Robotics Team Celebrate their World Championship Title

The El Segundo Raytheon-sponsored team became the 2016 FIRST's Robotics World Champions last weekend in St Louis, beating out 600 teams. The Beach Bots (Team #330) set the record high score this year. The World competition is the ultimate annual goal for approximately 78,500 students on 3,140 FRC teams from 24 countries. City Council Considers Golf Course Designs, Gets Police Staffing Report

By Brian Simon

Realizing it was not realistic to get everything it wanted and still maintain safety, the El Segundo City Council on Tuesday night agreed to amend aspects of the due diligence agreement with the developer of the upcoming TopGolf facility concerning the redesign and improvements of the existing nine-hole course. But changes to the so-called "Exhibit D" will result in "something just as good," according to Councilmember Mike Dugan who is also part of the Golf Course Design Task Force that met multiple times in recent months.

Exhibit D originally required a golf shop, starter desk, restrooms, management office, café/bar, outdoor patio seating, and other amenities. It also called for a nine-hole golf course with the same or better degree of difficulty as currently exists at The Lakes at El Segundo, two par-4 holes and at least the same total play yardage (1,340)--with a preference to reach the 1,500 yards necessary to achieve a United States Golf Association (USGA) slope rating. However, a presentation from golf course architect Jason Straka (from the Fry Straka Group) revealed limitations in accomplishing all the goals set forth in Exhibit D. To retain two par-4s and get to 1,500 yards would entail scrapping the pro shop as well as putting green and short game areas. Straka added that this design would also pose a significant safety risk. An option to keep the par-4s but run short of 1,500 yards also didn't pass muster because it would squeeze the ninth hole up against the TopGolf driving range facility and require "unsightly" netting as well as reduced parking.

After considering over 20 potential designs including an outside-the-box six-hole configuration that would repeat three holes in order to gain the USGA rating, the Task Force recommended "Option B"--which will maintain the nine holes, but shorten the actual ninth hole (now a par-4) to a long par-3. It will also reconfigure the second and third holes and provide total course yardage in the 1,200 to 1,250 range. Most importantly to the group, this design will provide more than ample space for multi-generational programming with expanded putting green and short game areas--and also eliminate current safety concerns about the ninth hole while maximizing the flow of the facility, patio views and operational efficiencies. The Council also agreed--per City Manager Greg Carpenter's suggestion--to reach out to West Basin Municipal Water District about possibly leasing 20,000 square feet of land (at a cost of $1 per year) to provide 60-70 additional parking spaces to handle overflow.

With a general direction in place, Fry Straka and developer CenterCal will continue to fine-tune the design with a second firm (Architects Orange) also involved in the Clubhouse Building plans.

In the meantime, a traffic study is underway and

Fellhauer Looks Back on City Council Term

By Brian Simon

Though Marie Fellhauer came up short in her bid for a second term on the El Segundo City Council, she emphasized that she has zero regrets. "I stand behind every vote I made over the last four years," she said. "As I've mentioned before, I knew in taking this position that there was no way I could please everyone--and so I had to make some difficult decisions along the way. I always acted on what I thought was best for El Segundo overall."

Fellhauer acknowledged that some of those decisions may have cumulatively taken a toll in the recent election. "I believe some people in town were not pleased that I voted to change mayors a few years ago," she said. "Even though it was controversial, I truly felt it was best for the City at the time. And because of Bill Fisher, we reinvigorated the EDAC [Economic Development Advisory Council] that has taken flight and helped the City drive forth its public relations campaign and drawn a great deal of development opportunities in El Segundo." She added that she and other Council members took heat for perceived low morale at City Hall in light of ongoing unresolved union talks--and for supporting tax increases (in particular in 2014 when local voters rejected a proposed ballot measure) as well as various fee hikes. "I am a fiscal

Construction Snarls LAX Traffic Ahead of Summer Peak

By Rob McCarthy

A major cause of traffic congestion at the upper entrance to Los Angeles International Airport is due to be removed next month in time for the summer rush. Still, the nation's third-busiest airport is asking visitors to pardon the dust.

Traffic backups at Southwest Terminal 1 should improve after a construction barricade is removed sometime in June, said airport spokesman Charles Pannunzio. The barricade on the west end of the terminal is blocking access to the curb for passenger drop-offs, and creating a bottleneck for drivers entering the upper level.

"There'll be more space between terminals

The elevated walkway to parking structure 7 is closed, with access to the parking garage limited to the street level. The waiting area at Gate 71A is closed during the next several months. United's baggage service office and baggage carousel 3 are closed and will be replaced.

A few other notable projects, which drivers and travelers out of LAX may encounter, are:

Parking on some levels of parking structure 1 may be restricted while brighter lighting is installed.

Terminal 2: Upgrades continue in the ticketing lobby. Barricades have split the airlines' check-in operations. Baggage carousels on the lower-level for arrivals are being

1 and 2 when they take that out, probably near the end of June," the spokesman said.

Crews have finished remodeling the west end of the terminal, which Southwest took over from US Airways. Phase two of Southwest Airlines' $500-million renovation project in Terminal 1 has moved to the eastern side of the terminal.

Construction crews won't complete the remodeling of the check-in and ticketing areas before late 2017. A pedestrian bridge from parking structure 1 is closed. The east curb area outside the Southwest terminal is blocked by a barricade.

Southwest's terminal is one of several construction projects under way in the airport. Traffic delays are expected because of work to:

Parking structures 3 and 4 across from the Bradley International Terminal: The left lane is blocked and expected to last through June, according to an LAX construction update posted on its web site. Alternate route: East Way.

Elevator and stairwell upgrades on the south side of parking structure 4: Lane 1 adjacent to parking structure 4 on the lower/arrivals level is closed, and will continue through August. Alternate route: East Way as a shortcut to United Terminal 7 or Center Way to exit the airport and avoid the Bradley Terminal.

"They finished a couple of elevators, but there is still going to be a left lane closed there," Pannunzio said.

United Airlines' renovation of Terminals 7 and 8: Work is taking place behind barricades in front of the two terminals. Redevelopment of Terminal 7 has closed a 135-foot section of the passenger drop-off area on the upper-level for departures Level, which will remain in place through September.

replaced, and go offline one at a time for replacement. The construction is scheduled for completion in 2017.

Terminal 6: New concessions have been added and will continue to open this year. Blu2o, Osteria by Fabio Viviani, Starbucks Evenings, The Habit Burger Grill, The Marketplace by Wolfgang Puck, and Wahoo's Fish Taco are now serving.

Travelers for domestic flights should arrive at LAX terminals two hours before their flights begin boarding, according to LAX spokesman Pannunzio. International travelers should arrive at their terminals three hours before their boarding times.

Rather than time airport arrivals to departure times, he suggests using the boarding times for added protection in case of heavy inbound traffic and to get through ticketing and security.

LAX passengers shouldn't see significantly longer wait times to get through security checkpoints this summer, Pannunzio said. However, travelers returning to LAX from New York likely will encounter long lines at other airports because of a staffing shortage at the Transportation Safety Administration, according to published reports. TSA is filling more than 300 positions for screeners.

The new agents won't be hired and trained in time for the busy summer travel season, according to TSA. The agency attributes the shortage of airport security officers to budget cuts and more people flying within the United States.

A TSA spokesman released a statement to The Herald in response to questions about reported delays at airport checkpoints around the country. One answer offered was more passengers are carrying on luggage because

Eagles Volleyball Bow in CIF Quarterfinals

You Should Be Happy That Spurs Are Gone

By Gregg McMullin

The El Segundo high school boys’ volleyball team won’t have the opportunity to defend their CIF-Southern Section Division 3 title after bowing to Valley Christian of Cerritos 20-25, 20-25, 25-23, 25-16, 8-15 in the CIF-SS Division 3 quarterfinals. The match was reminiscent of the Eagle’s championship match with Quartz Hills last season. In that historic comeback, the Eagles were down two sets to zero when El Segundo came back to win three consecutive sets and win the program’s second CIF title.

The Eagles, who jumped out to a 10-8 lead in the first set, allowed Valley Christian to gain momentum and run off a series of points and eventually the first set. The Crusaders and Eagles played evenly for most of the second set before Valley Christian ran off the last five points to win the second set after the teams were tied at 20 apiece.

With the Eagle’s backs to the wall, Stanford bound Stephen Moye played like the CIF Player of the Year that he is. In the third set, Valley Christian came out strong and built an 8-4 lead. Moye and his teammates weren’t about to get swept in their own gym so the Eagles fought back behind Moye’s six straight points on kills to help El Segundo take a 10-8 lead. The Eagles relentless inspired play helped them pound out an 22-14 advantage. However Valley Christian, the Olympic League champions, scored nine of the next 10 points to tie the score at 23. Moye came up with a kill, one of 38 on the night, to give the Eagles the advantage. Then he made a diving dig that set up a Noah Mayeda’s kill to help El Segundo win the set.

Valley Christian had an early 9-6 lead in the fourth set and seemed to have the momentum when the Eagles turned the tide. Moye continued his assault with kill after kill and the Eagles outscored the Crusaders 19-7 to take the fourth set. In the fifth and deciding set Valley Christian put the Eagles away essentially from the beginning by not allowing any momentum shifts, and, just like that the season was over.

Besides Moye’s 38 kills, who had 11 in the third set, senior setter Joe Kelly had 54 assists and six kills for the Eagles who ended the season 20-8.

Afterwards El Segundo captain Stephen Moye was upbeat albeit extremely disappointed. “We came out slow, but we were able to step it up later,” Moye said. He added that he thought Valley Christian played a perfect match that the Eagles couldn’t make one more comeback.

Baseball

The Eagles split their two game series with Santa Monica and secured second place in the Ocean League. El Segundo allowed an unearned run in the first inning then went on to hold off the Vikings, 6-4. Nico Celestial’s big day at the plate included going 2-for-3 with three RBIs and scored a run. Spencer Long, who stared for the Eagles, helped himself at the plate with an RBI single. Long, who improved to 3-0 in the Ocean League, gave up four runs (three earned) on three hits and struck out five in five innings.

The Eagles were downed by the third place finishing Vikings, 8-1 in the regular season finale. They managed just three hits and scored its only run in the fourth inning when CJ Shevlin tripled and scored on Jake Palmer’s RBI single. Santa Monica countered with a run off starting pitcher Albert Galicia in their half of the fourth. The Vikings would put together a five-run fifth inning and add two more in the sixth inning off Bradley Heckman.

The Eagles will enter the CIF-SS Division 3 playoffs having won six out of their last eight games. They’ll face a familiar foe on Friday afternoon at 3:15 p.m. when they visit Mira Costa. The Mustangs finished second in the Bay League and have an overall record of 24-6. These two teams have faced each other 24 times over the past 12 years but this will be the first time they’ve faced each other in the CIF playoffs.

The winner will play the winner of the Temescal Canyon/ Corona Del Mar game on Tuesday at a site TBD

Softball

The Lady Eagles are the Ocean League champions. “It has a nice ring to it said head coach Keith Cameron after his team’s 11-0 win over Lawndale to secure at least a share of the title. Then for good measures the Eagles won the Ocean League title outright by throttling Santa Monica 10-0 on the road. After a runners-up finish last season The Eagles won its first league title outright since 2009; they shared the 2014 Pioneer League title with North Torrance.

The Eagles hammered out nine hits and benefitted by four walks against Lawndale to win 11-0 on Senior Day. Alyssa Pelegrin launched a two run homerun to leftfield in the first inning, walked and scored in the second inning and had a two-run single in the fourth inning. Jasmine Krauss had a two-homerun while Gianna Taormina had a two-run single to pace El Segundo’s offensive attack.

Against Santa Monica the Eagles played with plenty of motivation and in the midst of their biggest game so far of the season seemed to have fun in the process. Megan Truesdale was virtually unhittable as she was the first time these two teams me. The senior, who signed a letter of intent to pitch for Whitworth University (Spokane, Washington) scattered three hits while striking out 12.

The Eagles got on the scoreboard with a third inning solo homerun by Truesdale. In the fourth inning Allison Tatnal and Cierra Kessler both singled. On the play, Tatnal scored on a throwing error and Pelegrin drove in Kessler on an RBI single. In the fifth inning Nayeli Diaz, who has fully recovered from what was once thought a season ending injury, singled followed by a single to Tatnal and a walk to Kessler. Pelegrin then sent a 2-1 fastball into orbit for a grand slam to make it 7-0. In the seventh inning Julie Roach pounded a three-run homerun to give the Eagles a 10-0. The 10 runs the Eagles scored at Santa Monica were the most in over a decade the Vikings had given up to a visiting team in Ocean League play at home. •

Last Thursday night, the unexpected happened. While everyone was sitting around waiting for the San Antonio Spurs to meet up with the Golden State Warriors in this year’s NBA Western Conference Finals, Kevin Durant, Russell Westbrook, and the rest of the Oklahoma City Thunder had something to say about it. The Thunder have always looked like a good team on paper. Sporting arguably two of the NBA’s current Top 5 players in the league, their only flaw was that Durant and more notably, Westbrook, needed to utilize more of their team. The Spurs, on the other hand, lost only 15 games all season and behind head coach Greg Popovich, were a lock to give the Warriors a run for their money to reach this year’s NBA Finals and maybe even take home a ring. With a 113-99 victory, the Thunder not only added to the Spurs loss total on the year, but also surprisingly eliminated their adversaries from the playoffs. Now that they are gone, it’s easy to see why we should all be happy of the Spurs demise.

The San Antonio Spurs have never been a fun team to watch. A quiet and cerebral Tim Duncan is aided by an emotionless superstar in Kawhi Leonard and a coach that prides himself on speaking in sentences of two words or fewer. Despite what they provide for the eye, however, the Spurs have been one of the league’s most successful teams and an utter dynasty for almost 20 years now. One of the main reasons to be happy that the Thunder eliminated them from playoff contention though, if for nothing else, is to see parity in the game.

On one hand, you have the slow and lumbering Spurs, who offer nothing towards excitement, yet always find a way to pull out a victory. On the other hand, you have the hot, young, Oklahoma City Thunder with the amazing Kevin Durant and an unrelenting Russell Westbrook who seems to give the Energizer Bunny a run for his money. Westbrook, a product of Southern California’s Leuzinger High School and UCLA, is constantly on full-go.

He is one of the most up-tempo players and point guards in the league, stopping at nothing to get to the rim as he speeds past opponents like the Roadrunner and hops over his challengers with the seeming ability of Bugs Bunny. That’s right, he seems like a cartoon-player, but much to an NBA fan’s delight, he is of real flesh and blood and on display for us to watch and appreciate on almost a nightly basis.

Then, there are the coaches of the two teams. Billy Donovan, the coach of the Thunder, is a young and intense first-year leader that formerly coached the game at the college level at the University of Florida. Donovan has instilled belief and tenacity into his team that undoubtedly led, in part, to their victory over the Spurs. Then, there’s Popovich. Popovich has been in the NBA for 28 years now and as a head coach, has won the NBA title five times and coach of the year three times. All of those accolades have unquestionably led to his over-the-top pompous attitude and “better-than-thou” way of thinking. Popovich gives nothing to media on the sidelines and nothing to anyone who asks a question of him after the game. It has gotten so ridiculous and out of control now that not only has he become used to acting in such a foolish manner, but the media has gotten used to simply taking it, mind-numbingly labeling him as charming. There is absolutely nothing charming about Popovich; a head coach who Spurs fans should most certainly be interested in hearing what he has to say and think about the game, yet he undeniably and consistently responds with returns such as, “That’s a correct statement”, or “Why don’t you figure it out yourself”. I’d rather see Marshawn Lynch at the podium who is known to say, “I’m just here so I won’t get fined”, than to see an egotistical, millionaire head coach who constantly takes subtle jabs at the media for simply doing their jobs and cares not about the fans of his team who just prematurely got eliminated from the playoffs after a 67 win season, yet offers no explanation for his poor performance.

“The Lobster” and the Absurdity of Modern Love

By Ryan Rojas for www.cinemacy.com

In this modern age, where more and more human relationships are being facilitated online – apps like Tinder making romance and falling in love almost binary in nature – is it any wonder why we might now feel like we’ve lost just a bit of our collective humanity, and why the whole thing might even be seen as, laughable?

In the new ambiguously titled film “The Lobster,” director Yorgos Lanthimos (“Dog-tooth”) sends up this idea to make a darkly absurd, yet hilarious and thoughtful look at the amount of similarly programmed, artificialized, confining rules and structures that humans have put into place to connect and watched under scrutiny by the staff. It is here where we learn the rules of this world – singles check-in at the front desk, exchange the clothes on their back for navy sport coats and flower-printed dresses, are logged into the system, and learn that they must find, not so much “love,” as a romantic partner, a mate for life, within 45 days.

Understandably, all singles are largely silent and awkward in their behaviors, including Ben Whishaw and John C. Reilly, who attend The Hotel’s hilariously awkward staged talks regarding the dangers of living alone and attending the just-as awkward dances. Singles are also shuttled to the surrounding forest with tranquilizer-loaded hunting rifles, to tag and bag with others. In stretching the joke to its most absurd, silliest places, “The Lobster” makes for a wonderfully stylish satire with its poignancy and lasting punch. For our interview with Lanthimos, visit www.cinemacy.com.

“The Lobster” takes place in a dystopian, near future world, where single people (according to the laws of ‘The City’) are arrested and taken to ‘The Hotel,’ where they must find a romantic partner in forty-five days or else (cue the absurd twist) be turned into an animal and released into the woods (it’s not so cruel – they get to choose which animal they would like to be turned into to live out the rest of their days).

In the lead role, Colin Farrell packs on a pudge to play the wireframe-wearing sad sap David (the only named person in the film, the rest of the characters being defined as Nose-bleed Woman, Loner Leader’s Father, and so on), who, in the film’s first scene, is seen as just the latest victim of relationship-ending heartbreak. Farrell, pivoting 180 degrees from his macho and hard-boiled character in HBO’s less-than-satisfying second season of “True Detective,” gets laughs right off the bat. Farrell proves, with his bushy mustache groomed over his tight-lipped mouth, that he can do the deadpan comedy in spades.

After seeing David unlucky in love, we are introduced to The Hotel, where David and the rest of the other singles are housed the rogue singles living outside of The City’s laws. Successfully neutralizing a “Loner” will add another day to their stay at The Hotel, upping the chances of finding a mate. It’s a route that leads David to the Loners, including the Short Sighted Woman (Rachel Weisz), a fellow single who lives under the rule of the Loner Leader (Léa Seydoux). The twist here is, even outside of The City’s watch and The Hotel’s confines, living in the forest as a devoted single shares its own equally inhibiting and just as dumb rules. It is here that Lanthimos drives the point home, societal structures that are put in place in the effort to control one’s relationship status is a doomed, fool’s errand.

“The Lobster,” is wildly unexpected, unique, and plays the absurdity of this world with winning deadpan humor throughout. It affirms the reality where people are turned into animals, but even they have boundaries, as a single is wisely advised by a superior that a camel and a hippopotamus wouldn’t end up together, because “That would be absurd... think about it.” The modern age intelligentsia poking fun at the state of human behavior to control nature’s effect in utilitarian effort is entirely Twain-like, and makes for one of the year’s most unforgettable movies.

conservative and someone who does not believe in raising taxes, but it was only when we felt there were no other alternatives left to better the City’s financial health that we as a group agreed to put any measures on the ballot when we also knew that every tax dollar would stay local. Also as a group, we succeeded in reeling in expenditures by reworking labor agreements. On the morale side, there were other factors involved that residents may not be aware of that the Council was not responsible for.”

One item Fellhauer personally pushed resulted in some flak from a few local residents. She was adamant that Council members should not be on the City’s books for medical benefits once they have left the dais. “I just feel it isn’t right when this is a part-time job that we should do out of love for the City,” she said. “We shouldn’t add to the City’s liability after we’re done serving.”

Fellhauer also addressed opponent allegations during the election campaign that she took credit for negotiating the Chevron tax resolution agreement when she was not on the Council subcommittee assigned to the matter. “It took all five of us on the Council to approve this deal and I did meet directly with Chevron officials when we were at a stalemate late in the process,” she said. “I stepped in and played a major role in resolving the impasse so we could move forward with the settlement.”

Looking at the highlights of her term, Fellhauer was pleased to see major growth in economic development that led to numerous new businesses and hotels now here or on their way to town; the openings of The Point shopping center and elevon creative media campus; approval for the future Raytheon South Campus development; El Segundo’s recognition as the Most Business-Friendly City in LA County for the second time; an agreement to provide a new aquatics facility at the future Wiseburn High campus; increased commitment to infrastructure repair, including the in-progress Richmond Street rehabilitation project; the recent passage of Measure B to help shore up City finances; and the vote to bring TopGolf to El Segundo. “TopGolf was one of the best examples of the way I considered a particular issue,” Fellhauer said. “For a deal this important, I needed to research extensively and weigh every pro and con to be sure my vote was for the City’s best interests. So I decided on my own dime to fly to Texas and see a TopGolf facility in action. I saw all the positives firsthand and then once the financials came in to the benefit of the City and I realized all the economic development intangibles that could come our way, it made it clear that it was the right move to vote in favor of it. Though there were people in town against it for different reasons, I believe they will be pleasantly surprised once TopGolf opens.”

Another highlight for Fellhauer was her appointment to the Independent Cities Association presidency last summer. By virtue of leaving the Council, she also had to vacate that post midstream. “I am disappointed to have to cut that term short,” she said. “We were making some good progress collaborating with other cities and agencies in a variety of areas. Having an El Segundo elected official in that role is very beneficial to us, so I hope the momentum can be maintained.” Fellhauer also hopes someone else might take the reins in her effort to raise El Segundo’s 6.3 percent share of collected property tax dollars. “Some balked at me about this, feeling it was a waste of time. But this is a huge inequity that must be addressed. I had begun to lobby legislators to get them behind our cause and I believe that getting other similar cities on board to pressure the County can reap dividends even if it takes years to accomplish it. This is our community’s money and more of it ought to stay here.”

Although her weekly workload will now decrease by 20 hours or so as she leaves the Council and ICA, Fellhauer still has plenty on her plate. She and her husband Justin adopted a newborn (Klaus) last September. “The experience has been a total joy,” she said. “We are truly blessed to be parents.” The additional free time for family is a big bonus and the couple also has plans to visit Italy during the summer. And of course, Fellhauer continues to work a full-time job as a sergeant for LAPD. “I am going to miss being part of the process at City Hall and it was an honor to serve the community. I’ve said it before and mean it—I was born here, grew up here, got married here, became a homeowner here, am raising my son here and someday will die here. El Segundo is in my heart and soul and always will be. So while I wish I could have had the opportunity to continue serving, I wish everyone on the Council the best of luck going forward and am excited about the future. I believe we are in a better place today than we were four years ago and I hope the new leadership will keep it going...” • airlines are charging baggage fees. Each carry-on bag gets scanned and checked.

“Our strong economy means air carriers are enjoying record travel volume, which is resulting in heavier than normal volumes of travelers at our nation’s airports – some with double digit increases over last summer.

“In addition to arriving at U.S. airports up to two hours prior to departure, we encourage travelers to enroll in TSA Pre Check or other trusted traveler programs such as Global Entry, Nexus, or SENTRI, which improve security and reduce wait times.”

TSA is addressing the increased volume of travelers, with measures including more baggage-sniffing dogs, overtime and hiring, the agency said.

“We are appreciative that our airline partners are working with us by asking travelers to arrive at the airport as much as two hours early for domestic flights, which will help to alleviate some of the expected summer congestion,” the TSA statement read.

A TSA spokesman, when asked how many checkpoint agents would be hired for LAX, Long Beach and Burbank airports, said he didn’t have an airport-by-airport breakdown.

Two U.S. senators have suggested that airlines drop their checked-baggage fees during the summer months to deal with expected longer lines at TSA checkpoints.

Sens. Richard Blumenthal of Connecticut and Ed Markey of Massachusetts cite data indicating that bag fees increase the use of rolling carry-ons by 27 percent, the U.S. Travel Association reported on May 11.

The airlines blame TSA staffing for the wait times, the association reported, and they say TSA should promote the Pre-Check trusted travel program. •

If you’re a Kobe Bryant fan, there is reason to celebrate the Spurs demise as well. In what was most likely Tim Duncan’s last year, the five-time champion had a real shot at surpassing Bryant in the championship count. Now that Duncan is out of contention, he will more than likely finish his career with the same amount of rings as Bryant. That’s good for members of the media, as well, who can now spend countless hours deciding which player had the better career. Was it the five-time champion who spent all 19 of his NBA career years with the Spurs? Or the five-time champion who spent all 20 of his NBA career years with the Lakers? No matter what the answers to all of those questions are, the fact remains that this week will see the beginning of an extremely entertaining series between two up-tempo and high-powered NBA teams. The Golden State Warriors, last year’s NBA champions and this year’s favorites, will take on a flashy, young, and powerful OKC team that will have two of the three best players on the floor at all times. While everyone still expects to see the Warriors win and advance to the Finals for the second year in a row, the Thunder will certainly provide much more entertainment value than the prod-ding, listless, and monotonous Spurs. For that reason and that reason alone, we should all be happy that the Spurs are gone and that Popovich will not have to find another eloquent way to describe yet another lackluster performance. •

set to be completed by the end of the month.

Also on Tuesday, Police Chief Mitch Tavera provided an update on his department’s new staffing model given that five officers left the City in the past year and that crime continues to rise in El Segundo and throughout the South Bay in the wake of the AB109 and Prop 47 legislation that has put more offenders out on the streets. Though funded for 62 sworn personnel, the El Segundo Police Department (ESPD) is now down to 55—with three of those in training or academy. At the same time, Part 1 crimes are up 16% this year after an 11% rise last year, with especially large increases in larceny/theft and grand theft auto. To address the situation, the ESPD recently reorganized by pulling officers out of various external assignments and deploying them in town. Tavera noted that doing so means losing some asset forfeiture funding, but does increase uniformed presence in the community. Additionally, the department added a fourth beat (traditionally there have been three) to focus on recently developed areas such as The Point, elevon and Rosecrans Corridor that brought new influxes of people—and in turn more crime--to the community’s east side. Tavera also mentioned that El Segundo will see 342 new hotel rooms in the near future and pointed out that calls to lodging facilities often require maximum shift efforts. With personnel growth a major priority, the department is in the midst of an aggressive, wide-spanning recruitment campaign resulting in the testing of 61 entry level candidates this week alone—an “unheard of” and encouraging amount, according to Tavera. The Chief added that he will also propose funding for items such as automated license plate readers and high-definition cameras during the upcoming strategic planning sessions.

Speaking of strategic planning, the Council has opted to use a third party facilitator to help the City look at its long-term objectives and where it wants to go over the next five years. With finances more stable and Measure B monies on the way, Carpenter noted that the City has the chance to “step backwards to look at basic guiding principles” in order to then move forward and plan beyond just one budget year at a time. Mayor Suzanne Fuentes called it an “opportunity to really be strategic and start planning for our future.” The June and July dates for the strategic planning meetings will be finalized in the next couple of weeks.

The Council went with City Attorney Mark Hensley’s recommendation to bring in an independent hearing officer to decide if the prime contractor (Sully-Miller) overseeing the Richmond Street improvement project can replace the electrical subcontractor (Steiny & Company)—which formally objected to the request for substitution. While the Council could have decided to conduct its own evidentiary hearing, Hensley warned that the process contains various complexities and would likely be quicker with the outside person who could get started as soon as this week. Carpenter reported that crews did as much work as they could on the 100 block of Richmond in the meantime, but delays would begin as of yesterday pending resolution of the subcontractor situation. He added that staff will keep impacted Downtown businesses in the loop.

A consent agenda item that yielded considerable discussion centered on a request to hire a firm (recommended by Fire Chief Chris Donovan) to provide emergency management consulting services for the City. Council-member Carol Pirsztuk felt shaky about the “deliverables” of the agreement and lack of community outreach, among other components. Fuentes reiterated her prior strong support for hiring a full-time emergency manager, issuing a reminder that “we are surrounded by terrorist targets” and that El Segundo is “not your regular little town.” Earlier, resident David Burns—who served as the City’s Emergency Services Coordinator from 1999-2006--called for a more systematic approach and questioned the experience of the firm (Emergency Management Consulting Solutions). “Let’s not use, ‘I know a guy,’ as a means of staffing,” he said. Burns added later that the agreement contains nothing about disaster recovery. Ultimately, the Council agreed to award the contract through the end of the fiscal year (September 30, 2016) with an option to halt it earlier with a 30-day notice. The members will discuss the possibility of an in-house full-timer during strategic planning. Fuentes indicated that she sees value in the consultant for the time being helping to update software and various compliances, but warned that contract labor “is not dedicated to our city.”

During presentations, the Council proclaimed Saturday, May 21 as Super CPR Saturday. Chief Donovan noted that 163 people had registered for free life-saving training for the event as of Tuesday. The event will take place at El Segundo High School. A second proclamation recognized May as Older Americans Month, local resident Lou Kutil as the 2016 El Segundo Older American of the Year, and the annual Elderfest Celebration set for Friday, May 20 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Joslyn Center. The third presentation noted that June 4 from 4 to 7 p.m. will be El Segundo Auxiliary of Children’s Hospital Los Angeles Treasure Island Day fundraiser at The Jewelry Source on Main Street. The festivities will include refreshments and a raffle with the chance to bid on a custom-designed, 14K gold pendant containing rubies, pink sapphire and tourmaline. The store will donated 20% of all sales during the event to Children’s Hospital Los Angeles. •
