City Council Takes First Step to Clean Up Residential Building Code

By Brian Simon

During its Tuesday night meeting, the El Segundo City Council directed staff to take steps to clarify confusing language and diagrams in the single family residential (R-1) zone code, as well as simplify or possibly even eliminate modulation requirements. The action was in response to complaints that the City's development standards that were adopted in 2006 discourage homeowners to build in town.

Last month, Councilmember Marie Fellhauer with her colleagues' support asked staff to compile data on the number of residences and major remodels/additions built in El Segundo over the past 10 years versus the decade prior to the 2006 code amendments that created stricter guidelines. Planning and Building Safety Director Sam Lee reported 70 such homes since 2006 as opposed to 109 from 1996-2006. Pointing to the 2007 housing market crash and recessionary period, he noted that the drop in local building coincided with similar reductions statewide. But looking at floor area ratio (FAR)—the maximum percentage square footage on a lot that a person can build on—Lee said El Segundo's .53 mark is the least allowed compared to other nearby communities. He explained that the City had no FAR limitations before 2006 and showed photos of massive homes with FARs over .70 built just before the ordinance went into effect. The Council's goal at the time, as was also the case in Manhattan Beach and in other cities, was to curb the impacts of mansionization. The process of revamping the code took a year and a half and included 11 public meetings.

Fixing up the language and addressing modulation should only take a few months, Lee said, and would involve coordinating a community workshop to receive input before going to the Planning Commission for recommendations. Mayor Pro Tem Carl Jacobson suggested a joint City Council/Planning Commission meeting on the issue. Although "not a fan of modulation" per se, he hoped to retain elements of it in order to ensure residents don't build walls that block out all their neighbors' sunlight. Jacobson pointed to "people complaining they couldn't get anything to grow in their yards." While sympathetic about potential impacts, Fellhauer argued that modulation puts limits on the styles of homes that can be built in town and takes away from El Segundo's uniqueness. She also called it a case of "government overstepping its bounds," adding that "design is none of our business—it's up to the property owner." Lee earlier explained that there are six elements to the City's modulation requirements that are understandable when read individually, but "a riddle when put together."

After the community and Planning Commission weigh in on the matter, it will go back to Council for a decision. Subsequent public meetings will then consider whether to change FAR. Councilmember Dave Atkinson recused himself from the discussion because he has a residential project in progress.

Also on Tuesday, the Council agreed to extend a few deadlines related to completing the TopGolf due diligence lease agreement. These include allowing six months instead of 60 days to pull records in order to approve over 50 exceptions to the title report; six months instead of 60 days to work with Edison to complete negotiations to extend the licensing agreement for the power line easement that runs through the golf course and behind the driving range; 120 days instead of 60 to wrap up the review of CenterCal and TopGolf's financial strength; and 135 days instead of 90 to submit CenterCal's land use applications. Attorney Mark Hensley said these additional timelines won't delay the project itself.

At the behest of Mayor Suzanne Fuentes and to ensure the Council can take up the issue by the time of its summer strategic planning session, staff will look at the impacts of the changes to the City's ambulance transport fee policy. The study will analyze both ambulance user stats as well as revenues.

The Council also approved an updated Investment Policy—the first such change since 2011. City Treasurer Crista Binder summarized some of the new provisions, which include an annual policy update if there are any material changes; annual policy approval from the Investment Advisory Committee; continuing education requirements for Treasury staff at a minimum of five hours per year; investment tracking against a performance benchmark; and an updated questionnaire that brokers must complete before being added to the City's authorized list. Most importantly, according to Binder, the policy further defines the permitted investments for the City and imposes restrictions for some categories as well as listing non-permitted investments. "We don't want to be over-concentrated in a single asset," Binder explained of the importance of diversification.

In a consent agenda item pulled by Mayor Fuentes, the Council approved a contract with Excelsior Elevator to complete the long-awaited refurbishment of the Joslyn Center Elevator. Installed in 1980, it last underwent an update in 1997. While not a replacement, the elevator

ESPD Shoulder Patch

By Eric Ramos

The El Segundo Police Departments shoulder patch is a unique piece of the uniform that police employees and volunteers wear on a daily basis, but don't take for granted.

The shoulder patch portrays many attributes associated with the City of El Segundo. The airplane represents the proximity to the Los Angeles International Airport. The smoke stacks depict the Chevron El Segundo Refinery, which was established in 1911. The refinery was Chevron's second on the West Coast, hence the name: El Segundo.

The house reflects the importance of the residential community and its support for strong family values. The water represents the means something.

"The patch signifies I belong to a family," Garcia said. "We have an added responsibility. We are representing every person in the city."

Each one of the four stars on the patch and on the City Seal represent an El Segundo Police Officer who has lost his life in the line of duty.

July 22, 1957, at the intersection of Rosecrans Avenue and Sepulveda Boulevard, El Segundo Police Officers Richard Phillips and Milton Curtis observed a car run the red light. Officer Curtis and Officer Phillips pursued the vehicle until the suspect pulled over near Pacific Avenue, a semi-rural road fringed with trees, fields and a large oil refinery.

One of the two additional officers asked if

Pacific Ocean to illustrate the fine beach and temperate Southern California climate.

Chief of Police Mitch Tavera said he wears the patch with great pride and dignity. It gives respect and acknowledgement to the officers who died in the line of duty.

"It's important to honor those before us," Tavera said. "The patch lets you know what El Segundo is about in a unique, visual way."

In recruitment, the ESPD use the uniform, not just the patch.

"We believe in honor, work ethic, bravery and a commitment to the citizens and the community," Tavera said.

Most importantly, the gold stars represent the four El Segundo Police Officers who have given their lives in the line of duty.

Officers like Lieutenant Raymond Garcia are proud of the patch. Garcia said it's unique for the City of El Segundo. The patch everything was "okay here?" Officer Phillips was standing in front of the suspect while Officer Curtis questioned him.

"We're fine," Curtis said as he waved a citation in the air he had obviously written. "No problem. Just a red light violation." Unbeknownst to the officers, the car was, in fact, stolen and the suspect had just raped a teenage girl after holding two couples at gunpoint about five miles from their current location.

Satisfied that Officers Phillips and Curtis had the situation under control, the second patrol car left the scene. Within a minute and a half later the suspect produced a firearm and shot Officer Phillips several times in the back as he walked back toward his squad car. In the midst of the commotion, Officer Phillips was able to return fire. One bullet struck the suspect in the back, the second and third hit the suspect's

New Leadership At St. Anthony School

Thank you for the 24Mar2016 article, "New Leadership, St. Anthony School, Families Seek Alternatives", by Cristian Vasquez. Although a small institution St. Anthony School became a fine pre, elementary and middle school - the result of enthusiastic administrators, teachers, staff and families embracing Judea-Christian values throughout.

It's important to emphasize since Parish Pastor, Father Robert Victoria, arrived eight years ago conflicts in management emerged - the school-community's collaborative inclusive merit-base style versus pastor's dismissive, authoritative cronyism style. Families' discontent isn't exclusively for the new principal, rather the cumulative mismanagement of Victoria. Last Summer Victoria appointed his personal friend, Sylvia Kawjaree, to principal without consideration of qualifications nor peer review. Kawjaree is merely the pastor's conduit making the ultimate responsibility for school failings directly attributable to Victoria. Kawjaree is a symptom, not the cause.

Pastor and principal were amply cautioned pious aloof management wouldn't succeed. As an immediate result of Victoria's mandates, and principal's implementations thereof, families began leaving. Suddenly, our flourishing school-community was jeopardized as valued teachers, staff and families left. Still more families seek alternatives for next year, including legacy families like ours.

The archdiocese won't intervene stating only «They'll have to work things out on their own.» Victoria, Kawjaree and Deacon Bob Miller of the archdiocese threatened to expel our son were I to further raise concerns. But nothing will improve without leadership of humility, character and integrity. Victoria and Kawjaree should both resign so St. Anthony can restore their exceptional school.

— Edward Grant

C.A.V.E. people

Why is it the C.A.V.E. people always come out in droves during elections? These are the Citizens Against Virtually Everything. I find it comical how the same three or four people always write negative letters to the editor, particularly Mike Robbins and Marianne Fong (who are the same person). These are the same people who slam candidates for taking a stand and trying to make a difference in our town. The same people who think everything should be free. The same people who don't want anything to ever get better in El Segundo. As a young woman living in El Segundo I want this city to be the best it can be. I am voting for the two candidates which will represent me best. Those are Drew Boyles and Marie Fellhauer. They are the most dynamic, reasonable, and qualified candidates on the ballot.

— Jenica Brigham

Stood Out Among Others

I am a homeowner and have children who attend El Segundo schools. I have been following this election very closely because I care about the direction of our city. I have listened to both public candidate forums, and studied all the issues at hand. From what I've seen, there is one candidate who has stood out among the others due to her intellect, humility, knowledge of the issues, and vision. Marie Fellhauer is exactly what El Segundo needs. She had provided a breath of fresh air on the council for the last 4 years and she has demonstrated clear leadership. She sincerely cares about El Segundo and the future of our beloved city. She has my vote for sure.

— Ryan Quinnan

Gouging Hotels

To my dismay, I see the City Council has come back to us yet again with the immoral proposition of gouging hotel customers for the crime of not being us. The argument in favor is based on the bromide "every one else is doing it." Anything higher than the sales tax rate is just plain wrong and I hope we have the collective wisdom to vote it down again. Instead of gouging visitors, we could always vote out the incumbents to keep any one from accumulating two terms and their associated health insurance for life benefit. This could save substantial funds for lifetime health care insurance of "retired" council members.

— Kip Haggerty

No Big Deal

I do not understand how any resident of El Segundo can be against the increase in the transient occupancy tax (TOT). This tax is paid by visitors to our area who are mostly business people and tourists. The tax is usually paid by the company for which a business person works, and tourists probably don't care about what the TOT rate is.. The tax increase on a $200 room would be $8.00 per night. So at that room rate a visiting tourist would pay $224.00 per night at 12% rather than $216.00 per night at 8%. I say, big deal. If they want to pay only $220.00 per night at 10% they can go stay in Manhattan Beach. Personally I never know what the TOT is when I book a hotel room when traveling

Documentary Fastball Explains the Science Behind the Perfect Pitch

By Jasper Bernbaum
for www.Cinemacy.com

About halfway through the documentary Fastball, the phenomenon of the ‘rising fastball,’ is discussed. It’s an occurrence that is just as it sounds – a ball thrown so hard that — as many hitters claim — ascends, ever so slightly, as it crosses the plate. While interviewing the former all-time home run king Hank Aaron, director Jonathan Hock asserts that “scientists say it can’t happen.” Before he can even finish, Aaron shakes his head and grins: “I don’t think they ever played baseball.”

Steve Dalkowski, a minor-league pitcher known as White Lightning, in Fastball. Courtesy of Gravitas Ventures.

Such is the heart of what make baseball such a romantic game. The relationship between the pathos of baseball lore and the logos of its statistic-obsessed present makes it arguably the most fascinating sport in the world. Narrated by baseball film all-star Kevin Costner (for those – pun intended – keeping score, he’s carried out a – pun also intended – triple play with Bull Durham, Field of Dreams, and For the Love of the Game), Fastball explores this increasingly complex dichotomy through one of the most simple, yet terrorizing aspects of the game, the fastball pitch.

Off the bat (pun not intended), director Jonathan Hock levies himself a classicist for the game. The film is mostly populated with 20th-century greats such as Nolan Ryan, Joe Morgan, Rich “Goose” Gossage, Mike Schmidt, Al Kaline, etc., reflecting on the nastiest fastballs they have faced and the pitchers who threw them. Some contemporary stars such as Justin Verlander, David Price and Brandon Phillips appear in the mix as well, giving the film an effective sense of history and continuing significance. It’s close to being baseball’s version of The Aristocrats, the controversial 2005 documentary that featured 100+ comedic legends reminiscing about who delivers the funniest rendition of the infamous titular joke. In a similar fashion, Fastball’s big question is who threw the fastest pitch in baseball history. Using modern science and applying it to the lore of the pre-radar gun days, the film eventually determines who really did throw the fastest pitch in history. For fans, it shouldn’t come as a surprise. But, in a sense, the film could really care less about the answer to that question. The climactic reveal is perhaps one of the tamer moments of the entire runtime. Instead, Hock’s has crafted a series of fascinating – if not very scatterbrained – diversions exploring the mythology of baseball’s more interesting players.

A brief section of Cardinals legend Bob Gibson and his 1968 season – widely considered one of, if not the best, seasons ever on the mound – dives into the psychology of athletic dominance. Both eloquent and honest in his own screen time, he is presented as a complicated figure that deserves his own feature-length documentary. Nolan Ryan, the all-time strikeouts leader, also discusses similar philosophies ever too briefly. This leads to perhaps Fastball’s biggest downside. It’s erratic nature, jumping back and forth through multiple baseball eras, leaves the thought that perhaps it should be expanded into something larger. The question of who really did throw the fastest pitch is an interesting one, but in the end, it is the complicated stories of Gibson, Nolan, Steve Dalkowski – a fastballer who never reached the majors – and other players that stick and deserve more time than the brief chapters they are given here.

Hock does bring in some fascinating science into the film as well. Both cognitive and physics experts add some compelling technical explanations to the psychology of the game. Segment attempting to debunk the aforementioned ‘rising fastball’ phenomenon prove quite interesting and the mathematics used to calculate and adjust the fastest pitches of Walter Johnson, Bob Feller, Nolan Ryan and Aroldis Chapman are equally as neat. While these statistics are engaging, it could feel a little alienating for anybody outside of the ESPN Classic crowd, who is not a deep fan of the intricacies of the sport. Thus, in a roundabout way, Fastball proves that the magic of the game is more than numbers. The sport is perhaps one of the timeless narratives in sport history. •

The Super Bowl High School Honor Roll celebrates the high schools and communities that have contributed to Super Bowl history. This platform is designed to link the past 49 Super Bowls with this year's game and honor the high schools and communities that have positively impacted the game. More than 2,000 schools and nearly 3,000 individuals will be honored through this program.

Super Bowl High School Honor Roll schools will receive a commemorative Golden Football produced by Wilson for every player or head coach who graduated from the high school

Kings Ready for Another Playoff Push

By Adam Serrao

The Los Angeles Kings may have clinched a playoff berth this season, but that doesn't mean that the team is necessarily firing on all cylinders. The Kings have had a tremendous year so far this season, even setting the franchise record for most regular season wins. Now that this is their year to take home the Stanley Cup again, though, Darryl Sutter, Jonathan Quick and company need to iron out a few kinks first. With a 3-0 win over the Calgary Flames last Thursday night at the Staples Center, the Kings not only won the game, but also earned two points in the standings and tied their franchise record for wins. A 3-2 loss to the Dallas Stars in their very next game, though, showed that if the Kings want the Cup, they're going to have to flip the switch yet again and somehow be better than even the league's best teams.

Losing to the Dallas Stars is nothing to be extremely disappointed about. At 48-22-9, the Stars are one of the league's best teams and have the NHL's most prolific offense. The Stars own the league's top rate of 3.26 goals scored per game and put together two scores late in the game versus the Kings to notch a 3-2 victory over Quick and company at the Staples Center. "When the time came down for [the Stars] to make a play and execute, get some gritty goals, they did," Kings defenseman Rob Scuderi said. With only four games remaining on the schedule following their loss to Dallas, the Kings must start getting gritty, making plays, and executing in their own right.

After clinching their playoff berth with a 2-1 victory over the Boston Bruins, the Kings went on to lose three games in a row while only producing four total goals in those three games. Those three losses don't necessarily suggest that there's something fundamentally wrong with the Kings and their offense, but with first place in the Pacific Division and a top seed in the Western Conference at stake, three-game losing streaks and things of a like kind simply can't happen for Los Angeles. "We've worked for six months and we've been in a spot," coach Sutter said of his team. "And we've been in and out of 1-2-3 the whole time. Might as well finish strong and see if you can be 1."

If the Kings want to stay at 1, they're going to have to fend off the likes of the Anaheim Ducks and the San Jose Sharks in what is now the last week of regular season play in the NHL. Fortunately for Los Angeles, their schedule isn't too daunting, to say the least. Matchups with the Calgary Flames and Winnipeg Jets to end the season are split by only one key matchup with the Ducks that could have postseason implications should everything move in Anaheim's favor this week. The Kings, however, have the ball in their court or, the puck on their ice, if you will, and have the distinct opportunity to roll into the playoffs with momentum on their side. "We want to finish as high as we can," Scuderi said of his team's final regular season See Kings, page 14

Everyone knows that congestion is bad, but we really can improve the way we get around. Right now, Metro is easing traffic by delivering 1.4 million rides each day. And we're planning future relief all over LA County by adding more bus and rail service, fixing freeway bottlenecks, funding local road improvements and updating our strategic transportation vision. We've come a long way in a short amount of time, but we still have so much more to do. Let's get it done, together. Learn more about The Plan at metro.net/theplan.

until I get the bill, and I really don't care if it's 8% or 12%. Vote Yes on Measure B.

– John Johnson

Scared of Change and Progress?

I just read the most recent letters to the editor and I was motivated by the residents, who choose to use this forum to make vicious attacks without any real facts. It is ironic that less than two weeks before the election all of the venom finds print. There must be something going on behind the scene. It seems to me a group of people who must share a common theme have banded together and are lashing out. They must be scared of something. I think that something is change and progression. I think Mayor Fuentes is scared and I think her publicly sending out an "urgent gram" endorsing a candidate is desperate (this is a fact, the mailer came to my house). Clearly she is scared of certain candidates getting elected. This election is about the direction of El Segundo. The old guard wants nothing to change. Those of us who love this city are looking for fresh ideas, a safe city, a vibrant city, and strong economic development. I want people on the council who are looking out for the best interests of our residents and are not afraid to speak their mind. Listen to the candidate forums and read all of the Herald published questions. Two candidates stand out. I am voting for Marie Fellhauer and Drew Boyles.

– Stacy Oki

Pensions or Potholes?

So the presidents of the El Segundo Police PAC and the El Segundo Fire Fighters PAC (political action committees) have join forces and financial resources, around $19,000 so far, to tell you who should be the next representatives of the City El Segundo and what tax measures (B) we should impose on others. Approximately 12 members of the police department and not one single firefighter live in our city. In fact over 60% of the entire fire department don't even live in Los Angeles County, some traveling 50, 75, 100 miles, one way, to El Segundo. Why are they so involved in El Segundo politics?

They want council members elected who will continue their raises, special compensation, and pensions. To them a 30 to 40 thousand investment will return twenty fold to their unions, they also are spending thousands to manipulate you into voting yes on Measure B so the city can collect millions from visitors to our city. The unions claim these millions won't go to them and they wouldn't lie, it will go into the "general fund", but payroll and pensions have to be paid before potholes and volleyballs, guess where the new millions will go first. During political campaigning you can tell the truth, half-truth or flat out lies and by law you won't be held accountable. It's play for play, don't be swayed by pretty flyers and proposed promises, it's our city, vote for what's best for our city.

– Marc Renner

RV Parking Suggestion

In a recent issue of the El Segundo Herald one of the candidates for city council mentions town hall meetings, community based committees and surveys to address the eyesore of RV parking in our neighborhoods. I feel none of this is warranted. There is a very simple solution - require a permit for overnight parking of any RV. Right now any vehicle can park for three days in the same spot without being ticketed. This just creates a game of cat and mouse for people who live in these RV's. I have personally watched as the same RV has moved in circles every couple of days around one block for the past two months. Requiring a permit would mean that any RV parked overnight could be ticketed without the three-day wait. I feel this would do more to discourage people living on our streets than any committee or survey. You don't even have to charge for the permit. The permit would be issued upon proof of residency so only El Segundo resident could pull a permit be it for themselves or others on their behalf. If a family or friend is visiting, any resident could get them a permit for the time they would need. For those without proof of El Segundo residency a permit could not be applied for. It's not that I am unsympathetic to the homeless but anybody with a roof over their head, a living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom and bathroom (be it on wheels) is not what I would consider homeless. Please don't let us become the next Venice.

Tom Ezzo

Why the Vigorous and Expensive Campaign?

Why, may I ask, are the Police and Fire personal conducting such a vigorous and expensive campaign to unseat the two El Segundo Council incumbents? Could it be that in negotiations for a new contract they won't cave in to their union demands? Do not the most of us, citizens of El Segundo, feel that Police and Fire's total compensation packages are already more than reasonable? Is it not now more than they were promised at the start? Dave Atkinson knows the history and has a businessman's vision for the future of the City of El Segundo.

We entrust our special little treasure, El Segundo, to our City Council. Should the money and effort of the Police and Fire, mostly non citizens of our town, influence the election of our City Council?

– Fred Gherardi , (40 year resident of El Segundo)

Vote for Marie Fellhauer

In last week's Herald, letters from Robbins/Fong and Debbie Hayman amounted to a smear campaign. Note that Hayman is married to Lou Kutil, Don Brann's campaign manager. The letters were negative and misleading so I'd like to share the reasons I'm voting for Marie Fellhauer.

Marie is not a tax and spend politician. She has worked to balance our City's budget by fighting to reign in our unsustainable pension system. Marie is working to increase El Segundo's share of the property tax levy, something no one else on Council is doing. Marie supports responsible economic development. When Top Golf was first proposed, Marie didn't rush to support or oppose. She flew to Houston on her own dime to see Top Golf for herself. Marie does not blindly support tax hikes but does support Measure B where every penny will stay local. As a lifelong resident, Marie understands the complicated dynamics of El Segundo.

We can be a business friendly City without going broke. There was no "Shakedown of Chevron." Marie helped negotiate a fair tax deal with Chevron that is more in line with what other refineries pay. The ToT has been significantly lower than surrounding areas for decades. It's time to fix that too.

If Brann is elected, he will replace Jacobson in the voting block with Fuentes and Dugan and the status quo will remain. If you want a strong advocate to lead El Segundo into the future, vote for Marie Fellhauer.

– Beth Schodorf

Who Does This Benefit Most?

Regarding our building code, some history is useful. When implemented, the economy was booming and houses were being demolished and replaced at a rapid pace. These houses, built and sold on spec, filled lots from easement to easement, with massive walls that eliminated light and air from their neighbors. In some cases, you can see the exact same house in different locations. I served on the Council at the time, and the discussion was initiated by citizens concerned with mansionization and the changing character of our city. We held forums with realtors, builders, and residents. It was a long process, full of compromises. Is the code perfect? Nothing is. But a few points: There is an uptick of building in our city. Much of it driven by our residents. Is there as much spec building as Manhattan Beach? A better question is, "should there be?" I was struck by Councilwoman Fellhauer's comment: "Government's job isn't to tell people what their homes should look like". Actually, the government sets many standards on our homes. You can't build a five story house, or too close to your neighbor. Let's remember that our housing stock is a precious resource, not just a business

Solar Storms Ignite X-Ray “Northern Lights” on Jupiter

By Bob Eklund

Solar storms are triggering X-ray auroras on Jupiter that are about eight times brighter than normal over a large area of the planet and hundreds of times more energetic than Earth’s “northern lights,” according to a new study using data from NASA’s Chandra X-ray Observatory. This result is the first time that Jupiter’s auroras have been studied in X-ray light when a giant solar storm arrived at the planet.

The Sun constantly ejects streams of particles into space in the solar wind. Sometimes, giant storms, known as coronal mass ejections (CMEs), erupt and the solar winds become much stronger. These events compress Jupiter’s magnetosphere, the region of space controlled by Jupiter’s magnetic field, shifting its boundary with the solar wind inward by more than a million miles. This new study found that the interaction at the boundary triggers the X-rays in Jupiter’s auroras, which cover an area bigger than the surface of the Earth.

A series of composite images show Jupiter and its aurora during and after a CME’s arrival at Jupiter in October 2011. In these images, X-ray data from Chandra (purple) have been overlaid on an optical image from the Hubble Space Telescope. The left-hand panel reveals the X-ray activity when the CME reached Jupiter, and the right-hand side is the view two days later after the CME subsided.

The impact of the CME on Jupiter’s aurora was tracked by monitoring the X-rays emitted during two 11-hour observations. The scientists used that data to pinpoint the source of the X-ray activity and identify areas to investigate further.

The dramatic findings complement NASA’s Juno mission this summer which aims to understand the relationship between the two biggest structures in the solar system—the region of space controlled by Jupiter’s magnetic field (i.e., its magnetosphere) and the region controlled by the solar wind.

“There’s a constant power struggle between the solar wind and Jupiter’s magnetosphere,” explained William Dunn, lead author and PhD student at University College London’s Mullard Space Science Laboratory “We want to understand this interaction and what effect it has on the planet. By studying how the aurora changes, we can discover more about the region of space controlled by Jupiter’s magnetic field, and if or how this is influenced by the Sun. Understanding this relationship is important for the countless magnetic objects across the galaxy, including exoplanets, brown dwarfs and neutron stars.”

NASA’s Juno spacecraft, launched in 2011, will investigate Jupiter’s relationship with the Sun and the solar wind by studying its magnetic field, magnetosphere and aurora. The UCL team hopes to find out how the X-rays form by collecting complementary data using the European Space Agency’s X-ray space observatory, XMM-Newton, and NASA’s Chandra X-ray observatory.

“Comparing new findings from Jupiter with what is already known for Earth will help explain how space weather is driven by the solar wind interacting with Earth’s magnetosphere,” said Professor Graziella Branduardi-Raymont, supervisor of the study at UCL. “New insights into how Jupiter’s atmosphere is influenced by the Sun will help us characterize the atmospheres of exoplanets, giving us clues about whether a planet is likely to support life as we know it.” • stolen vehicle. The suspect then walked over to Officer Curtis and shot him three times at point blank range as he sat in the squad car alerting dispatch of the shooting.

Hundreds of police officers and citizens from El Segundo and the neighboring communities scoured the area all night. They found the stolen car, but there was no sign of the suspect. The killer had escaped capture.

Twenty-eight-year-old Officer Richard Phillips and his twenty-five-year-old partner, Officer Milton Curtis, were both happily married with a total of five children between them at the time of their brutal murders.

Over 46 years later, on September 2002, a false lead encouraged investigators to enter the prints taken at the crime scene in 1957 into the Federal Bureau of Investigation’s fingerprint database. In a matter of minutes the print led investigators to Gerald F. Mason, who was arrested for burglary in 1956 in South Carolina. It was the only time he had ever been arrested, and it was the only record they had on file. On January 29, 2003, Gerald F. Mason was arrested for the murders of El Segundo Police Officers Richard Phillips and Milton Curtis. Mason still had the scar from the wounds he sustained from Officer Phillips before he died. Mason later plead guilty in a Los Angeles County court and was sentenced to two consecutive life terms.

On June 13, 1949, 46-year old Alexander Clarence Haddock, a Police Officer with 14 years of service with the El Segundo Police Department, responded to a burglary alarm at El Segundo High School. When he arrived on scene, he found a burglar with whom Officer Haddock became engaged in a gun battle. Officer Haddock killed the suspect but sustained a bullet wound to his right leg. Doctors were unable to remove the bullet. On Oct. 3, 1950, Police Officer Alexander C. Haddock died due to complications of the injury he sustained in the gun battle over one year earlier.

On Nov. 17, 1935, El Segundo Police Officer Robert Grow was struck and killed by an automobile while directing traffic at Mariposa Avenue and Sepulveda Boulevard. Officer Grow had only been with the El Segundo Police Department for five months at the time of his death.

To wear the shoulder patch “means something,” Garcia said.

The shoulder patch is much more than a piece of the uniform. It represents the profession, the city and people.

“For us, it’s personal,” Garcia said. “We have high standards for a reason. It means there’s a difference between what we do and what other agencies do.” • will be like-new with upgraded controllers and mechanical features. Only the previous tank unit will stay put. Price tag for the work is $85,582 plus a contingency of $9,418.

At the beginning of the meeting, the Council proclaimed April as DMV/Donate Life California Month in El Segundo as part of encouraging citizens to check “yes” as organ donors when applying for or renewing their driver’s license or ID cards. A second proclamation recognized April as Sexual Assault Awareness Month and the 27th as Denim Day—urging everyone to wear jeans on that date to communicate the message that there is “no excuse and never an invitation to rape.” According to statistics, someone is assaulted in America every two minutes—with one in six women raped during their lifetime. Youths under 18 account for about 44% of all reported cases.

In a presentation, Youth Services Librarian Sindee Pickens announced that April 11-17 is National Library Week—marking a national observance that began in 1958. This year’s theme is “Libraries Transform.” She noted that the El Segundo Public Library’s Adult Services Division will host the South Bay 1 Stop Business and Career Center on Wednesday, April 13 from noon to 1 p.m. for a free workshop on resume preparation and job searching. That afternoon, the Children’s Division will screen a special Family Movie Afternoon at 3 p.m. in the Friends of the Library Meeting Room. Registration for the Summer Reading Program kicks off June 9, while the Annual Author Fair is set for June 12 from 11:30-4:30 with the theme “Express Yourself... Through Writing. Art. Music.”

Finally, Tuesday’s meeting unveiled the recently renovated City Council Chambers featuring new seating and carpeting, among other aesthetic revamps. The public communications podium moved to the center of the room, while the City Manager and City Clerk switched spots from their previous sides. •

Wowser Schnauzers

Donald

We are looking for volunteers to help with our pet adoption fairs which are held every Saturday at the Petco located at 537 N. Pacific Coast Highway Redondo Beach 90277, from noon-3:30 p.m. If you are interested in volunteering and can commit to at least one Saturday a month, please contact us at info@msfr.org. You can also visit all of our Miniature Schnauzers & Friends rescues at the adoption fair or check out our website, www.msfr.org. If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability you can email us at info@msfr.org. Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one!

Hi there, my name is Donald and I'm a lovable, 17-pound, 5-year-old, male purebred Miniature Schnauzer who has had a pretty eventful life. One night I was out for a stroll and the next thing I knew I was in a LA county shelter. I was told that I ended up there after sustaining some nasty injuries when a car hit me. Since I was a stray and injured I wasn't going to be adopted so I was very lucky to be rescued by the MSFR folks. They took me to their Vet who took x-rays and found that that I had several fractures in my pelvis. The surgery, on Feb. 10, to repair my pelvis required a plate and six screws. I have completely recovered from surgery and am now on a mission to find my forever home. My visit to the groomer has transformed me into quite a good-looking guy. My eyes and my natural tail are my best features but my sweet temperament is what will win you over. If you are interested in Donald, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

If you're looking for a quiet girl, who has good manners and gets along with everyone, just come to adoptions and ask for Lainey! I'm a 6-year old, female purebred Miniature Schnauzer. I was rescued from an inland empire shelter after the adoption coordinator contacted the MSFR folks inquiring if they would rescue me. I had a hernia that needed surgery and the shelter knew my best chance to find a forever home was to be rescued. My hernia was repaired and I had a dental resulting in the extraction of four teeth. I have a beautiful, natural tail and even though I'm a "full figured" gal, 21-pounds, there's just more of me to love. I'm looking for someone to love me as much as I would love them back. If you are interested in Lainey, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

The call me Gibson and I am a most unique looking little guy. I'm a 2-year old, male "Schnoodle" (Schnauzer/Poodle) mix.

Lorena

Folks think that the “mix” could be a touch of Lhasa Apso but we really don’t know for certain. Whatever my questionable heritage is everyone thinks I’m cute as a button with a personality to match. I was rescued from an LA county shelter where they called me a stray. I’m an absolute delight to have around and I’m considered a real treasure. I’m super sweet and I get along splendidly with everyone. I have to admit that I am a bit on the shy side and a tad submissive but when you’re only 13 pounds, I call that being cautious. If you are interested in Gibson, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

My name is Lorena and I'm a friendly, easy-going, female Pit mix. I was rescued from a high-kill Inland shelter where I was called a stray. The reality is that I got lost trying to run away from all of the noise on July 4 and never made it home. The folks at the shelter thought I could be about 5 years old but my foster Mom said I'm closer to 3-years old. I am a good-natured gal and I'm very teachable because I want so much to please. I'm pretty smart and have learned some great manners. I'm crate trained, well behaved in both the house and the car and I'm super great on the leash. I would be happiest in a home as an only dog. I know that I will make an excellent companion and bring years of happiness to the family who is lucky enough to adopt me! If you have questions or are interested in Lorena, please email emread@verizon.net. •

Happy Tails

A "Very Special Happy Tails" for Tracey!

Often times our rescues come to us, via shelters, after being abandoned by their owners when the dogs become old and/or are in failing health. While there are plenty of these heartless, contemptible people in the world, there are also some who are the exact opposite. That's why this is a Very Special Happy Tails for a dog who, despite a terminal medical problem, captured the hearts and now the home of some truly wonderful people.

Tracey is our 6-year-old boy who was rescued in November. We removed a huge melanoma tumor on his back but because of narrow margins, there were no guarantees the cancer wouldn't reoccur. Follow up x-rays and test results continued to provide good news and kept us hopeful. A few weeks ago all that changed when nodules appeared and the biopsy showed that the cancer was back and had spread. There isn't anything medically we can do for this little guy because it's so aggressive but he's still very active and happy.

His adopters have been in constant communication with MSFR since they first spotted Tracey on our website. They immediately wanted Tracey and even after hearing the latest news, nothing could change their minds. These folks have huge hearts, generous spirits and a never-ending compassion for these unwanted dogs. They are previous adopters and most, five of the six, dogs they adopted have been seniors or special needs, who probably never would have been adopted, adored and loved beyond belief for the remainder of their lives. These extraordinary people know that he's in "hospice" care and may only have 6-12 months left but they are determined to make those the best years of his life. In addition to his Mom and Dad, Tracey joins MSFR 2012 alumni Atticus (now named Buddy).

Being in rescue, you meet some despicable, selfish, uncompassionate people but then when you meet the ones like Tracey's adopters – well, it restores your faith in humanity. •

Beathard

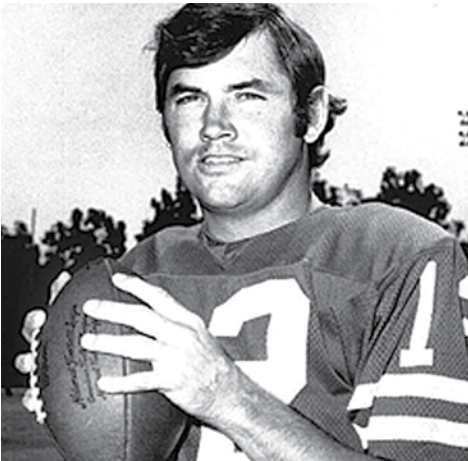

1963 Rose Bowl game which USC won, 42–37.

In 1964 Beathard was drafted fifth overall by the Detroit Lions of the National Football League (NFL) and the second overall pick by the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League (AFL). Beathard is believed to be the only player to be selected in the first round of both leagues in the same year. He signed with the Chiefs to be the back up to future Hall of Fame quarterback Len Dawson.

The Chiefs faced the Green Bay Packers at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum on January 15, 1967, in the first Super Bowl. Officially, it was called the AFL-NFL World Championship, having been dubbed the First Super Bowl, or Super Bowl I, at a later date. Attended by 61,946 football fans, it is the only Super Bowl on record that was not sold out. The Packers, behind Hall of Fame quarterback Bart Starr, defeated the Chiefs 35-10 on that cool afternoon. Pete Beathard got into the game and completed 1 of 5 passing attempts for 17 yards and rushed once for 14 yards.

With Beathard’s participation El Segundo high school earned one of the NFL’s Golden Footballs. Two other former Eagles have ties to a Super Bowl that include Pete’s brother Bobby Beathard and Joe Caravello. Bobby Beathard worked with the Kansas City Chiefs as a scout of that fist Super Bowl and won Super Bowl rings with the Miami Dolphins as director of player personnel. In 1978, the Washington Redskins named

Current head El Segundo football coach

Keith Erickson

MGM Grand Garden Arena in Las Vegas.

Erickson, who was a standout athlete for the Eagles, graduated in 1961. He was a standout shortstop for John Stevenson on the baseball team, one of the South Bay’s best basketball players, an avid tennis player who was good enough to play professionally, a scratch handicap golfer and played on the 1964 U.S. Men’s Olympic Volleyball Team. Erickson is widely considered at the top of the list when considering El Segundo’s greatest athlete.....ever.

After high school Erickson played basketball and baseball at El Camino College for one year before getting a shared scholarship, in both sports, to attend UCLA. In the summer before going to UCLA the dual sport standout was still playing American Legion baseball. He made the most of what would become his last stint playing organized baseball. Erickson went 12-for-12 in three games including hitting a homerun that bounced off the top of the building in centerfield at what is now known as Stevenson Field.

A three-year lettermen at UCLA, Erickson led the Bruins to their first two NCAA basketball titles in 1964 and 1965. He was described by legendary head coach John Wooden, as the “Finest athlete,” he had ever coached. Erickson averaged 9.6 points and 8.0 rebounds in 87 career games as a three-year starting forward for the Bruins who played in the Athletic Association of Western Universities or the AAWU conference that would later be named the Pacific-8 Conference in 1968.

Erickson competed in 29 of 30 games during the 1964-65 college season, averaging 12.9 points and 8.8 rebounds per game that year.

Steve Shevlin accepted the prestigious Golden Football from the NFL and the ball is on display at the high school. •

He helped UCLA post a 28-2 overall record en route to winning the NCAA Championship and was named to the All-America team. As a junior in 1963-64, Erickson registered 10.7 points and a team-leading 9.1 rebounds per game in all 30 contests. UCLA went 30-0 that season before winning its first-ever men’s basketball NCAA title. In that game championship game Erickson, who had scored 28 points in the semi-final game against Kansas State, fouled out late against Duke in the finals.

As a 12-year NBA veteran, Erickson played for the San Francisco Warriors, Chicago Bulls, Los Angeles Lakers and Phoenix Suns. In all, he played in 766 NBA games, scoring 7,251 points and totaling 3,448 rebounds. He was drafted in the third round by the San Francisco Warriors (now the Golden State Warriors) in the 1965 draft, made his debut against the Lakers and scored seven points. He helped the Los Angeles Lakers win the NBA title in 1972 and that 1972 team is still regarded as one of the NBA’s greatest teams of all time.

Thinking back to some of Erickson’s former NBA and college teammates you could put together one heck of a team that would include; Walt Hazzard, Gail Goodrich, Nate Thurman, Rick Berry, Jerry Sloan, Connie Hawkins, Elgin Baylor, Pat Riley, Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West. Other than Hazzard the rest of them have all been inducted into basketball’s Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame

For Erickson this will be the third time being honored into a Hall of Fame that includes the El Segundo High School Hall of Fame as well as being inducted into the UCLA Athletics Hall of Fame in 1986. •

We’re happy to know them as neighbors and proud to have them participate as part of the Chevron El Segundo Refinery’s Community Advisory Panel (CAP). These volunteers help represent the “voice of the community” and meet throughout the year at Chevron to share their thoughts, raise concerns and advise us on our relationship with our neighbors.
