New El Segundo City Manager Views Role as All About the Team

By Brian Simon

It may have gone unnoticed by most, but when the El Segundo City Council members decided to wear Hawaiian shirts for their July 16 session, they were not alone in the fashion choice. Newly appointed City Manager Scott Mitnick, in his council meeting debut, joined them in colorful island garb of his own. It was a small, but notable act of solidarity and part of a team-player philosophy that Mitnick hopes will serve the City of El Segundo well as he begins his tenure here. “I am a big believer in the use of teams, especially the ‘executive team’ of department heads, and I practice the participatory management style of leadership,” he said.

In addition to promoting a hands-on, collaborative approach, Mitnick also operates under a mantra that considers the end game before he even gets started: The Athenian Oath, found on the front lobby wall inside the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs main building at Syracuse University (where Mitnick earned his MPA degree), states the following: “We will transmit this city not only not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us.”

The words above serve as Mitnick’s guiding principle to leave a place better off than it was when he arrived. “I chose local government as a career to be able to have a positive impact on the community and to comply with the ideals of the Athenian Oath,” he said. He also gravitated towards this career path thanks to the influence of his uncle Stuart Rappaport – the longtime assistant public defender for Los Angeles County and later public defender for Santa Clara County. As a kid growing up in La Habra, Mitnick was continually fascinated when his uncle told stories about various case assignments. The elder’s passion and enthusiasm for criminal justice inspired the nephew to initially pursue a career as a public defender.

But Mitnick ultimately altered course after spending time at Bristol University in England studying philosophy and politics. Upon his return to the States to complete his senior year, he landed an internship in Brea’s city manager’s office that proved to be both highly rewarding and eye-opening. Mitnick became hooked on city government and has never looked back since. His resume includes more than 30 years of local government management experience, with 21 of those at the executive level and 11 as a city manager – holding the fort for the municipalities of Thousand Oaks, Yuba City and Burbank. Mitnick additionally spent two years as the county administrator for Sutter County in Northern California. He also dabbled in the private sector with positions as a director/financial advisor with KNN Public Finance in Oakland and as managing director/investment banker with Stifel, Nicolaus & Company in Downtown Los Angeles.

Looking at his career highlights, Mitnick pointed to his selection as the city manager of Thousand Oaks in 2005 during a very difficult period. “I was proud to bring political and managerial stability there and build a first-rate organization over a decade... successfully leading and navigating through the Great Recession and helping this city to obtain a general fund AAA bond rating,” he said. Mitnick also reported successes in managing Sutter County, noting that he took a “dysfunctional group and made it a highly successful team.”

While in Thousand Oaks, Mitnick also spearheaded the adoption of a 10-year financial strategic plan. He said he appreciates the El Segundo City Council’s commitment to its own long-term strategy that aims to achieve five major objectives. But when asked to draw the closest comparison to his previous stints, Mitnick was quick to mention that El Segundo is most similar to Burbank where he spent the first seven years of his career after graduating from Syracuse University in 1989. “El Segundo is a diamond in the rough with an incredibly bright future,” he said. “City staff are amazing and committed to making El Segundo a stronger community. The community is awesome with a long history of independence and a really strong sense of place and self-confidence.”

El Segundo’s inherent appeal prompted Mitnick to leave a private sector job he enjoyed. “I accepted the position due to the unique nature of El Segundo, forward-thinking city council, high-caliber executive team, and exciting future for the community and organization,” he said. “I am honored to be back in a city manager position and in a profession that I sincerely love. Public service is a privilege and being selected as this community’s city manager is an honor.”

Though inundated with work from the get-go, Mitnick described his first two weeks on the job in El Segundo as an “awesome”

Feels Threatened

Congratulations to the El Segundo Museum of the arts in consortium with the Los Angeles Public Library on bringing our little town to the pinnacle of cultural renaissance. What a novel idea to turn little Mayberry, El Segundo, into Sodom and Gomorrah by bringing in A Drag Queen, named Pickle, to read to 30 children, ages 3-8, during story hour at the Museum of Art. The Daily Breeze declared in its headline that the event was praised so I guess I have to ask who might the brain-dead adults be that praised this event. These parents, the library, and above all the El Segundo Museum of the arts should be charged with child endangerment for subjecting these precious beautiful naïve children to listening to a story and questions answered by a person who is proud to declare he does not even know how to dress or which sex he/she belongs to. What is next, pimp and prostitute or transgender story time? Is there any doubt why our kids are so mentally and emotionally screwed up today. There is no reason for young children to have to try to understand the sexual and psychological fantasies and hang-ups presented to them at story time by a drag queen. Where is the common sense that is so sorely needed to protect our children today? I beg you, please let these children enjoy their naïveté and Innocence during these early years of their lives.

A Bird in the Hand Is Worth a Lot

Story and Photos by Cyndi Myatt

Recently, I was walking along Main Street and I heard a number of birds loudly chirping. I looked around to see what all the noise was about and noticed a baby bird on the sidewalk in front of the jewelry store. It had fallen out of the nest (over 20 feet above) from under one of the tiles on the roof of the building. The mommy bird was chirping to her baby and the baby would answer. They went back and forth constantly. I could see the mother up above (her head sticking out from under the tile) frantically calling for her baby. Two other sparrows also stood by watching over the baby and chirping. Possibly one was the father.

All alone and away from Mommy

The animals in El Segundo are a part of our community and sometimes they (like humans) need help. So I walked over to the fire department and told the receptionist about the situation and soon after, the fire captain on duty (Capt. Bonfield) came out and I told him about the baby bird. Capt. Bonfield, being an animal lover, could see how upset the mother was. He determined that they would need the firetruck ladder to get the baby safely back in the nest. In about 15 minutes, the firetruck was there along with five crew members. They rounded up the baby bird and put it in the pocket of the fireman pocket who would be climbing the ladder from the truck.

By this time there were about 20 people gathered around to see what the commotion was about. It took about 10 minutes after they got the truck and ladder positioned to get the baby bird back in the nest with mommy.

Everyone on the ground clapped and I saw tears in the eyes of more than a few onlookers (including my own). It was heart-warming to see our fire department take the time to help a helpless bird and its family reunite. The baby bird would otherwise have died with the parents helplessly standing by. •

Pullen-Miles Sees Role as Mentor Like a Father Figure

By Haleemon Anderson

Lawndale Mayor Robert Pullen-Miles books a casual photo shoot and makes plans to take along his youngest daughter, a budding photographer. Sienna, 10, will get to snap a few shots under the watchful eye of a professional photographer, who just happens to be the mayor’s neighbor.

The mayor is big on this type of mentoring. In fact, he has emerged as a go-to advisor for a number of local women in their political careers. Pullen-Miles says this penchant for mentoring female candidates developed organically. “When I first started in politics, most of the people who helped me along the way were women,” said Pullen-Miles. He mentions Gardena civic leaders Laverne Knight and Ethel Barnes as early advisors.

He spent seven years under the tutelage of the late Jenny Oropeza, a beloved local leader. “I had the opportunity to work for her in the assembly and the senate,” he said. “I was on her staff when I ran for Lawndale [City Council].

He says moving from staff to an elected office widened his perspective. “A lot of my support came from women... so when other people came on the scene, I gravitated to them naturally,” said Pullen-Miles. I didn’t come into it saying, ‘I’m going to help women.’ It just shaped up that way.”

Indeed, Pullen-Miles’ influence has helped shape the careers of a number of local women in all facets of political engagement. Melissa Ramoso, a councilmember in the city of Artesia, says his friendship was really inspiring in her early campaign. “When I first ran five years ago, he came to my kick-off,” she said. It’s very supportive to have a colleague come out for you like that.”

“She’s a go-getter,” said Pullen-Miles. Ramoso was unsuccessful in her first council bid, but Pullen-Miles had her back. “We knew she just needed to hang in there. What I admired about her, she’s a fighter. She didn’t give up.”

Ramoso was elected to the Artesia City Council last year in an historic bid, as the first woman on the board. After a career spanning 14 years at the federal and state level, Pullen-Miles said he always knew Ramoso would be an elected official.

Ramoso added that Pullen-Miles is always available when she needs advice. “I have known him to be personable and knowledgeable in our field of public service,” she said. “He is always willing to help you find a solution to any issue at hand.”

Christina Carroll, a recent Lawndale transplant, is just beginning her civic career. A true “military brat,” she was born on a naval base in Portsmouth, Virginia. Pullen-Miles appointed Carroll to Lawndale’s Parks and Recreation Commission after seeing her at community events. He said Carroll’s energy and personality are a perfect fit for that committee. “It puts you directly into the community,” he said.

Pullen-Miles believes Carrol has the right composure to eventually hold public office. “She’s another young woman who is very tenacious,” he said. “She’s taken a leadership

Correction

July 18 Council Article Correction and Explanation

In my El Segundo City Council recap for the July 18 edition, I mistakenly reported that Councilmember Scot Nicol found it troubling that the eight future “lottery” winners who would purchase moderate-income units on the D.R. Horton residential complex on Imperial Avenue could be left hanging if there are problems and the developer leaves town after completing construction. In fact, Nicol’s concern is for the neighboring property owners on Sheldon Street currently dealing with civil matters with D.R. Horton because of alleged damages resulting from the nearby housing development construction.

During the meeting, Nicol asked for and received confirmation from City Attorney Mark Hensley that the City of El Segundo has no jurisdiction to intervene in civil disputes between D.R. Horton and the neighboring (Sheldon) residents. Hensley further verified that D.R. Horton can complete its project and leave town with those civil matters still lingering and the developer would have no obligation to remedy those issues -- unless the individual homeowners pursue legal action on their own. This scenario is what Nicol found troubling.

In any case, I stand corrected and regret the error...

Following Up On All-Star Teams

Story and Photos by Gregg McMullin

Two El Segundo Little League (ESLL) all-star teams fell in the Little League Section 4 tournament and their season has come to an end, albeit with some controversy and drama. The 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars are enjoying their trip to the Pacific Southwest Regional in Price, Utah and the American Legion team's season ended with two losses in the Pacific League tournament. Two EL Segundo softball all-star teams are competing at Western National Tournaments.

ESLL 11s Fall

El Segundo faced West L.A. Little League in the first round of the Section 4 All-Star Tournament. ESLL's touted offense was kept in check with just four hits and fell 4-0. Joaquin Wagner-Bagues, Lincoln Quaintance, Jaiden Rico and Andre Sugden each had hits while Townes Potter took the loss.

El Segundo bounced back against Westchester LL in a big way with an 11-0 win. Wagner-Bagues and Sugden combined on a three-hitter while striking out six. The offense came alive with a seven-run fourth inning highlighted by Spencer Osborne, Quaintance, Sugden and Potter each driving in runs. Shaun Conley, Jamie Owen and Osborne led the offense with two hits each.

In the elimination final, El Segundo couldn't hold off West L.A. LL and lost 11-7. ESLL role on the commission. While she’s figuring out what she wants to do, I’ve told her to just enjoy the journey.”

City commissioners in Lawndale serve in volunteer positions, as does the mayor. Carroll juggles various paying gigs around the South Bay, including hosting duties at several restaurants.

Pullen-Miles holds a full-time staff position as the district director for Assemblywoman Autumn Burke. It’s in this capacity that he met yet another mentee, Inglewood School Board member Dionne Faulk. Ms. Faulk was working with Burke’s staff when she met Pullen-Miles. They’ve been friends ever since, he said, consulting back and forth on special projects and important events to attend.

Already super engaged in the community, Faulk had experience working with unions, sororities and the national education organization, Jack and Jill of America, Inc. She sat on the advisory board for Measure GG. That successful initiative brought $90 million in state funded new construction and modernization projects for Inglewood schools. Prior to that, Faulk was employed for over 13 years at the Consumer Affairs Department, in the Bureau of Real Estate.

Having lost her first election for Inglewood School Board, Ms. Faulk had something in common with Ms. Ramoso. She also turned to Mayor Pullen-Miles for advice. “The mayor recommended events, activities and to-do tasks to enhance my political knowledge and experience,” said Faulk. “He walked the district with me when I was campaigning. He has always been very supportive.”

With her two children attending Inglewood schools, Faulk knew she wanted to be in a position to make change. “I wanted to help make the schools better. I thought, what better way to get involved with the district,” said Faulk.

Ms. Faulk had to get engaged with the community even more. “I had all the makings of a great campaign, including the support of local officials,” she said. “But I needed to focus on engaging the voters.” That made the difference. She was elected to the board in 2017.

Pullen-Miles describes Faulk as “focused.” He says she is especially in tune with the community. “She has the children of Inglewood at heart and wants to do other things in the community,” he said. “I definitely see her in elected office, at the city council or state level.”

Praise for the mayor and his leadership style is equally magnanimous. Faulk says the mayor surprises people. “He appears to be unassuming, but he is strategic and all of his moves are calculated,” said Faulk. “His personality is to quietly work hard to accomplish his goals and when no one is paying attention, he surprises everyone.”

Faulk says the mayor’s support makes a difference navigating the political terrain of a historically male-dominated field. “There is a double standard; it’s a challenge for a strong and assertive woman. If you smile a lot, you’re too nice,” said Faulk.

Ramoso describes some of her challenges. “The biggest challenge I have faced is being a young woman of color in politics,” she said. “It has been my experience where I was always seen first as an assistant, a secretary or my boss’ wife and never as a senior staff member or director of an office.”

Pullen-Miles notes that there are real challenges for female leaders. “One of the inherent challenges, obviously, is there are not as many [women] in office, elected or appointed,” he said. “That is a disadvantage from the start.”

But the mayor says his role as a mentor only helps elevate women to positions in which they naturally excel. “People gravitate to males, so it can be a challenge -- but people recognize females as viable candidates when they do step out,” he said. “They can be just as successful as their male counterparts.”

Assemblywoman Autumn Burke had this to say about Mayor Pullen-Miles: “Robert has served as an invaluable mentor and coach to a number of young professionals who have interned in my district office. My staff and interns have benefited greatly from his career guidance and assistance with their professional development.”

The mayor’s mindset of female empowerment may well be homegrown. With three daughters at home, he and Lawndale First Lady Lena are fulltime mentors to photographer Sienna, high schooler Samara and college sophomore Sade.

There’s one quality Pullen-Miles points out that he observes in his protegees, which he believes may be a wholly female trait: “Women tend to follow up,” he said. “I know the investment in time and advice is going to yield results.” •

Facing the Music in David Crosby: Remember My Name

By Jane Greenstein for Cinemacy

How is David Crosby still alive? The mystery of how the singer has conquered drug addiction, multiple health scares, jail time and heartbreak will undoubtedly draw fans to David Crosby: Remember My Name. Confronting his mortality, Crosby, 77 – previously part of two supergroups The Byrds and Crosby, Stills & Nash (and sometimes Young) – is here to make peace and offer something of a mea culpa.

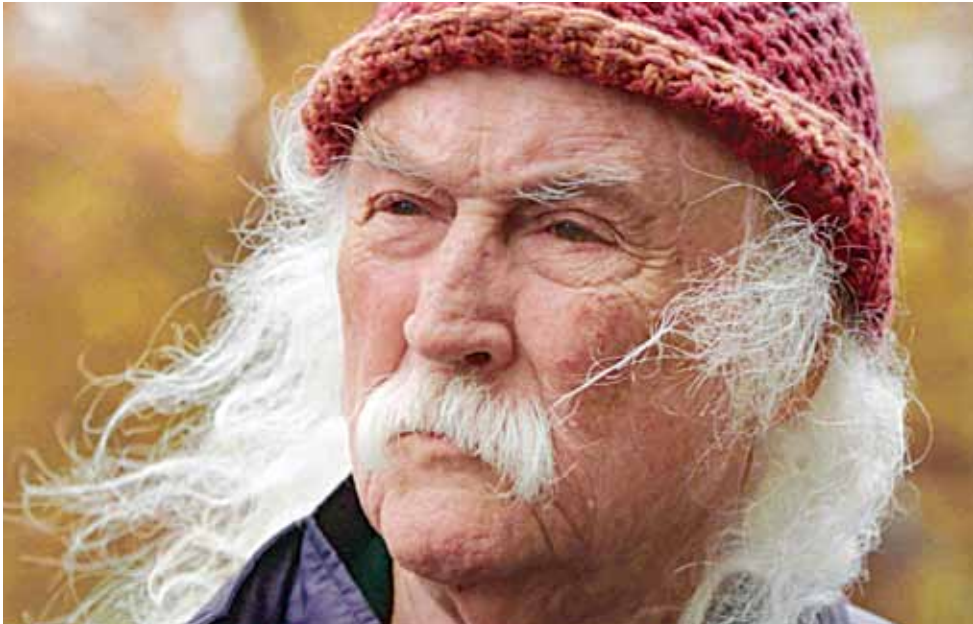

On the receiving end of Crosby's warts-and-all confessions is Almost Famous writer, director, and rock journalist Cameron Crowe, who was drafted by Eaton to coax the talkative Crosby into baring his soul. There is a lot to cover besides Crosby's rock 'n roll stardom, including his arrest on weapons and drug charges in the 1980s, and his 32-year marriage to adoring wife Jan Dance -- also a recovering addict. One foot in the past and the other in the Major life events don't even garner a mention, including Crosby's liver transplant in 1994 that occurred within months of his reunion with a son who was given up for adoption 32 years prior. Crosby also served as the sperm donor for singer Melissa Etheridge, resulting in two more children. Crosby's complicated family tree could be a movie itself.

At the film's end, you're left to decide how you feel about Crosby and whether he's sufficiently made amends. Indeed, of all the recent music films that came out this year capturing the 1970s musical landscape -- from Amazing Grace to Echo in the Canyon -- the one that Remember My Name shares a common lineage is, bear with me, the over-the-top biopic Rocketman. Crosby and Elton John burned bright in the 1970s and went down strikingly similar paths. Both speak of their loveless fathers and find solace and redemption through music. Both men achieve massive stardom and succumb to drug addiction before coming out the other side.

These films ask us to either empathize with or at the very least better tolerate the havoc their subjects wreaked (on themselves and others.) Whereas Rocketman concludes with a montage of John's triumphs since sobriety, we're just grateful at the end of Remember My Name that Crosby is alive to sing another day. That, the filmmakers seem to say, is enough. •

David Crosby: Remember My Name, Courtesy of Sony Pictures Classics

Director A.J. Eaton's documentary opens with Crosby sprawled on the couch, therapy-style, humorously recounting a drug-addled encounter with legendary jazz musician John Coltrane in the bathroom at one of the saxophonist's gigs. But Crosby isn't here to dish about his famous friends. Instead, he focuses on making amends to his family, both biological and musical.

present, the time not with Crowe is spent on a road trip with Crosby driving to pivotal places along his musical superhighway. These include stops on the Sunset Strip, a reluctant trip up Laurel Canyon, and to Kent State, Ohio.

Despite all the fertile material, Remember My Name may disappoint some by what's omitted:

picked the wrong time for its defense to defy it. West L.A. scored two unearned in the first inning to take a 2-0 lead. ESLL countered by scoring four runs highlighted by RBIs by Cole Knupfer, Rico, and Quaintance to give the team a 4-2 lead.

In the second inning, Cole Englehardt hit a ball that was misplayed in centerfield and he wound up on second base. He later scored on an RBI single by Knupfer and Rico drove him in two batters later to make it 6-2. Quaintance's RBI double in the fourth extended his team's lead to 7-2. West L.A. tied the game with a five-run fifth inning. West L.A. took advantage of a walk, hit batter and an error and went on to score four runs in the sixth inning. ESLL had no answer and fell 11-7.

The game wasn't without controversy. West L.A. fans continued to taunt El Segundo players throughout the game. Their coaching staff constantly argued unarguable plays or pitches that disrupted play and El Segundo's momentum. It was seemingly a Bush League style of play by the host team, but El Segundo's players took the high road and played through with class.

ESLL 10s Fall in Final

El Segundo's talented 10s entered the Section 4 tournament on a roll fresh off their District 36 championship. With four players including Chase Mattoon, Gio Blanco, Ryan Wiacek and Jordan Slavens on last year's team that reached the Southern California Tournament, El Segundo was considered a favorite to win a second consecutive Section 4 championship.

In the opener after spotting West L.A. a 2-0 lead, El Segundo came roaring back with a 12-2 win. ESLL put together a seven-run fourth inning highlighted by Sebastian Gomez, Camden Quaintance, Slavens and Wiacek who each drove in runs. El Segundo ace Slavens started and gave way to Wiacek and Blanco to finish so each could be used in remaining games.

There's a reason why El Segundo and Torrance have a friendly rivalry at the high school level in all sports. It stems from teams from each city facing off at a young age and in this case Little League baseball. Torrance's offensive talented lineup was too much for El Segundo and won 10-0.

ESLL bounced back against West L.A. in an elimination game by easily winning 6-1. In the third inning Slavens and Wiacek each singled and scored on Mattoon's double. Mattoon would later score on a ground ball for a 3-0 lead. In the fifth inning Wiacek reached on an error, Mattoon drew a seven-pitch walk and Blanco's ground ball was mishandled. All three ended up scoring to make it 6-0. West L.A.'s only run came in the sixth inning on a sacrifice fly.

ESLL and Torrance met for the Section 4 title with the winner advancing to the Little League Southern California championship tournament. Since Torrance was undefeated, ESLL would need to win two games to advance. El Segundo won a thrilling controversy-filled first game 7-6, but fell in the championship game 10-5.

El Segundo jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead in the first game. Wiacek and Blanco each walked and Wyatt Francis and Camden Quaintance each had RBI singles. Francis would score on a passed ball.

In the third inning Torrance's Dominic Golea's RBI single made it 3-1. Torrance took a 6-3 lead in the fourth inning on back-to-back RBI hits by Goleia and Gibson Turner. El Segundo countered with two runs of its own when Quaintance doubled and Tyler Brooke singled. Both scored on a two-run double by Wiacek to make it 6-5.

In the controversial sixth inning with two outs Slavens singled, took second base on a passed ball and scored on Wiacek's RBI double to tie the game. Mattoon followed with a slow ground ball to shortstop. With Wiacek running, Mattoon reached first base on a close play. The call by the umpire was delayed momentarily and then called safe. Wiacek continued running and headed for the plate. Torrance first baseman Aiden Anaya threw to the plate, but Wiacek beat the throw and slid under the tag for a 7-6 El Segundo win. Afterwards the Torrance players were obviously upset, but the Torrance parents began spewing obscenities over what they thought was a poor umpiring call.

In the championship game, Torrance took an early 4-0 lead in the first inning and won 10-5. Torrance took advantage of a double steal and four hits to take the early lead. El Segundo countered with a second inning run. With a 4-0 lead, Torrance played the infield in with a runner on third base in the second inning. Francis was aboard on a fielder's choice and scored on a ground ball. If it weren't for two strikeouts that followed, El Segundo could have had a big inning.

In the third inning El Segundo closed the deficit when Slavens singled, Wiacek walked and both scored on Blanco's double off the centerfield fence to make it 4-3. In the fourth inning, Torrance's Anaya hit a three-run home run for an 8-3 lead. The lead was extended to 10-3 in the fifth inning on Dominic Golea's two-run single.

El Segundo wouldn't go quietly in the sixth inning. Gomez walked and scored on Slavens' ground ball. Mattoon's RBI double made it 10-5 before Torrance closed out the game.

Legion Season Ends

The American Legion Blues played .500 ball during the Pacific League this summer. They played in the postseason tournament with the winner advancing to the American Legion State tournament in Yountville. Unfortunately, the Blues came up short and were eliminated.

Babe Ruth 13s Playing in Pacific Southwest Regional

El Segundo started play in the Babe Ruth League 13-Year-Old Pacific Southwest Regional in Price, Utah this week. They faced Eastside Babe Ruth of Carbon, Utah in the first round this past Monday. The tournament sends the winner to the Babe Ruth League World Series in Westfield, Massachusetts starting Aug. 8.

Softball All-Stars Head to Western National Tournaments

In the 14u division, El Segundo is competing at the Western Nationals in Redding, CA. this week. The tournament started Tuesday and runs through Sunday. El Segundo has had recent success in this prestigious tournament, finishing second. With a deep pitching staff and a hitting lineup that averaged eight runs per game at the State Tournament, this team is poised to compete for a Western National Championship title.

In the 12u division, El Segundo advanced to the Western National Tournament in Medford, Oregon next week (July 29-Aug. 4). They advanced after overcoming a tough first round loss to North-Shore of San Diego. El Segundo survived four elimination games to advance and compete in a championship field of 33 teams representing Hawaii, Idaho, Washington, Montana, Oregon and California. •

Backyard Projects To Get The Family Outside

(BPT) - Want to get the kids away from screens and outside for some fresh air? Many outdoor projects will not only lure your whole family outdoors once the jobs are completed, but the family may actually want to help you.

Here are five ideas for outdoor projects everyone will love.

1. Make a backyard movie theater

Who wouldn't love watching movies under the stars? You'll need a DVD projector and a large screen. You can use a large drop cloth or blackout cloth stretched over a PVC frame or between two trees for a screen, if you've got them. Stretch it taut and secure so it doesn't move with every breeze mid-movie. Provide plenty of blankets or rugs and pillows so everyone can relax during the movie, and pop up some popcorn! You can rent a projector, collapsible screen and popcorn machine. Visit RentalHQ.com to find rental companies near you.

2. Build wooden benches

For kids - and grownups - who aren't keen on lying on the grass to relax, offer outdoor seating options in shady spots. Sturdy wooden benches are not hard to build, and there are plenty of templates online for different approaches. One creative method is to build a bench around the trunk of a favorite large tree. Get kids involved in helping with construction and painting. Supply cushions for a comfy, shady spot for kids to read, talk and daydream.

3. Get out the s'mores

Fire pits are all the rage, and for good reason. They're easy to make, and people love gathering around a fire to roast marshmallows and enjoy a summer evening. You'll need to check local ordinances regarding fires before can make it any shape - round, square or rectangular. Using heavy stones and bricks is an easier task if you have - or rent - a wheelbarrow or cart for transporting materials.

4. Create a playhouse or gazebo works best for your space and skill level. If you can, build a screened-in structure to keep the bugs out for maximum comfort. You will need to purchase lumber for your posts, floor, joists and beams, but again, you can keep the design to a simple rectangle or square to make the job easier. Tools you will need include a miter saw, jigsaw and power drill. If you don't have all these power tools, you can rent the equipment you need for construction.

5. Put up a tree swing

If you've got an older but sturdy, healthy tree with a good-sized horizontal branch, this could be a great spot for a tree swing. Make sure the branch is long enough to occasionally relocate the swing, to prevent damage to the tree. You can make either a simple disk-shaped swing with a single rope, or a traditional rectangular swing with 2-4 ropes. There are plenty of home improvement websites offering rope swing designs. You'll want to use strong rope, such as a 3/4-inch twisted polypropylene rope. Tools you may need include a handsaw or miter saw, a sander, a power screwdriver and power drill.

The entire family will find renewed interest in spending time together outdoors with your creative additions to the yard. Now is a great time to start a fun new project - before the summer flies by. Visit RentalHQ.com to locate all the tools you need, so you don't have to buy items you may rarely use. *

you begin. Pick a spot well away from bushes or foliage, with no overhanging branches or structures. You should also call 811 to check that there are no underground utility cables where you're building. Fire pits can be dug into the ground, at ground level or raised slightly above ground level. Materials vary, but include stone, brick or metal, and you

To attract everyone in the family, create a little outdoor space for kids to play in or for adults to enjoy a beverage and relax. Depending on the size and design of your project, this can be a straightforward build or a more complicated structure. Online templates can give you ideas for different design options, so you can choose what
