. The once-proud Beverly Hills team that won a CIF title in 2017 was no match for the Eagles. Jordan Peterson’s three-pointer started the landslide 52-13 victory for the Eagles. El Segundo outscored Beverly Hills 14-0 in the first quarter including Reese Jones’ three-pointer at the buzzer. Jones scored a game-high 16 points.

This was another game of complete unselfish play. Hannah Chang had five assists, including passing up on open shots of her own to feed Jordyn Marconet, Kristin Tsubaki and Bo Takehara. All 12 players had a stat line, meaning head coach John Peterson divided up the playing time.

Facing Culver City on the road for a chance to win the school’s first league title would be a daunting task. The Centaurs have had a brilliant girls basketball program over the years and once had a 42-game Ocean League winning streak. That streak was broken up by the Eagles just over three years ago. But El Segundo would have a miserable third quarter and fall 47-32.

The game was tight throughout the first quarter. Takehara made a steal, went in for a layup and tied the game with her free throw attempt. The teams traded leads in the second quarter until Marina Nimnual’s three-pointer near the end of the quarter gave the Centaurs the lead for good. Culver City outscored the Eagles 13-3 in the third quarter, mostly on turnovers, and El Segundo never recovered.

Poor shooting and too many unforced turnovers that were converted into points did in the Eagles’ chances of wrapping up their league title. El Segundo needed to sweep Lawndale this past Tuesday and Santa Monica today at 6 p.m. at home for a share of the Ocean League title.

Lady Eagles Water Polo Continues Winning Ways

The Lady Eagles are a win away from winning the Ocean League outright. They defeated Culver City 15-6 to up their Ocean League record to 5-0 and 14-4 overall. In a non-league match El Segundo, ranked third in the CIF-SS Division 4, outscored West Torrance (the sixth ranked team in Division 6) 8-5 to keep their 11-game win streak intact.

Playing their first match at the new pool had its advantages against Culver City. Avary Torres, Jenna Olson and Maya Weiss each scored first quarter goals. El Segundo took an 8-1 lead into halftime after Torres scored two more goals and Christina Mullane fired in two goals of her own. Alisa Flores scored from the right side, giving her team the big lead. In the third quarter, Alexa Modry got into the scoring column with her inside lob. Weiss and Olson also added goals as the Eagles extended their lead to 11-6. In the fourth period, the

Home Trends For Using Metals In Home Decor

(BPT) - While trends in home decor often change, there is one constant design feature that continues to shine, literally: metals.

Today, homeowners can find creative ways to incorporate a regal touch that produces a timeless look with modern appeal.

Take the Temperature

A first step in implementing metallic decor is understanding the temperature of the metals. Think of brass, copper and gold as warm, while silver and aluminum are cooler, and cast iron or black metals are neutral. When you couple up a warm metal with a cool metal, you're golden. As a thought starter, step into the kitchen and balance copper or gold fixtures with stainless steel appliances.

Heavy Metal Mixing

It can be daunting to mix metals the right way, but understanding general rules can open the doors to creative approaches. A key tip is to avoid mixing the same color family - such as gold and brass, or nickel and silver. Rather, choose one metal that can serve as the dominant and another to complement it - remembering your temperatures. And, don't be afraid to blend the same metal with different finishings to diversify the theme and pull a room together.

The Gilded Age of Flooring

reveals hints of a glimmering gold stain through its lightly wirebrushed chestnut base. Pairing decorations and fixtures with the sophisticated Achieving the golden look isn't done through metallic finishes alone. One way to bring the shine to a room is with flooring like Lumber Liquidators' Gilded Reserve Chestnut, which backdrop of a unique floor design creates an elegant space that's rich in style.

Add Elements of Luxury

A smart way to use metals is to go for the subtle shine. Simple and strategic touches of metal can bring a big impact, such as in picture frames, drawer pulls or door handles, and sink fixtures. You can also add a bit of regal to a room with accents on furniture or other fabric items such as pillowcases or throws, and kitchenware on display.

A Gold Medal for Metal

Metallics in home decor are as durable and lasting as the elements themselves. Incorporating the shine of brass, the sleek of silvers and the burnish of bronze can give your home an opulent and refined look.

Filing Software

filers and seniors who meet the income criteria are all eligible for Free File. The software supports all the new tax law changes, plus includes the longstanding Earned Income Tax Credit for lower-income working parents with children living at home.

How does it work? Free File is only available at IRS.gov. Start at IRS.gov/freefile, answer a few questions and see if you’re one of the 70 million American taxpayers eligible for a free return. The IRS website matches an individual taxpayer or couple with a brand name software product - at no cost to them. “Generally, taxpayers will have several options from which to choose,” it says.

Taxpayers can browse the various companies and offers before selecting one. The actual federal return will be prepared on the software company’s website. A smartphone app also is available for viewing the file-for-free service at the IRS. Taxpayers can use the IRS2Go app on their phones or tablets.

This latest version of Free File is available through the mid-October deadline for extension filers. Taxpayers can use the software or app to file an extension so they don’t miss the April 15 deadline.

Some consumer protections have been added by the software companies at the direction of the IRS. No confusing buttons pointing taxpayers to for-fee services will appear on the Free File software anymore. The dozen software companies must direct taxpayers who don’t qualify for a free tax preparation back to the IRS website to search other Free Filer offers that may accept them.

No longer can the software companies market fee-based tax preparation services to free filers who return the following year. To prevent up-selling by the online tax services, any email welcoming a free filer must link them to the free service first. No commercial offers can be included in the welcome email, per the IRS.

Despite the longest government shutdown in U.S. history, the IRS promised to issue tax refunds immediately. Refunds will start going out the first week of February and the agency “will be doing everything it can to have a smooth filing season,” Rettig said. Tax-filing season opened a day earlier than last year, he noted. •

Eagles continued their speedy offense and used their passing to score four more goals -- including three by Jenna Olson and one by Christina Grenke. The defense was aggressive and that helped goalie Sophia Caravello, who made seven saves

The Eagles traveled to Santa Monica yesterday to meet the eighth-ranked Vikings. A win by El Segundo would give the Eagles the Ocean League championship. A loss would split the title between the Eagles and Samo. Either way, the Eagles will enter the playoffs next week as the number one team from the Ocean League.

Girls Soccer Team Close to Playoff Berth

The Lady Eagles are in a dogfight in the Ocean League. With two remaining games they would need to sweep their games against Lawndale on Monday and Santa Monica yesterday. If that occurs, they would finish 7-3 and most likely finish in a tie for second place with a good chance of advancing to the CIF playoffs.

They took care of defeating Beverly Hills, the top team on the standings, 2-1. The Eagles got first half goals from sophomore midfielders Natacha Lee and freshman Michaela Turner. In the second half the Eagles had their opportunities, but came away empty. The defense was solid and Liliana Romero came up with seven saves. The Normans' only score came midway through the second half by Yasmin Kamara.

In a pivotal Ocean League match-up against Culver City, the Eagles were shut out 3-0. They fought hard, but came away emptyhanded each time they were in position to score.

Jones and Lynch Hurt Against Culver City

The Eagles' automatic CIF Southern Section 4AA Division playoff berth took a hit when they were swept by Beverly Hills and Culver City. El Segundo had some highlights against Beverly Hills, including scoring the first six points before the Normans rattled off the next 26 points to go on for the win. Elijah Mark muscled a rebound and put back a layup to stop the scoring streak. Leo Cagan, Robby Pederson and Michael Lynch each had three-pointers and the team never gave up throughout the contest.

The Eagles had an opportunity to knock off Culver City, but injuries and playing short-handed was one reason El Segundo fell 63-48. This was a game that was much in doubt until the fourth quarter. Four-year starter Lynch injured his ankle midway through the first quarter and was sidelined for the remainder of the game. Still, the rotation head coach David March utilized was working.

Dylan Aubert's three-pointer gave the Eagles a 10-point lead in the third quarter. Miles Jones' season may have come to an end a couple minutes later. The four-year Eagle starter had just fed Mark on back-to-back jumpers for a 31-22 lead. He then had a layup opportunity go awry when he was pushed from behind, with no call by the official, and he landed awkwardly to cause a severe ankle injury. With both Lynch and Jones sidelined for the remainder of the game, the Centaurs took advantage and went on to outscore the Eagles the rest of the way by 24 points for the win.

The Eagles played Lawndale this past Tuesday and host Santa Monica tonight at 7:30 p.m. A win against either would most likely guarantee a ticket to the postseason dance as well as give the Eagles their most season wins in eight years. •

wheel feels a bit disorienting. The fallout of this moment leads the movie to make a statement that we didn't know it would have to make. Yet for this slight distraction, it would be wrong to not also acknowledge the number of complex ideas, all stylized through Johnson's artistic formats. It's no wonder why HBO bought the film from A24 hours before the movie made its world premiere at the Sundance festival. Native Son will be available to stream on HBO later this year.

Honey Boy, Directed by Alma Har'el

As the movie portrays in its very meta ways, Honey Boy started as a therapeutic tool when Shia LaBeouf was in rehab for alcohol abuse. For an artist so taken by post-modern art performance, how else would that person, who spent his life at the center of the entertainment industry, channel his pain but by confronting issues in the form of writing a screenplay that features his life's story? i chronicles two moments in the life of this Shia-surrogate, Otis. There's the child star (Noah Jupe) and the action star (Lucas Hedges) 10 years later. A life of physically demanding action stunts ("trauma reminders," as his therapist later classifies), mixed with a propensity towards alcohol abuse fueled by familial addiction, Otis inevitably lands in rehab. It's here where, through therapeutic sessions with his probation officer, he is forced to remember his childhood. This is where the film alternates between present and past lives.

As young Otis, Jupe (A Quiet Place) is put into very adult situations -- drugs and booze and older women (FKA Twigs) are very much present at the extended stay motel where he is being raised. Throughout this film, Jupe maintains a strength and innocence that makes his performance both solid and moving. Hedges channels everything from the screenwriter's manic instability to his trademark combat boots. And portraying his former rodeo clown father, Shia as James embodies the character so fully that it's more than just pretending -- he's channeling something real in himself and it's his most lived-in and best role in a while.

What lifts Honey Boy to even greater heights is how the film integrates the vaudeville choreography of James' rodeo clown life. What's seen in some scenes as hokey, in other parts is set to music to create magically mimed moments. Har'el captures this and all of the scenes between young Otis and his father so intimately. But it's LaBeouf who gives himself over so completely to this emotionally gutting process, putting his singularly pained childhood onto the big screen in what feels like an act for emotional salvation. And while he said during the film's Q&A following the screening that this was a "selfish" work, to make a movie for his own personal catharsis, Honey Boy is so raw and risk-taking that it provides a very personal experience for anyone who sees it.

Honey Boy is currently awaiting distribution. •
