Eagles of Eighty-Two Look to Grow Scholarship Program

By Brian Simon

It was during the El Segundo High School Senior Awards Night 13 years ago when Julie Stolnack had a brainstorm. She had just handed out scholarships on behalf of Rotary to several students when then-El Segundo Unified School District Superintendent Bruce Auld issued a challenge to the graduates. “He urged them to return here after finishing college and establishing their careers and to give back to the school or community in some way,” Stolnack said. “So it got me to thinking, ‘We can do that.’”

The same night, Stolnack wrote a letter to members of her El Segundo High Class of 1982 with the idea of launching a scholarship program. She suggested that each kick in at least $10 to start--and ultimately scraped together $500 that went to a student from the Class of 2004. The next year, she bumped the ask to $30 where it remains today. “We now receive contributions ranging from $25 to $1,000 and we have anywhere from 26 to 32 classmates participating annually,” Stolnack said of the program now in its 12th year. Add it all up since 2003 and over 40 students have received a cumulative $52,000 in scholarships.

Now known as the Eagles of Eighty-Two, the group became a non-profit (501(c)3 organization last year in order to increase contributions (which are now tax-deductible) and allow for classmate employers to provide matching fund programs and potential grants. “For the past two years, we have been the recipients of a grant from the Tarsadia Foundation, which is directed by our classmate Shirish Patel Dayel,”

Stolnack noted. “They are a family foundation who believe in ‘Touching Lives and Building Futures.’”

The annual scholarships go out in memory of two longtime and highly respected El Segundo High teachers, Richard and Kathryn Peterson. The couple both started their careers at the campus in 1956, fell in love and married two years later. During Stolnack’s senior year, Mr. Pete, as he was affectionately known, suddenly passed away from a fatal heart attack. “After his untimely death, our class got to work and raised $10,000 in his memory to replace the non-functioning bells in the tower with the bells and music we hear from time to time around our city today,” she said. “Although I feel the bells should be played more than they are now...” Mrs. Peterson technically retired from teaching in 1990, but continued in a

School Board Honors SoCal ROC Scholarship Recipients

By Duane Plank

The Tuesday night meeting of the El Segundo Unified School District School Board featured special presentations honoring District students who have received recognition for their outstanding achievements in Career Technical Education; Project Lead the Way engineering students who advanced to the state final competition in a Chevron-sponsored design challenge; a quick update from Ed! Foundation CEO Carol Pirsztuk; Middle School assistant principal Ali Rabie’s providing an update regarding the District’s student attendance initiative; an LCAP update; and a presentation by the District’s chief business official on the proposed adopted budget for 2016-17.

High School principal Jaime Mancilla introduced the honored SoCal ROC scholarship recipients. The SoCal ROC program allows students to take career classes to help determine if they wish to continue in a chosen field after high school graduation.

The honorees included Leslie Morales, who wants to be a forensics photographer, and intends to continue on that pathway by attending El Camino College later this year before transferring to a Cal State school to complete her bachelors of Science degree. Laura Balladares is intending on pursuing a career as a registered dental assistant and, ultimately, a dental hygienist. She

Had a Real Find at Treasure Island

The El Segundo Auxiliary of Children’s Hospital Los Angeles expresses its sincere appreciation to all in the community who supported our recent fundraiser, Treasure Island, at The Jewelry Source on Main Street. We are particularly grateful for the generosity of Brenda Newman and all of her staff who donated time, talent, material goods and 20% of sales. We also express our thanks to Chevron for printing and postage, Natural Simplicity for centerpieces and El Segundo Brewing Company for beer.

Children’s Hospital Los Angeles treats the sickest, most damaged children without regard for ability to pay. It is a research and teaching hospital at which advances are made, new techniques developed and the tenderest care is provided to the neediest of children. The Auxiliary, established in El Segundo in 1920, thanks you, as do the children. Your support will echo through generations.

Lakers Prepare for NBA Draft

By Adam Serrao

The 2016 NBA draft is only one week away and the Los Angeles Lakers could not be more excited. Who wouldn't be excited after a season in which one of the greatest franchises in NBA history only won 17 games? Just being involved in the draft, though, doesn't automatically mean that you're going to become a better team.

Only one month ago, there was a chance the Lakers would lose their pick if they weren't selected in the Top 3 of the NBA Draft Lottery. Fortunately for them, they were selected as No. 2, overall. As everyone affiliated with the Lakers, fans included, breathed a deep sigh of relief, attention quickly turned to next Thursday's draft. What do you do with the No. 2 overall pick? Well, it's simple really. You wait and weigh out all of your options.

The Lakers are truly in the perfect position when all of the scenarios play themselves out. Naturally, it may be better to pick first overall so that you have complete control over who you draft onto your team. As the No. 2 team choosing, however, the Lakers simply sit back, relax, and choose whichever player the Philadelphia 76ers (who choose first in the draft) don't choose. Obviously, things aren't as easy as what has just been described. There is, naturally, a lot of studying, debating, and proliferating as to who the Lakers will actually choose when the pen finally hits the paper. This year's draft, though, certainly has a way of making things a bit easier for Los Angeles.

It has been widely known that there are only two highly touted picks in the draft this year. After the second pick, the talent pool drops off drastically. At least, that's what the "experts" say. Naturally, someone who is picked in the late first-round or even in the second round can, one day, turn out to be better than the number one (or two) overall pick. Look at Tom Brady, for instance. Naturally, that would mean to look at a different sport like football, but for comparisons sake, the player selected first overall in Brady's draft class in the 2000 NFL Draft was defensive end, Courtney Brown. Brady didn't receive his selection until the sixth round. Unfortunately for Brown, he hasn't really been heard of again. That's one rare example, though. The two talents in this year's NBA Draft figure to take the route opposite of the one Brown traveled in the NFL. Ben Simmons and Brandon Ingram, by all indications, should certainly pan out to be stars in the NBA soon after they are drafted by their respective teams.

All signs point to the 76ers taking Ben Simmons as the first pick of the draft. Simmons has been highly touted as the best talent of this year's draft for some time now and Philadelphia doesn't necessarily draft intelligently. They simply take who they believe they should take without much study or deliberation involved. That's why they've been the worst team in the league for what seems like the last five years now.

Clearing Out the Notebook

By Gregg McMullin

It's that time of year when sports in town is winding down for the summer. So it's a good time to clear out the notebook of items that were shoved aside for a later date or a time to update the community on current status on athletes around town. There will be at least three new coaching job changes at El Segundo high school. Two former Eagles are continuing the streak of El Segundo high school baseball players playing at the professional level. The football program is in full swing for summer, a scholarship honoring a former softball player was awarded and the Babe Ruth League wraps up its regular season this weekend.

Coaching Changes

Three coaching changes will take place for the 2016-17 school year. Jason Ito is stepping down from the basketball program after three years of guiding the Eagles. But the program turns it over to a more than qualified coach. David March's resume and experience put him at the top of the list and made it easy for Athletic Director Steve Shevlin and principal Jaime Mancilla to select him. March is not only an ESHS alumnus but he played for legendary Eagles basketball coach Rick Sabosky in the 90s. He later became an assistant to Coach Sabosky at the lower levels before accepting an assistant varsity coaching job at St Monica. Coach March was an assistant coach at Cal State Dominguez Hills from 2006-2008 while getting his master's degree. For the past eight seasons, Coach March was an assistant coach at L.A. Harbor College.

When the opportunity presented itself with the vacancy, Coach March applied. He says it's a homecoming for him and he is blessed to have the privilege to have the same impact my coaches had on me growing up in El Segundo.

"I had the opportunity to watch El Segundo greats like Coach Stevenson, Coach Shevlin and Coach Sabosky and hope to provide the same sense of pride and dedication to this community as they did," March said. "My teams will reflect the same values this town has instilled in me as a young man of family, respect and hard work."

Coach March's coaching philosophy is simple. To create a fun and competitive environment that develops players both on and off the court. His teams will be defined by mental toughness, execution and a will to win.

"I truly believe through competition in sport, I have the ability to develop life long skills in the young men I have the privilege to coach," March said.

Coach March has the program in full swing at all three levels that will include practicing, participating in two tournaments per level and focusing on the offense and defensive systems. In addition, continue to develop them once our fall program begins. This summer is a great opportunity for the coaching staff to start to learn about the players and relay our message of what this program stands for, both on and off the court.

Billy Traber becomes just the fifth head baseball coach in 56 years. He takes over for Coach Traber has been an assistant for a number of years and now takes the reigns of a team that reached the CIF quarterfinals this past season. With seven returning starters, the future looks bright for Coach Traber who hopes to continue the legacy of John Stevenson, Craig Cousins, Steve Shevlin and Steve Eno.

Coach Traber had a brilliant high school pitching career for the Eagles before attending Loyola Marymount on a scholarship. He was selected sixteenth overall, in the first round of the 2000 Major League amateur draft by the New York Mets. His Major League debut came three years later with the Cleveland Indians where he threw three scoreless innings against the Kansas City Royals.

Coach Traber returned to his alma mater this past school year and accepted a full time teaching position. When his good friend Steve Eno informed him of the forthcoming vacancy the two spoke and Coach Traber agreed to take the position. Traber says this is a chance of a lifetime to continue the overall success that came before him.

The girls' soccer program will be going through a transition. With head coach Tony Hobbs stepping down for personal reasons, the girls' soccer program will be looking for a new head coach. Coach Hobbs had been with the program for years as an assistant and led the lower level squad for a few seasons before taking over for long time coach Juan Mosquera. Lizzy Garland Scholarship Award Honors Three

The winners of "The 2016 Lizzy Garland Scholarship" awarded annually to the graduating senior(s) from the El Segundo High School Varsity Softball Team have been named. These recipients whose lives are most characterized by those qualities omnipresent in Elizabeth "Lizzy" Garland's life: love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, and the consummate team player, are Elena Bagues-Wagner, Megan Truesdale and Nayeli Diaz.

Bagues-Wagner started the season as a backup catcher but an injury to Diaz gave her the opportunity to shine; she was selected to the All-Ocean League team. Diaz's injury sidelined her for most of the season but was still recognized as one of the top catcher's in the South Bay when she was selected to play in the South Bay All-Star game. Truesdale had an incredible season leading the Eagles to an Ocean League title. On the mound, the Whitworth University-bound Truesdale was the Ocean League's co-MVP and won 14 games with a 0.96 ERA and 125 strikeouts.

The school is actively looking for a new coach.

The 1984 Olympics Keep on Giving

By Rob McCarthy

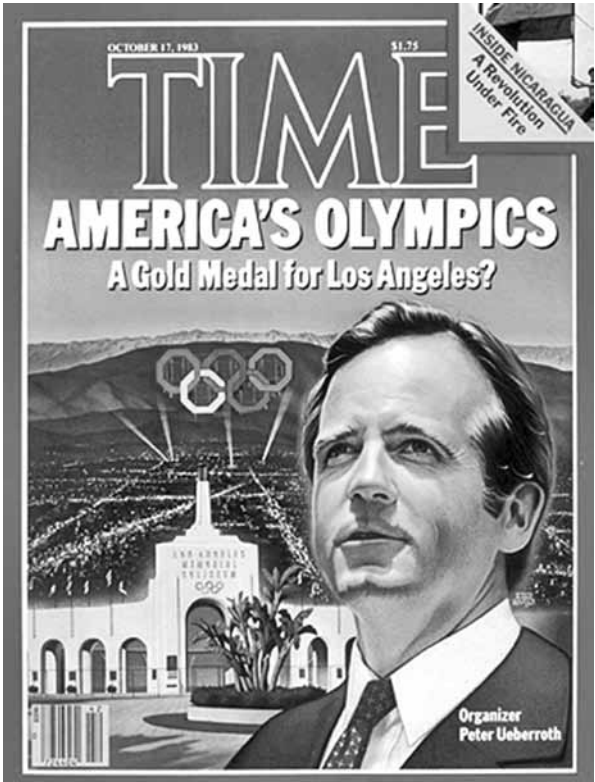

The 1984 Summer Olympics were so successful that 32 years later the profits are keeping Southern California kids and after-school sports programs running.

The funding drive by LA84 owes its longevity to the L.A. Olympic Organizing Committee that wisely hired business executive Peter Ueberroth to take charge. The '84 Games and Los Angeles did what no other Olympics host city had done before. It turned a massive profit, which it split 60-40 between the U.S. Olympic Committee and the LA84 Foundation.

That non-profit still hasn't run out of money for youth sports leagues, coaching, facilities, gear and equipment. El Segundo and Lawndale Youth Football and Cheer, the Inglewood Police Activities League (PAL), Torrance Swim, and the TGA Golf Foundation all have received financial support. The gifts ranged from $10,000 for football and cheer to $22,000 for after-school golf lessons in Hawthorne.

"The LA84 Foundation is a living legacy of the 1984 Olympic Games hosted in Los Angeles, made possible by the surplus we were able to achieve," said Ueberroth, now a foundation board member. He was named Play Rugby, which is introducing flag rugby in L.A. schools, received $77,000 in January to cover staff, tournaments and startup costs. The Venice Boys & Girls Club received $25,000 for staff and uniforms for the Play Now program. A $25,000 grant went to the Catholic Youth Organization's spring soccer program for middle schools.

The 1984 L.A. Olympic Organizing Committee, led by Peter Ueberroth, set up a charity for Southern California youth sports.

Since it began operations in 1985, it has invested $220 million in sports programs serving more than 3 million youth in the eight Southern California counties of Los Angeles, Imperial, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, and Ventura.

The LA84 Foundation's emphasis on coaching instruction means "kids aren't just out there throwing a basketball around. They're learning how to play basketball. They're developing skills – hopefully, lifelong skills and, more important, lifetime habits," said LAUSD Assistant Superintendent Al Cortes with the Beyond the Bell program, which is a foundation favorite.

Los Angeles became a model for Barcelona (1992) and Atlanta (1996), which orchestrated successful Games and revitalized their urban centers with smart planning and Time's Man of the Year for his tight-fisted management of the Summer Games, which used existing stadiums and arenas as Olympic venues to avoid massive construction costs.

The foundation has given $1.3 million this year in both large and small grants to after-school sports programs, the Southern California Tennis Association, flag rugby, swimming, squash, boxing, girls baseball, gymnastics, equestrian and soccer. The foundation isn't done giving for this year. Another round of grants will be announced this month, and any sports-based nonprofit serving children in the South Bay may apply.

Upcoming grant cycles and how to apply are explained at the foundation's web site, <http://www.la84.org>.

LA84 calls the $1.3 million spent so far "an investment" that will keep 38,000 youth active in after-school sports across Southern California. Grants also pay for referees, uniforms, coaching clinics, gym repairs, scoreboards and equestrian scholarships. The awards range from $5,000 to $337,000, depending on the size of the need and the number of children involved.

"Sports have the power to create a lasting positive impact on a child's life, and we are inspired by all the kids and organizations that embody the values that have encouraged our organization to give back to our communities since the 1984 Olympic Games," said foundation chief executive Renata Simril, a bronze rowing medalist in the 1976 Summer Games in Munich. Ueberroth tried out for the 1956 Games with the U.S. men's volleyball team.

design. Los Angeles is the U.S. Olympic Committee's choice to host the Summer Games again in 2024.

Hoping to join London as the only three-time host city for the Games, Los Angeles isn't considered a favorite despite its track record of hosting the 1932 and 1984 Olympiads. Boston was the U.S. Olympic's Committee's first choice for the 2024 Games before city leaders withdrew their bid. Paris, Rome and Hamburg, Germany, also submitted bids to the International Olympic Committee. The IOC's decision is still a year away.

"You can't overemphasize the importance of experience," USOC Chief Executive Scott Blackmun said in support of Los Angeles' bid. "They've got strong venues. They've got incredibly strong public support."

The LA84 Foundation is open to grant requests from any youth sports organization in Southern California. A list of recent grant recipients can be viewed at the foundation's website to see what it supports. Read through the grant guidelines, and direct any questions about the process to the foundation's program officers, Pilar Diaz (pdiaz@la84.org) or Nolan Ortiz (nortiz@la84.org).

The LA84 Foundation also operates the largest sports research library in North America from its headquarters, 2141 W. Adams Blvd. A collection of historic sport art and artifacts is kept on display, including items from the Helms Athletic Foundation Sports Halls of Fame. Visits are by appointment only, which can be made at the foundation's web site. •

Film Review

'The Fits' Proves That Creativity in the Film Industry Isn't Dead

By Morgan Rojas
for www.cinemacy.com

In 2015, director Anna Rose Holmer was declared one of Filmmaker Magazine's "25 New Faces of Independent Film," and after watching her feature directorial debut, "The Fits," it's obvious to see why. Holmer doesn't only manage to capture the entire world of her story in a brisk 70-minute running time, she has the ability to evoke palpable emotion without the use of much dialogue, which culminates in a chills-inducing final scene

Royalty Hightower as Toni in 'The Fits.' Courtesy of Oscilloscope.

(as this reviewer can attest to). Eleven-year-old Toni (newcomer Royalty Hightower), a young girl of color, stands out from the rest of the youths around her. In a recreational boxing gym, with long boxer braids hanging off of her tiny frame, Toni stands apart from the rest of the boys, working through a set of sit-ups as her overprotective brother Jermaine (Da'Sean Minor) practices jabs.

Yet she also stands out from the other girls, a group of whom spend time just down the hall from the gym as part of a hip-hop dance troupe, which is where Toni, after hearing the transfixing reverb of deep bass music, is drawn to and sees an energetic, hypnotizing dance battle between them. Without telling Jermaine, Toni joins the girls, thrusting herself into a new world of forging female friendships and self-discovery in adulthood.

Things turn strange when some of the older girls on the team begin experiencing unexplained "fits," including loss of breath, convulsions, and passing out. This puts the fear of the unknown in all of the girls. Toni and her new friend Beezy (Alexis Neblett) can only explain it as "boyfriend disease." This is where the film turns unexpectedly dark, the score begins to reflect a psychological thriller and everyone, the audience included, is on the edge of our seat trying to figure out just what is wrong and how to stop it. What captivated audiences in Sia's "Chandelier" music video has the potential to do the same thing here, the dancing mixed with the innocence of the girls and the art house feel of the film is a winning combination. Royalty Hightower puts on a tour de force performance, she carries the film on her back so effortlessly. Her strengths don't just come out in the pull-ups she does, they are hidden within her face and explode during high-intensity scenes. Remember her name, Royalty Hightower is just getting started. While she may be a first time director, Holmer definitely has behind the camera experience. Her past work in the industry includes camera department on films such as "Twilight" and "Tiny Furniture," two very different films tonally, but both standouts to me personally. It is no wonder then that some of the film's strongest qualities are the beautifully composed shots; from ethereal one takes of Toni practicing her dance routine outside on the stairs to the energized repetition of the group's call and answer moves, Holmer makes every frame look like a work of art. Not a lot of dialogue is spoken, nor does it need to be, because the visuals easily carry the film to great heights.

"The Fits" is equal parts dramatic and surreal, and on a larger scale, proves that creativity in the film industry is not dead. After seeing this film, how can one even stand the thought of another sequel or superhero blockbuster? If directors like Holmer are just given a chance, I believe the whole industry would be changed for the better. "The Fits" is an astounding job all around, stylistically composed with the substance and heart to back it up.

"The Fits" is now playing in select theaters, including Laemmle's Monica Film Center, Playhouse 7, and NoHo 7. •

Tips to Improve Your Home's Energy Efficiency

light can contribute to improving your home's energy efficiency. Also, installing ENERGY STAR-rated high efficiency windows can help reduce energy loss.

WORKING WITH AN EXPERT

Homeowners serious about optimizing their home's energy efficiency should consider working with a certified Home Energy Rater. These professionals conduct a series of tests to assess a home's energy efficiency to provide an overall efficiency rating in much the same way that appliances are rated. Equipped with this information, homeowners can make home improvement decisions that further boost their home's energy efficiency.

AIR LEAK

One way to optimize energy efficiency and minimize energy loss is to limit air leakage. Insulation experts say homeowners should survey their house from top to bottom, and assess any trouble spots such as drafty areas or cold zones which could be caused by air leakage. Air leakage can limit the effectiveness of heating and cooling systems, and therefore your home's energy efficiency. According to InsulationSmart.com, floors, walls and ceilings can account for up to 31 percent of air leakage in a home.

SPRAY FOAM INSULATION

Spray foam insulation, which can help reduce air leakage, is growing in popularity among homeowners since it is an energy-efficient material that delivers year-round benefits. When installed, spray foam insulation, like that from Icynene, expands within seconds of application to create an insulation and air seal that fills every nook and cranny to limit air loss. Spray foam insulation works well in all types of homes across the country, regardless of climate to limit air loss and maintain even temperatures throughout the home all year round.

Spray foam insulation performs for the life of the property, ensuring that homeowners can enjoy comfortable indoor temperatures throughout the year without overrunning their heating and cooling equipment. More information on how spray foam insulation contributes to energy efficiency is available online at www.icynene.com.

(BPT) - With spring upon us and the emphasis on home energy efficiency continuing to grow, building industry experts say now is the best time for homeowners considering a home improvement project to look at how energy efficient their home truly is. Homeowners should ask themselves, "How much energy is being lost through inefficiencies in my home and how much is this energy loss costing me each month?"

The U.S. Department of Energy suggests there are several inexpensive and quick ways to reduce energy consumption and lower monthly energy bills. Installing a programmable thermostat can contribute to a 10 percent reduction on heating and cooling costs. Lowering your water heater's temperature by just a few degrees can make a noticeable impact on reducing your water heating bills.

The ways your home uses light can also make a noticeable impact. Using natural light to your advantage and relying less on artificial

Bite Back Against Mosquitoes This Season With These Prevention Tips

(BPT) - From annoying itchy welts to serious conditions like Malaria and West Nile virus, mosquitoes have been making humans miserable and sick for thousands of years. And now, there’s Zika - a mosquito-spread virus that may be linked to serious birth defects. In fact, according to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the diseases mosquitoes spread make them the deadliest animal on the planet.

The arrival of warm weather means it’s time to step up your mosquito prevention and protection efforts in order to help protect your family. The National Pest Management Association offers some information that can help:

- The type of mosquito that transmits Zika bites during the daytime hours. Most other types of mosquitoes bite during dusk and dawn.
 - Within the U.S., mosquitoes have been known to spread West Nile virus, Chikungunya, and encephalitis-causing viruses in humans, and heartworms in dogs.
 - Mosquitoes spread disease when they bite one person, fly to another and bite again, spreading the infection. What many people don’t realize is that the saliva from the mosquito’s bite causes the red, itchy irritation that we all know so well.
- The NPMA recommends some ways you can help reduce your exposure to mosquitoes:
- Eliminate breeding areas - Mosquitoes need only about a half-inch of standing water in which to lay their eggs. Get rid of any stagnant water around your home, such as flower pots, bird baths, kiddie pools and standing water in low areas of your yard.

- Use repellent - Whenever you spend time outside, protect your skin from mosquito bites by applying an insect repellent that contains at least 20 percent DEET, picaridin or oil of lemon-eucalyptus. Also, consider wearing long pants, long-sleeved shirts and closed-toe shoes.
 - Be aware of the time of day - Mosquitoes are most active around dawn and dusk, although the variety that transmits Zika prefers to bite during the day. Minimize outside activity during peak biting hours, or, if you must be outside, wear long sleeves, pants and repellent to thwart mosquitoes.
 - Watch what you wear - Dark colors, floral prints and sweet-smelling perfumes or colognes can attract mosquitoes to you. Wear light colors and forego perfume when spending time outside.
 - Protect your house - Screens help keep mosquitoes out of your house. Be sure all windows and doors are outfitted with screens, and that all are in good shape. Repair tears to keep mosquitoes from getting inside.
 - Travel wisely - Mosquito-borne diseases that may be rare in the U.S. are common in many foreign countries, so if your summer vacation will take you outside the country, check what travel advisories may be in effect in your destination. If someone gets sick upon returning home, seek medical care immediately.
- Sometimes, despite your best efforts at control, mosquitoes on your property can still be a problem. A licensed pest control professional can help you manage mosquitoes. To find a professional near you, visit the NPMA’s website at pestworld.org.

City of El Segundo 2015 Urban Water Management Plan Update
The City of El Segundo is preparing its 2015 Urban Water Management Plan update and is distributing draft copies of the plan for public comment. California’s Urban Water Management Planning Act requires the update of Urban Water Management Plans (UWMP) every five (5) years.
The UWMP outlines how the City will meet current and projected water demands within its service area, with emphasis on water conservation and the continued use of imported and recycled water to provide its customers a reliable, high quality supply of water. It also outlines the results for meeting the interim (2015) urban water use reduction target and strategies to meet the final (2020) targets, as required by Senate Bill X7-7.
The Draft 2015 UWMP is expected to be available for public review and comment in the beginning of June 2016. The link to the document can be found here: <http://www.elsegundo.org/depts/works/documents.asp>. The deadline for public comments will be 30 days after the draft distribution date. substitute capacity for a few more years until passing away after a brief illness.

The process of identifying and selecting scholarship candidates begins each October when Stolnack sends out a contribution request letter to her classmates with a brief synopsis of the most recent awardees plus letters from past recipients who send along graduation announcements or other updates on their progress since graduating from El Segundo High. “I then give my classmates until April to make their contributions,” Stolnack said. “And a couple of times, the Board [Stolnack serves

In choosing the awardees, the committee requires students at the minimum to maintain a 3.0 GPA or higher with commitments to attend a two- to four-year college/university or vocational school. More specifically, the group looks to identify those who have dealt with significant adversity in their lives such as the death of a parent or sibling, addiction within the family, financial hardship or other serious issue.

“We look for someone who has had to deal with outside stresses and has still persevered and remained a good kid and student despite as President, with Dianna Smith-Day Vice-President and Dede Charsha-Gerber Secretary/Treasurer] meets to discuss any changes that need to be made and to track how far along we are in our collections.”

For the Class of 2016, Stolnack and company received 54 application packets that they eventually narrowed down to 11. A committee of seven Eagles of Eighty-Two classmates then interviewed the students for several hours and ultimately decided on the final recipients. Seven students received $2,000 each. One of them (Megan Burns) was hand-picked by Gabel Solomon, the much-loved custodian who recently retired after 35 years at the campus. “Gabel came to El Segundo High when we were students there and so we chose to honor him this year,” Stolnack said. “He read through all the applications and sat through the student interviews before making his selection.”

That’s not to say Simmons is not the clear No. 1 choice of the draft. The Lakers would certainly be happy if he fell to them at No. 2. All signs point to him being a great talent and he would fit in perfectly with a young Lakers squad. Chances are that the Simmons scenario will not play itself out for L.A. That leaves only two scenarios left on the table for the Lakers. Draft Ingram at No. 2 or trade the pick for a veteran.

“As the No. 2 team choosing, however, the Lakers simply sit back, relax, and choose whichever player the Philadelphia 76ers (who choose first in the draft) don’t choose.”

“Just off the top of my head, I don’t think there’s a lot of players we would trade for with that pick,” Lakers General Manager Mitch Kupchak said, as he laughed all rumors of trading his selection away.

David Aldridge of NBA.com perhaps put it best when he said, “Few expect the Lakers to move the pick, after all the angst they had to go through this year to secure it.” Just as all signs point to Simmons in Philly, it seems more and more as if all signs are pointing to Ingram in Los Angeles. That is not a bad thing, either. Ingram is a wing player that should be a perfect fit on a Lakers team that is in need of, well, everything.

He should bring defense, much-needed shooting ability, length, speed and rebounding to a team that has been devoid of all of the above. In addition to his attributes and intangibles, Ingram is young. The 18-year-old out of Duke will fit right in with a roster of players that are aged similarly. Also, according to ESPN Analytics, Simmons is the riskiest pick in this year’s Top 10 picks and has the highest chance (35 percent) of those 10 of becoming a bust. Ingram only has a 26 percent chance of becoming a bust, according to the analytics, while he also has the highest chance of becoming an All-Star (25 percent) and ranks as ESPN Analytics No. 1 overall player on the board.

The Lakers may not win a championship next season, but once all of the young studs finally mature, LeBron James should be well past his prime, the Warriors run will be over, and Los Angeles should be primed for another dynasty-type-of run. All things considered, owning this year’s No. 2 pick in the NBA Draft is a great thing for the Lakers any way that you look at it. Either the team comes away with a prospect like Ingram to add to their already young stable of talent, Simmons falls to the team at No. 2, or they trade their pick for an already established veteran who could, theoretically, fast-forward the team’s chances at contending for a championship. Being at No. 2 is a good place to be, any way you look at it. Now, we’ll all just have to sit back and wait one week longer to see what the Lakers decide to do with the fortunate position that they have been offered. •

People Are Discovering A New Way To Boost Their Portfolio

(BPT) - As a volatile market sends ripples through the global economy, many investors are worried about how events overseas will impact their portfolio. In addition, concerns about political instability in much of the world have contributed to a heightened sense of worry and stress among investors. However, while the risks in traditional markets are real, 2016 is full of opportunities for the investor who is to invest in a number of different loans in order to build a diverse portfolio and reduce risk.

Risk-adjusted returns. Marketplace lending platforms provide a product that offers competitive return rates relative to other investment products. Investors can choose to peruse the marketplace lending website manually to find the loans that match their risk tolerance. They can also use a tool available on some willing to think a little differently.

In the face of these uncertainties, the standard advice is for investors to diversify their portfolio. Many have been doing this by taking money out of their dividend-paying stocks and corporate bonds and investing in marketplace lending.

Marketplace Lending

Marketplace lending platforms, sometimes called peer-to-peer (P2P) lenders, are online marketplaces that connect credit-worthy borrowers with individuals seeking investment opportunities. This gives individual investors low-cost access to high-yield consumer loans - an attractive new asset class that was previously only accessible to large institutions.

As an alternative investment strategy, investing in marketplace loans has helped investors diversify their portfolio.

Early investors discovered five secrets that are still the keys to understanding why more people are choosing to diversify their portfolios through marketplace lending. They are:

Proven returns. Individuals who invest through Prosper, a leading marketplace lending platform, can earn an estimated 6.8 percent in returns.

Simple and fast. Investors go through an authorization process on a marketplace lending website to link their profile with their bank, or do a money transfer, in order to establish bank or institutional credentials. The process can be completed within a short period of time, allowing people to start investing in a matter of days.

Reduced risk. With marketplace lending, investors can diversify by investing in many different loans (in $25 increments). Many choose of the marketplace lending sites that will run a search to help the user easily invest in the specific type of loans they are looking for.

Positive social impact. P2P lending is not only a way to strengthen your financial plans, it offers real benefits to individuals and the community. Prosper Marketplace recently conducted a study and found that over 60 percent of Americans have credit card debt and two-thirds are going deeper into debt by not paying them off in full. With so many Americans struggling with debt, it’s no surprise that marketplace loans are becoming a popular option for debt consolidation. Individuals can invest in this debt knowing that marketplace lending platforms leverage technology to assess risk and determine a credit rating.

The following disclaimer can be used to clarify the 6.8 percent return mentioned under the “Proven results” section:

Estimated returns are calculated by taking the weighted average borrower interest rate for all loans originated during the period, adding (ii) estimated collected late fees and post charge-off principal recovery for such loans, and subtracting (iii) the servicing fee, estimated uncollected interest on charge-offs and estimated principal loss on charge-offs from such loans. The actual return on any Note depends on the prepayment and delinquency pattern of the loan underlying each Note, which is highly uncertain. Individual results may vary and projections can change. Past performance is no guarantee of future results and the information presented is not intended to be investment advice or a guarantee about the performance of any Note. • is planning on attending West Los Angeles College in the fall. Kristin Espinoza wants to become an orthodontist, and has mapped-out a pathway that will lead her to the USC School of Dentistry to complete her education and receive the degrees necessary to achieve her career goals. Senior Kris Kagy is currently attending the Los Angeles Fire Department Youth Academy. He will be attending El Camino in the fall to be trained as a firefighter.

Emailed Watkins: "The Board of Education is proud of the accomplishments of these fine students and wishes them well as they continue to work toward their chosen professions."

The second presentation of the evening honored three PLTW engineering students who had participated in the Chevron "Introduction to Engineering" design challenge in the Los Angeles region. Quin Kirsten, Nicholas Palomino, and Chloe Stonecipher were selected, and placed third of 18 teams, which advanced them to the state competition in Folsom. They were given a "design brief" at 8 a.m. on the morning of the competition, and then were tasked to sketch, design, create animations and drawing sheets and make a summation presentation, all by 5 p.m. that day. High school instructor Jennifer Cho is the faculty advisor for the group.

She emailed that "each member of the team brought an essential skill that is critical in a strong design team. They were always calm, cool, and collected. They have amazing talent, and I am so proud of them."

Presentation three on the evening was made by Pirsztuk, noting the importance of Ed! 's grants to the District, which are slated to be $ 1.3 million for the upcoming school year and help fund a diverse array of District programs.

"It takes a community to pull together in support of our students to offer the rich academic programming that ESUSD is able to provide," Pirsztuk emailed.

Next to the presentation podium was Rabiei, who talked about the implementation and success of the District's student attendance initiative. Rabiei's PowerPoint presentation spoke of the challenge of "getting our students to school each and every day, and on time." Chronic absenteeism and truancy rates were noted, as well as "attendance awareness." The slides portrayed what was termed a "dramatic decrease in the truancy rates at both the High School and the Middle School." Attendance recovery opportunities, including the Saturday Attendance Recovery School, were also highlighted in the presentation.

Marisa Janicek, the District's Executive Director of Education Services, made the next presentation, detailing the District's proposed Local Control Accountability Plan (LCAP), which is a requirement from the state, and linked to funds granted to the District under the state's Local Control Funding Formula.

There are eight areas, based on state devised priorities, addressed in each LCAP proposal. The plans demonstrate how the District's budget will help achieve the goals, and assess each year how the strategies in the plan are able to improve outcomes.

Janicek emailed that "District's must use the LCAP to create a plan that details how they will support student success. Our plan details the goals, the expected outcomes, and the dollars that will be devoted to helping all students succeed."

Chief Business Official Susan Aceves made the final presentation, which dealt with the District's proposed budget for the 2016-17 school year that will commence this August. Aceves presentation noted financial assumptions built into the document, and offered the Board members the opportunity to view graphs and charts utilized in the development of the proposed budget.

Sixteen consent items were tackled by the Board on Tuesday evening. Among the items consented to were the approval of a "next generation" science professional development program; an agreement with USC Rossier School of Education for professional development; approval of the renewal of the contract with Illuminate Data and Assessment Management Systems, and an Illuminate professional development day for approximately 25 District teachers; the approval of a renewal of a contract with K-12 online that purports to streamline the school registration process; a consultant agreement with Mrs. Jessica Schilling-Wigley, who has worked with the District for the past decade, assisting District staff in serving students with special needs; a memorandum of understanding with the LMU counseling program to partner with the District and provide the ESUSD with LMU student interns, who will be able to work on campus and provide counseling services while under the supervision of experienced counselors.

The final consent agenda agreed to was a new teacher technology boot camp that is scheduled to take place on August 17, and is expected to draw approximately 13 new employees for the up-to six hour program.

There were just six action items listed on the agenda, including the approval of the High School's AP Art History course; time allotted for public hearings on the LCAP plan, and the proposed upcoming school year fiscal budget; and the approval of an agreement with Piper Jaffray & Co for investment advisory services pertaining to the expected proceeds from the District's sale of the 540 E. Imperial Avenue property.

Superintendent Melissa Moore then highlighted upcoming items on the District's informational calendar, including the School board workshop that is scheduled to commence at 8 a.m. on Saturday, June 25.

Watkins then started off the Board reports, with the members sharing their impressions of the recent promotion and graduation ceremonies in the District, and lauding the Ed! Foundation for their continued support of District students.

Moore then made her Superintendent's report. She too thanked the Ed! Foundation. "Thanks to them for meeting the challenge," she said.

President Jim Garza then concluded the 125-minute meeting. The next regularly scheduled School Board meeting will take place on Tuesday evening, June 28, commencing at 7 p.m. •

We are looking for volunteers to help with our pet adoption fairs which are held every Saturday at the Petco located at 537 N. Pacific Coast Highway Redondo Beach 90277, from noon to 3:30 p.m. If you are interested in volunteering and can commit to at least one Saturday a month, please contact us at info@msfr.org. You can also visit all of our Miniature Schnauzers & Friends rescues at the adoption fair or check out our website, www.msfr.org. If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability you can email us at info@msfr.org. Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one!

Have you ever looked at a picture of a pretty, little, female Poodle mix and thought, "Gee she's precious?" Well, yes I am! They call me Precious because I'm such a sweet, gentle, well-mannered mother of three pups who, along with myself, were dumped at an L.A. county shelter by our owner. Our owner decided he had too many dogs and just abandoned us without a second thought. The MSFR folks had rescued one of my Schnoodles (Schnauzer/Poodle mix) and decided the next day to come back for me. You can read about two of my "kiddos" (Flo and Snow) below. After being neglected for so long I was a matted mess and had little hope of ever finding someone to adopt me. The matting was so bad that I had to be stripped down. What a difference, I definitely look tiny, only nine pounds, but I can guarantee that my coat will grow in and it will be glistening white. If you are interested in Precious, please email info@msfr.org for more information

Hello, my name is Flo and you've already met my mom, Precious. Our previous owner dumped my brother, my mother and me at a L.A. County shelter because he had too many dogs. I was told that I had someone who wanted to adopt me but they never followed through. I can't say that I blame them. I was such a dirty hot mess with matted hair and a large abscess on the side of my face. As it turned out the abscess was caused by an embedded foxtail but a trip to the vet and antibiotics made quick work of that. I'm a very petite gal, weighing in at five pounds, but I'm also only three months old. My approximate date of birth is March 1, 2016, so I'm still a pup but even when I'm full-grown the "guestimate" is that I would only weigh 15-20 pounds. Schnoodles (Schnauzer/Poodle mix) aren't very big but they are very cute, sweet, loving and make perfect companions. If you are interested in Flo, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

I assume that you've "met" my Mom, Precious, my sister, Flo and I, being the male of the trio, am called Snow. We were all dumped at an L.A. shelter after our previous owner realized he had more dogs than he could handle. I too am a 3-month-old Schnoodle (Schnauzer/Poodle mix), weighing only five pounds but will probably weigh 15-20 pounds when full-grown. We think my birthday is March 1, 2016, which means I'm still just a pup with lots to learn. I actually was adopted but the folks returned me to the shelter the following week because I was "too vocal" and their neighbors complained. How was I supposed to know that I had to use my indoor voice? I had no training and I was alone all day so I just started to sing to entertain myself. I'm a cutie, I'm a sweetie and I want to be yours! If you are interested in Snow, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

Hi there! My name is Toby and I'm a 2-year-old male Schnauzer mix. I'm still not certain what happened but one minute I was out exploring the neighborhood and the next I'm at a L.A. County shelter being called a stray. I was micro-chipped so I figured my folks would be notified and I'd be home in a heartbeat. Can you imagine how devastated I was when they decided not to reclaim me and actually relinquished me to the shelter? I have no idea why after spending my puppyhood with them they decided to kick me to the curb. I'm only 8.5 pounds so it couldn't have been because I was too big. I have a really sweet face with huge, dark, soulful eyes so it couldn't have been because I'm no longer cute. I guess they decided that they really didn't want someone who gets along with everyone, has a happy-go-lucky personality and a real love. I'm sure I'll find a much better home, could it be with you? If you are interested in Toby, please email info@msfr.org for more information. •

Happy Tails

It looks like Teresa has hit the forever-home lottery! Her new family is not only long time Schnauzer lovers, this being their sixth one, but they also have a beautiful black and silver mini sister and a senior cat. Not only that but her dad is retired and someone is home all day to play with them. Needless to say this 5-year-old gal grabbed her pink sweater, jumped into their arms and is looking for many, happy times with folks. Congratulations to everyone.

Teresa is now in a Schnauzer loving family, congrats!

THE YELLOW DOG PROJECT.com

If you see a dog with a YELLOW RIBBON or something yellow on the leash, this is a dog who needs some space. Please do not approach this dog with your dog. Please maintain distance or give this dog and his/her person time to move out of your way.

There are many reasons why a dog may need space:
HEALTH ISSUES
IN TRAINING
BEING REHABILITATED
SCARED OR REACTIVE AROUND OTHER DOGS

THANK YOU!
Those of us who own these dogs appreciate your help and respect!

There are some remarkable people in the Beach Cities, people who care about helping others and volunteer their time. We're happy to know them as neighbors and proud to have them participate as part of the Chevron El Segundo Refinery's Community Advisory Panel (CAP). These volunteers help represent the "voice of the community" and meet throughout the year at Chevron to share their thoughts, raise concerns and advise us on our relationship with our neighbors. CAP members work to ensure they are a reflection of the community and when they speak Chevron listens.
