From the Baseball Diamond to the MMA: The Tale of the Boyce Twins

By Duane Plank

I consider myself a mainstream sports guy—baseball, football, hockey, golf, etc. But I am slow to catch on when a newer sport invades the airwaves.

Time to get educated on something new, like the Ultimate Fighting Championship [UFC] and the popular sport of mixed martial arts [MMA]. I was educated by El Segundo High School graduate Wyatt Boyce and his brother, Garrett, that UFC is the umbrella company, the biggest brand in the sport, which runs the actual sport of MMA. Wyatt likened it to the hierarchy of the National Football League. "Football is the sport," he said, "the NFL is the organization."

Both young men played baseball in high school and then enrolled in college to continue pursuing their dreams of a professional baseball career. But Wyatt, who attended West L.A. College and then Chico State University, tore his rotator cuff, said, "throwing a baseball became a real struggle, and over time turned me off to the sport."

Wyatt played baseball and basketball in high school, deciding to focus specifically on baseball during his senior year as an Eagle. Post-graduation, Wyatt bounced around a few collegiate destinations. He attended Cal State Dominguez Hills, played at West Los Angeles College for a year, and ended-up pitching at Chico State University.

He said that many of his performances at Chico State were "rocky," as he had trouble throwing strikes, as well as encountering "some issues" with the head coach. He then moved on to a small Christian school in Orange County, Vanguard University, during the COVID shutdown and pitched for one season.

He suffered his torn rotator cuff while at Vanguard, and while attempting rehab, he "kind of saw the writing on the wall" and became much more interested in following the exploits of the MMA athletes. "I still wanted to be an athlete, [finding] something else that I am passionate about" after hanging up his baseball spikes.

"I got into MMA in late 2020," he said. His interest in so-called combat sports started with "just hitting pads at Rec Park, and after that, I decided to seriously pursue fighting. We began looking for a gym."

He retired from baseball in May of 2021 and has been focused on his MMA training and his 9-5 job as an escrow assistant for Guaranty Escrow for the past year or so.

Wyatt and Garrett live in Manhattan Beach, taking care of their dogs, Zeke and Lamar. Wyatt works in Palos Verdes and trains in Santa Monica. He has been training at the Dynamix MMA gym for a year, with a full schedule of training and recovery. His training includes kickboxing training, wrestling, jiu-jitsu, and a heavy dose of cardio-vascular training. The brothers work with an array of coaches at Dynamix, including Antoni Hardonk and Vladimir Matyushenko.

Wyatt started competing initially in jiu-jitsu competitions, which he categorized as "grappling; you are not getting punched in the face or anything." He reiterated that, as a combat sport participant, "you have two opponents. You must beat the scale the day before and beat the opponent the day of the competition."

Wyatt detailed having an opponent bust his nose in a fight, which does not lend to

Razza Samia

With broken hearts, the family of Razza Samia announce that he passed away on Sunday, June 5, 2022. Born Feb 11, 1970 to John Samia and Cherrie Katayama, Razza lived most of his life in Culver City, graduating from Culver High School in 1988. He spent the next 4 years at UCSB, graduating in 1992 with a degree in Mathematics and Economics. After college he began working for Tecolote Research as a Cost Analyst. While at Tecolote he also attended Long Beach State and earned his MBA in 2000. He became a Director with Tecolote and stayed with this company for the rest of his life.

While school and work were important to Razza, he lived his life as fully as anyone possibly could every single day. This did not change with a cancer diagnosis in 2017. An avid surfer at El Porto since his youth, he surfed whenever the waves were good, regardless of his diagnosis and how he felt physically. Surfing all over the world right up until the end. From Cloudbreak in Fiji to Salina Cruz and his favorite place in the world, Rocky Point on the north shore of Oahu. Hopefully he is now surfing a giant wave, just beyond the horizon. If not, he's found a beautiful golf course or some folks to play beach volleyball with.

Razza leaves behind his wife, Victoria whom he met while at UCSB and his children Jacob (22) and Chloe (20.) Victoria and Razza were together for 29 years and married for 28 so they grew up together. He was the kindest, most caring husband and father imaginable. He thought of Jacob and Chloe as his greatest accomplishments.

Razza also leaves behind many many friends, all of whom he loved dearly. From high school friends to college, work to volleyball and people he knew and loved from here in El Segundo. Razza's friends and family meant everything to him. Many people are feeling this tragic loss today.

Razza would want to be remembered sitting on a beach, watching the waves, waxing up his board and paddling out. With that in mind, in lieu of flowers, the family suggests a donation in Razza's name to The Surfrider Foundation.

A paddle out in Razza's honor will take place at El Segundo beach, just south of the jetty at 10:00 am on Thursday, July 7. •

Wiseburn Da Vinci Wolves Make CIF Finals

Need Help Getting to Tournament

The Wiseburn Da Vinci girls' varsity volleyball team made it to the CIF Southern Section Division 8 finals and qualified for the CIF State Division V Southern Regional Semifinals last fall, making history for the new charter school's athletic program. The team went 10-0 to win the Mulholland

League and had an overall record of 27-7 for the season. The team chemistry is what sets this wolfpack apart. The team doesn't have much height, but they play with heart and are defensively solid. With only three graduated seniors, the returning lady wolves are hungry for more wins!

They made history for the school and the Varsity girls were invited to play in a tournament in Oahu August 16th - August 21st. Sacred Hearts Academy is hosting the tournament. The 16-team tournament will provide a great warm up as the girls enter the higher-level Pioneer league for the fall 2022 season. The coaches believe that this will be a life-changing experience for these student athletes. These girls are hard-working, passionate, and competitive on and off the court. Several of the athletes are looking to play collegiate volleyball at a Hawaiian university.

They had a couple girls who graduated this year, but these are the names of the girls going to Oahu. Isabella, Ilaise, Peyton, Ashlynn, Amasjah, Katana, Mariezl, Malaysia and Gaioi. Coach Jamie Taube and Assistant Coach Mylah.. There are five new players joining the Varsity team this year and will be joining on the Hawaii trip: Maleah Faust (9th), Rya Nelson(9th), Annabelle de Waart (9th), Allie Kim (11th), and Mariah

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I feel like I have been beaten up so much lately. I have not been physically assaulted, but I am subject to a lot of messages from society, work, and even family, about me not mattering as a person. I have enough problems already in my life; the last thing I need is the people who are close to me telling me there’s a problem with the parts of me that I have no control over. Instead, I’ve been feeling a ton of anger lately, and seeing it boil over, too. That doesn’t feel like the “me” that I know very well, but I’m also strangely OK with that. Should I be worried? I’m thinking about this all the time. Should I try to change this? Should I “channel” the anger into something productive?

– So Angry, El Segundo

Dear Angry,

I suppose the proper, most socially acceptable thing to tell you would be that what you need to do is think about the anger that’s affecting you and find other, “healthier” ways to release it. I suppose I should tell you something similar to what we tell our kids: that one good way to handle being attacked is to walk away, turn the other cheek, take the high road - or perhaps, if the offense is great enough, report them to authorities. It’s not horrible advice. But it’s not great, either. Why? Because like most things in life, we want to make it simpler than it is. What are the consequences of telling a teacher, or walking away, or turning the other cheek? What if we don’t believe that will fix the problem?

Life sometimes hands us conflicts we do not seek. It puts in front of us problems which we cannot ignore, either for our own sake or that of the people we love. What do you do when you’re ambushed by a mountain lion on a morning hike? What do you do when you meet the bully when there’s nobody around, and he takes a swing at you?

Anger most often shows up when we believe that one of our values has been violated, and when it comes in too hot, or at unwanted times, it can cause us to behave in ways that cause problems for us and for others. Sometimes anger and rage come on so quickly that we only have time to react, not carefully consider or plan a good response - for example, when we are ambushed with a legitimate threat to our lives, or the lives of our loved ones.

Sometimes, survival doesn’t offer the luxury of turning the other cheek. So we fight for our lives, Righteous Anger right there with us in the trenches, and perhaps even throwing the punches (or sending the emails!) for us. Is this that kind of situation for you? Are you in, in some way, a fight for your life? If the stakes are as high as you imply, then maybe changing the way you feel or finding a “healthy outlet” isn’t the best way to go. If Righteous Anger asked you, “What can I do for you?” what do you think you would say? Can it help you in that way, without taking over your life and getting you into trouble? If so, perhaps Righteous Anger is just the partner you need right now.

Elvis: A Wildly Operatic Bio Pic Fit For A King

By Ryan Rojas, Cinemacy.com

Where to watch: 'Elvis' is now playing in theaters nationwide.

The biggest thought I had while leaving the building after watching Elvis was, “Boy... that was a lot.” Director Baz Luhrmann (Moulin Rouge!) succeeds in bringing the King of Rock and Roll’s outlandish life story to the big screen in the most oversized, music-filled way imaginable. And yet, after being visually overloaded with this hyper-real staging of the rise-and-fall of Elvis Aaron Presley over 159 minutes, I also felt an unexpected solemnity. Surprisingly, an emotional connection had felt experiencing Elvis’s stardom at the time, it’s electric. Going all the way back to seeing a Young Elvis (Chaydon Jay) wander into a Gospel-bumping tent and becoming possessed by the sweat-filled claps and shakes from the African American community, is heart-pounding. Hearing the distortion-laced electric guitar solo that accompanies Elvis’s first dance moves, is gripping. And living through Elvis’s final years, playing out a Vegas residency that would become his elephant’s graveyard, is heartbreaking to watch him shut away in that hotel.

Austin Butler as Elvis is not just good. He very well might have been born to play been forged with the man who, in real life, died a parody of his former self, but who in this sensationally operatic version of a bio-pic remix is given new life in his depiction as a lonely but culture-changing star.

Beyond Elvis’s singular style, the other key device that makes the film more than a traditional bio pic is the story that Luhrmann and Jeremy Doner choose to tell here (both also share screenplay credit with Sam Bromell and Craig Pearce). Elvis is not just the story of the Memphis-born singer only, but also that of his lifelong manipulative manager, Colonel Tom Parker, who many believe was largely responsible for not only Elvis’s fall from grace, but even his premature death. A slippery snake oil salesman whose backstory is as unbelievable as his self-given suffix, “The Colonel” is here played by Tom Hanks (whose combination of prosthetics and ambiguously European accent result in something between Cristoph Waltz and Foghorn Leghorn).

The Colonel’s gleefully mischievous narration that opens the film and pops up throughout feels like a dark wizard ominously stirring a cauldron. We see that Elvis’s story starts where The Colonel’s begins: as a traveling circus leader promoting circus freaks and country singers through rural Americana. Always looking for the next attraction, he nearly dismisses a new Blues artist singing “That’s All Right” on a nearby record player, until he learns with amazement: “He’s whiiiiite?” The potential opportunity for commercial success is instantly sparked, leading to chasing down his new fixation. After seeing young Elvis’s (Austin Butler) power of possession to entrance the youth through his electrically arresting hip-shaking gyrations (which comically recalls 2001’s early ape howls of new self-consciousness), he dangles a career to him like an evil genie. Young and naive and fueled by his love of music, Elvis agrees to The Colonel’s proposal, and it’s off to a future and relationship that would change the world.

Elvis is at its best and most captivating when it’s not narratively bound. Baz Luhrmann’s canvas is not one of realism, but expressionism. When the film wishes show how it might have Elvis in a big screen movie. What’s beyond impressive—besides the fact that Butler is able to talk, sing, and dance like the singer—is that he impersonates the entertainer impeccably at every stage of his life; from early break through, to middling mid-career, to sweat-faced final act. His mannerisms are perfect, and perfect for each stage, turning in a performance that’s nothing short of passionate, committed, and phenomenal.

Now, Elvis is not perfect. The movie is certainly superficial and surface-level, and it really isn’t designed to create nuanced drama. Its first act is wonderful, but when the movie down shifts into its second and third acts, the story loses just a bit of momentum. But Elvis tells the story of an American icon in such a way that gives the man newfound respect, coloring him as a person whose past was more tragic than we knew. By the time the film approaches its finale—the chips of his life in pill-popping disarray—we’re met with one of the most arresting musical sequences in the form of a rendition of Unchained Melody that blends fiction and reality marvelously. During his final public performance, and underneath all the glitz and grandeur, we hear and feel the presence of a young singer who might have only ever wanted to be free.

2h 39m. 'Elvis' is rated PG-13 for substance abuse, strong language, suggestive material and smoking. •

Have You Ever Seen a Flower by Shawn Harris and Trillions of Trees by Kurt Cyrus

By Kristina Kora-Beckman, Senior Librarian, El Segundo Public Library

This week, I’m reviewing two nature related picture books that fit into our summer reading theme, Read Beyond the Beaten Path. Shawn Harris’ Have You Ever Seen a Flower is a gorgeous, lyrical exploration of experiencing nature with all five senses. The story depicts a young girl and her dog as they leave a drab, black and white urban area to investigate a boldly bright field of flowers. The text also follows imaginative paths, asking questions and inviting readers to engage with nature and our relationship with it. I loved the exuberance in the dreamy illustrations and the flow of language, which felt almost poem-like.

In comparison, the pictures in Kurt Cyrus’ Trillions of Trees, are very detailed, and realistic while the rhyming story explores the hilariously fantastic result of a tree order mixup. Trees go everywhere including county parks, orchards, windbreaks, and healing a hillside scarred from a forest fire burn. During the journey, readers learn about all the different ways trees can be used in our urban and rural environments and the benefits that they provide. I loved the playful learning and creative ways Cyrus imparts facts with had no answer for another hot-hitting team and fell 10-0. El Segundo opened the game with a promising first inning. Wyatt Knupfer drew an eight-pitch walk, and Joshua Arieta singled, but PV starter Jacob Matsunaga got Maxwell Adlam to ground out and a strikeout to get out of the inning.

El Segundo starter Quinn Eisner breezed through the first two innings but ran into trouble in the third inning. Palos Verdes scored four runs; three hits highlighted by a three-run home run by Malcolm O'Leo. PVLL added four runs in the fourth and two more in the fifth inning, winning 10-0.

El Segundo never threatened and had just two runners reach second base after the first inning. In the second inning, Cade Maechling singled and advanced on a passed ball. In the fourth inning, Adlam blistered a ball to left-centerfield for a lead-off double but was left stranded.

The 12-year-old All-stars, including Maxwell Adlam, Xavier Gomez, Quinn Eisner, Tyler Brooke, James Tyler, Rishi Nair, Joshua Arieta, Carson Puffer, Cade Maechling, Camden Quaintance, Kyle Cantu, Wyatt Knupfer and Doug Clark will all be moving on to play Babe Ruth League baseball next season.

11-Year-Olds Pick up Where They Left Off

Most of this season's 11-year-old all-stars were teammates as 10-year-old all-stars,

Segundo starter Finley Green got out of the no-out jam with a strike out, a ground out, and finished off the inning by striking out

Declan McRoberts was unhittable in his four innings against Palos Verdes Little League.

Cole Enfield on five pitches. El Segundo tied the game on a mammoth solo home run by Brody Brooks.

In the second inning, El Segundo took a 2-1 lead. Declan McRoberts led the inning off with a single, followed by a single to right field by Quinn Boehle. Colby Lee's problems figuring out PV starter Liam Sanford. El Segundo was held to just six hits, including two doubles by Jaxon Kalish. Kalish's second double drove in Brooks, who had walked in the fifth inning, for a 3-1 lead. McRoberts polished off Palos Verdes by getting Jack Nguyen to ground out and striking out the next two hitters to end the game.

El Segundo advances to tonight's championship game at 5 p.m. against the winner of the PVLL/Hermosa LL game played Tuesday. Should El Segundo lose, they would play an elimination championship game next Tuesday at 5 p.m. The games are being played at Palos Verdes Little League 3801 Via La Selva, Palos Verdes Estates.

10-Year-Olds Hanging on After Wins

El Segundo won their first three games in the District 36 Tournament before falling to Palos Verdes Gold in the winner's bracket final. They will play an elimination game on Friday at 5 p.m. at the Lunada Bay Little League, 2020 Palos Drives West, Palos Verdes Estates • a team that won the Southern California State Tournament at Imperial Beach. ESLL lost just one game last summer on their journey to the league's first Little League state championship.

They have continued their success this season with lopsided wins over Lunada Bay Little League and Hermosa Beach Little League. They met Palos Verdes in the winner's bracket final and defeated the host team 3-1.

PVLL had a potentially big inning in the first inning cut short. Robert Slane singled, Dillon Reddy drew a walk, and Liam Sanford had an RBI single to give his team 1-0. El perfected a sacrifice bunt putting runners on second and third base. Finley Green's ground ball scored McRoberts to give El Segundo a 2-1 lead.

Hard-throwing Declan McRoberts relieved Finley Green on the mound to start the third inning and struck out two of the three batters in the inning. In the fourth inning, PVLL's last runner to reach base was Luke Simonsen who was hit by a pitch. Mc Roberts was dominating and retired the last seven batters in order.

a competitor being all too fired up about quickly jumping back into the ring. “After a fight, you don’t want to get hit in the head,” he said.

An amateur, Wyatt said that his plan is to participate in a couple of fights in 2022 and then compete in “five-to-seven” fights next year, pointing toward becoming a professional MMA fighter. Wyatt said that his first competitive experience was in “several No-Gi Jiu-Jitsu tournaments,” where he took the bronze medal in the Jiu-Jitsu World Leagues San Diego event in January of 2022 in the 208-pound division.

He said that, after training for a year, he had his first two fights in Muay Thai, which is a stand-up style of fighting that originated in Thailand, and that involves “punches, kicks, knees, elbows, and clinch,” which sounds like the shenanigans of a National Hockey League game in the Gordie Howe era.

Wyatt won his first match, which took place in Phoenix, AZ, this April, in less than 90 seconds. He said that there are many different iterations of “striking sports” but that the Dynamix gym focuses on Dutch Kickboxing, with the gym’s head coach, Hardonk, being a former kickboxer from the Netherlands who trained along with kickboxing legends.

Garrett and Wyatt Boyce.

As for Garrett, he also attended West L.A. College and then Cal State Los Angeles University, but when COVID shutdown sports in 2020, he was “having trouble getting the attention of scouts and teams,” he said, which led him to “lose some of the drive and passion for baseball. It was around that time that I fell in love with watching UFC and mixed martial arts.” So, after hanging up his baseball spikes, Garrett said, “I was ready to transition to the MMA immediately.”

After training for a year, Garrett had his first fight in Muay Thai in April of this year, winning by technical knockout in the Phoenix contest.

Garrett is eager to continue his progression in his newfound passion. “I am going to have a few more Kickboxing fights,” he said, “before transitioning into MMA sometime next year, where I will then [hopefully] continue to progress and get closer to my dream of being a professional kickboxer/martial artist.” Garrett said he was inspired by the exploits of MMA legend Conor McGregor and tried to figure out a way to start and excel in the sport and began, like his brother, hitting the pads at Rec Park.

Garrett said that his first fight was a Muay Thai bout in Phoenix in April 2022. He won the bout, calling it the “most exhausting workout of my life,” noting that the fight lasted only four minutes and included a break. He recounted one fight he won, where his opponent had suffered a cracked orbital bone and was seeing double. “I don’t like hurting people,” Garrett said, “but it is cool to win.” He said that being in a fight does not necessarily make for a memorable moment; he typically cannot recall “seventy-five percent” of the battle, calling it “kind of a blur.” It is a unique experience,” he said. “I really like it, and at the same time, I don’t. I like it more than I hate it, so it is OK.”

As for the MMA skill of brother Garrett, Wyatt said, “I always make fun of him, [telling] him that he is a bad grappler, because he is much more focused on Kickboxing. I make jokes that he is terrified of getting taken down.”

Asked to comment on his brother’s MMA skills, Garrett said, “If we went one-on-one, just in Kickboxing, I would knock him out,” while calling his brother “a great grappler.”

“But if it were just Kickboxing,” Garrett said, I would knock him out for sure. I would not want to, but I would.”

No one knows what the future holds, but if the Boyce brothers continue pursuing MMA stardom, you may turn on the tube in the upcoming years and watch a fight with the marquee outside the arena touting the epic bought Boyce vs. Boyce. They could hold the contest in Philadelphia, the city of Brotherly Love? •

And the Winner is Garrett Boyce.

Wyatt Boyce in Training.

“The essence of America, that which really unites us, is not ethnicity or nationality or religion. It is an idea, and what an idea it is — that you can come from humble circumstances and do great things.”
