City Council Continues to Hammer Out Final Details on TopGolf

By Brian Simon

On Tuesday night, the El Segundo City Council (with Mayor Pro Tem Drew Boyles absent) received updates on the final group of revisions to the due diligence agreement with CenterCal Properties regarding the long-pending TopGolf project. The goal was to iron out any lingering sticking points before a first reading on September 5 and final vote on TopGolf on October 3. Mission almost accomplished.

While the group agreed on other lease revisions summarized by City Attorney Mark Hensley, one item remained unresolved after a lengthy discussion. According to Mayor Suzanne Fuentes, TopGolf at the beginning of the negotiation process committed to paying two golf professionals during the six-month construction hiatus as a way to ensure those individuals stay on and don't leave for another golf course. TopGolf's point person at the time, Randy Starr, was reportedly impressed with the Good Swings Happen (kids instruction) program at The Lakes at El Segundo and wished to keep that in place. Fuentes reported that Starr's eventual successor also reiterated the commitment to the pros.

Fast forward to earlier this month when there was a major change announced to the agreement (negotiated by the Golf Course Subcommittee) to have golf pros work under the City's auspices instead of TopGolf's supervision. In relinquishing control, TopGolf no longer felt it should be obligated to pay the pros.

Further details came to light on this matter on Tuesday. TopGolf's Mark Foster explained that his company's position is that the golf pros are independent contractors and there is no guarantee they will stay on at the El Segundo facility even if compensated during the months the golf course is closed. The reluctance to pay them was "because of their ability to go elsewhere," according to Foster, who added that TopGolf did make an employment offer to "some people" that was not accepted.

Good Swings Happen Director Josh Alpert confirmed he had a meeting with Starr five years ago when the latter told him that if TopGolf got the go-ahead on the project, it "would be in a position to do a make-you-whole kind of a thing." Alpert said there have been no discussions since, but did see a description of an employment opportunity from Foster. He went on to explain that the preference not to be an employee was not any negative reflection on TopGolf, but on the desire to "teach the game of golf in as true a setting" as possible.

Iffy Weather Expected for Monday's Solar Eclipse

By Rob McCarthy

South Bay residents should get the first peek of a solar eclipse that hasn't been seen in North America in nearly a century, though they may need to head inland to catch it. The National Weather Service has forecast partly sunny skies and patchy fog along the coast for The Great American Eclipse of 2017, which starts at 9 a.m. Monday and will last about three hours. Solar eclipses aren't rare. However, this celestial event is different.

Solar eclipses happen every 12 to 18 months, but Monday will mark the first time since 1979 that an eclipse will be visible across the entire country. It is a total eclipse, but only along a 70-mile band running from Oregon to South Carolina, according to published reports. Here in the South Bay, the eclipse will be noticeable at 9:05 a.m. and be fullest at 10:21 a.m. when the moon passes between the earth and sun. At its peak, the eclipse will block 70 percent of the sun and create a halo effect across the region. The visible band of sunlight is considered dangerous to look at without protective eyewear. Special solar-viewing glasses are recommended and available at retail stores. Sunglasses do not provide enough eye protection from the eclipse's damaging rays.

Betty Lou Powell

Betty Lou Powell, age 88, of El Segundo, CA. passed away on August 1, 2017. She was born January 10, 1929 in Pittsburgh PA and was the daughter Elizabeth Schweitzer. Betty graduated from Wesleyville High School and attended Slippery Rock College. She was a life member of the Order of the Eastern Star. Betty moved to California in 1966 with her husband Jim and son Chris and made their home in El Segundo. Betty was very proud to have been a 50 year+ resident of El Segundo. She enjoyed working as a shipping clerk at Continental Airlines for over twenty years until retiring to care for her mother.

Betty was preceded in death by her loving and caring husband of 62 years Jim Powell. Betty is survived by her son, Chris, daughter in law Jeanie, three wonderful grandchildren Jeff, Kenny, and Amy, and her great granddaughter Kira Riley Powell who was born the day after Betty's passing. Her family was the joy and love of her life. She was a loyal member of St. Michael the Archangel Episcopal Church where she had many wonderful friends and served in the church choir for many years and helped with the church newsletter. She was an avid sports fan and never missed watching her favorite teams, especially the Los Angeles Lakers.

A memorial service will be held Thursday September 7th at St Michael's Church, 361 Richmond Street at 11:00 A.M. In lieu of flowers donations may be made to in her memory to St Michael's Church and designated to either the "Adeline Crable Music Fund" or to "Family Promise of the South Bay" to help shelter and feed homeless families in the South Bay. •

How to Control the Problem of Small Dog Syndrome

By Dr. Greg Perrault

Mark Twain famously said, "It's not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog." If you own a small dog, you may have observed this phenomenon. Why do small dogs seem to want to pick fights with much larger dogs? Why do they act like a Great Dane packed into a five-pound body? Why are they so yappy and bossy? There is even a name for this behavior and it's called Small Dog Syndrome or SDS. There are theories on why SDS occurs, but many behaviorists and trainers believe it's the fault of their owners. After researching SDS for this article and being an owner of a small dog, I can say I may be guilty of doing some of these things.

The main reason for SDS appears to be allowing a smaller dog to behave in ways we would not tolerate from a large dog. The "traits" that we give little dogs may actually be learned behavior and not in their genes. The dominant behavior of little dogs is seen as cute rather than threatening and they often are allowed to run up to people or bark at them, for instance. Little dogs may pull on the leash when walking because they are too small to really knock you down. But allowing these behaviors may embolden them and reinforce their dominant behaviors.

Behaviorists advise using positive reinforcement training with treats and praise. Getting down to the little dog's level when giving instruction may be helpful. Teaching tricks such as paw shakes for treats can be a fun way to reinforce discipline. Ask your veterinarian to refer you to a trainer or behaviorist to help with difficult cases.

Avoiding SDS in your little dog may also save his life.

When little dogs encounter larger dogs on a walk, SDS can lead to a lopsided and brief battle that usually does not favor the little dog. Serious injury, or in some cases death, can happen in a blink of an eye.

One way to avoid conflicts is by staying alert and keeping your dog under a short leash and voice control at all times. You can take the additional step of not allowing your dog to look or sniff at another dog.

Teaching a dog early on that he can't visit with every other dog he meets is one good way owners can prevent leash aggression. Teach the dog not to pull on the leash, and to sit and wait for permission before greeting another dog. Basic obedience training can help prevent fights.

Along with leashing and good training, owners can avoid conflicts by keeping their pets from roaming, neutering young dogs before six months of age, and socializing their dogs during the critical puppyhood stage between six to eight weeks of age.

Even if you follow all the rules, many fights occur with little warning. Watch for these behavioral cues to see if a fight is imminent:

- A hard, unwavering, targeted stare
 - Dominance posturing, such as mounting
 - Stiff body movements
 - Extreme body language: the tail held stiffly up or down, lips pulled tight against the teeth
- Dogfights can occur between any dogs, not just little dogs with SDS. We are a very dog-friendly city and we like to take our dogs with us to enjoy the great Southern California weather. We all love our dogs big or small. Let's keep them as safe and healthy as we can.

Andrew Graven Earns Eagle Rank for Boy Scout Troop 267

One of the oldest Boy Scout troops in the South Bay can boast another troop member earning his Eagle rank. Earning the rank of Eagle is one of the most prestigious and special moments for a scout. Since 1912, when Arthur Eldred earned the first Eagle Scout ranking, one President and 38 astronauts have also earned the top ranking of the Boy Scouts of America.

In 1924 El Segundo started Troop 267 and is one of the oldest troops in the district. Since its first meeting 93 years ago Troop 267 has pinned 75 Eagle scouts. George Eason was the first one to earn his way onto a special plaque inscribed with all 75 Eagle scouts including its latest one, Andrew Graven.

Graven started his scouting 12 years ago and went through the journey. Throughout his scouting career he fulfilled all the requirements including his Eagle project. His Eagle project was building a catapult that studied speed, angle, distance, force and other measurements when an object was fired from it on a football field.

Andrew Graven follows in the footsteps of his grandfather and father who also had successful scouting careers. He will attend Cornell University in the fall studying math and computer science.

El Camino College to Present New Student Welcome Day 2017

Incoming El Camino College students are encouraged to attend “New Student Welcome Day” for an introduction to the campus, resources and student life.

The free event will begin with a 7:30 a.m. check-in at Marsee Auditorium on Aug. 23, and will include tours of the campus, introductions to ECC programs and resources, and a chance to purchase textbooks at the El Camino College Bookstore.

Participants at New Student Welcome Day can also attend workshops covering topics such as financial aid, transfer opportunities, student life, campus safety, library resources, transitioning into college and other support programs. Additional workshops will cover ECC’s Honors

Transfer Program, resources for AB 540 students, and support services for science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) students.

Students at New Student Welcome Day may also complete the required steps to enrollment including orientation, meetings with counselors and creating an educational plan.

Free parking will be available in Lot L, and lunch will be provided. For more information and to RSVP, go to www.elcamino.edu/nswd. To receive updates and reminders about New Student Welcome Day, text @eccwelcome to 81010. Contact the El Camino College Office of Outreach and School Relations at oasr@elcamino.edu or 310-660-3487 with any questions.

Two El Segundo High Students Awarded Prestigious Paul Marchisotto Scholarship

Rachael Wang and Kristine Shen of El Segundo High School were two of the five students selected by Northrop Grumman from a talented pool of applicants from across the country to receive the Paul Marchisotto Scholarship this year. The annual scholarship awards $1,500 to each winner and honors the late vice president who worked for Northrop Grumman for 20 years before he passed away in 2006.

Marchisotto was deeply involved in the Northrop Grumman High School Involvement Program (HIP). The program has provided nearly 7,000 students the opportunity to receive “hands-on” job training while earning high school credit since its inception in 1971. This year five El Segundo High School students graduated from the 17-week program with a $300 scholarship: Thomas Lynch, Jr., Matthew Paysse, Kristine Shen, Kristin Villanueva and Rachael Wang.

In addition, four of these students simultaneously participated in the South Bay Workforce Investment Board’s Aero-Flex pre-apprenticeship program. The “earn and learn” program acts as a compliment to the students’ intensive internship by providing work readiness and technical skills training. As a reward for completing both programs, the students receive a $500 stipend.

The College and Career Center at ESHS coordinates student internships with local businesses in a variety of industries. Students are encouraged to visit the College and Career Center regularly to become familiar with all of the resources available to them—it’s never too early to begin planning for college admissions or to gain some valuable work experience or training.

The College and Career Center is open to assist students during snack time, lunch and after school on a drop-in or appointment basis via sign-up sheets in Room 105. For more information about the services offered, please visit the ESHS website Career Readiness Resources link found on the “Counselors” page.

South Bay Workforce Investment Board Receives Grant to Serve Homeless Veterans

The South Bay Workforce Investment Board (SBWIB) was awarded a $97,000 grant from U.S. Vets in Inglewood to provide employment services to homeless veterans throughout the South Bay region. The funding comes from the Homeless Veteran Reintegration Program (HVRP) through the Department of Labor’s Veterans’ Employment and Training Service. The funding obtained will also provide assistance to veterans who were formerly incarcerated or will soon be released and are now seeking employment.

The grant will provide job training, counseling, placement and related employment services to expedite the reintegration of homeless and formerly incarcerated veterans into the labor force. Veterans with families and those who are at risk of homelessness also qualify for services.

The SBWIB will focus on employing many veterans within the construction industry due to the current high demand for job seekers in the South Bay area with numerous major projects taking place; including the Los Angeles Football Stadium and Entertainment District at Hollywood Park. The Inglewood football stadium is projected to provide more than 3,500 on-site jobs during construction and more than 10,000 support jobs by the time it is completed.

For those job seekers that may not fit within the construction sector the SBWIB will place them into another priority industry. SBWIB’s Executive Director, Jan Vogel stated, “Our partnership with U.S. Vets is very important to us and we are honored to be able to receive this funding and help homeless veterans gain meaningful employment.”

The Aerospace Corporation Announces New Chief of Government Relations

The Aerospace Corporation (Aerospace) announced last week that the Honorable Frank A. Rose has joined the company as the new chief of government relations. In this role, he will lead the organization’s educational efforts to Congress, the executive branch, and state and local government officials. He will also conduct outreach activities for Aerospace’s Center for Space Policy and Strategy, which provides objective analysis and comprehensive research to ensure well-informed, technically defensible, and forward-looking space policy.

“Frank brings a wealth of knowledge in space policy, defense, and international security to Aerospace,” said Jamie Morin, vice president at Aerospace and executive director of the Center for Space Policy and Strategy. “He is a trusted expert on space and strategic issues, with deep credibility across the U.S. government and with key stakeholders engaged in space issues.”

Prior to joining Aerospace, Rose served as assistant secretary of state and deputy assistant secretary for space and defense policy in the Bureau for Arms Control, Verification and Compliance at the U.S. Department of State. Previously, he was a staff member for the Committee on Armed Services and for the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, U.S. House of Representatives. He also served as a foreign affairs officer for the Office of the Assistant Secretary for International Security Policy, U.S. Department of Defense, and a special assistant in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Strategy and Threat Reduction. Rose received his bachelor’s degree in history from American University in 1994 and a master’s degree in war studies from Kings’ College, University of London in 1999.

Do Los Angeles Chargers Have What it Takes to Win?

By Adam Serrao

The NFL season is right around the corner... and more than anything, football fans in L.A. will have to get used to saying the Los Angeles Chargers now instead of still referring to the team with the old prefix of San Diego attached to the moniker. Like with all things, getting used to that change will simply take time. Time, however, is something that the Chargers don't have much of if the team is looking to adapt to its new home in L.A. sooner, rather than later, and steal a ton of fans in the process. There is no doubting the fact that the Chargers have talent on their team and throughout their roster. Can this year's Chargers team put that talent together to win the AFC West and make it into this year's playoffs, though?

The Chargers will open up the 2017 regular season and play their first game as a Los Angeles football team this September 11 when they travel to Denver to take on the Broncos at Sports Authority Field. For the Chargers, this season isn't so much about the opponents on the schedule, but more about depth on their roster. As anyone who has ever played fantasy football knows, injuries are as much a part of football as chocolate chips are a part of your grandma's cookies. Charger fans were eating a lot of chocolate chip cookies baked by their grandmas last season. It's not if, but when injuries will occur in the NFL. The Chargers have been seemingly snake-bitten in recent years when it has come to that topic, so this year will be about avoiding injuries that have the potential to overturn an otherwise very deep roster.

"I know we can compete," Chargers General Manager Tom Telesco said of his 2017 team. "We have some really good core players here. I like what I've seen from the coaching staff so far. Obviously we haven't stepped on the field yet, so we're going to find out real soon where we are. You don't really know." One thing that Charger fans do know before their team has taken the field is that they have already lost their second round pick of this year's draft, Forrest Lamp, to a torn ACL and their first round pick, Mike Williams, remains sidelined for what could be an extended period of time with a lower back disc hernia. Not a good way to start things off for a team that just last year lost its best wide receiver, one of its best cornerbacks, two running backs and a slew of other players to injury in what turned out to be a very disappointing season.

Despite the team's early rookie injuries, the Chargers will be looking to turn things around this year beginning with a move away from an old and rundown football stadium at Qualcomm in San Diego into a fairly newer, yet very small soccer stadium in Los Angeles. The 27,000-seat StubHub Center should provide the perfect atmosphere for Charger fans to get an up close and personal look at their new team during home games throughout the year's schedule. Though a team's schedule isn't everything, the Chargers will face the third toughest schedule in the NFL in 2017, based on opponents' records from last year.

Eight of the teams that the Chargers will face in 2017 had a record of .500 or better in 2016. L.A. will face opponents that combined last season for a .568 winning percentage, which at first sounds daunting, but fret not--there are a few saving graces. Three of the team's first four games of the year will be at their temporary new home, the StubHub Center. Also, the only other two teams in the league that will face a tougher overall schedule than the Chargers also reside in the AFC West. The Broncos have the hardest schedule in the NFL, while Kansas City comes in with the second toughest. The Chargers' only other opponent from within their division, the Oakland Raiders, ranks fourth in strength of schedule, just behind Los Angeles. If the Chargers have to face a horrifying schedule, at least all of their rivals will too.

Every NFL season stands alone, so strength of schedule may not mean much once the 2017 football year comes to an end. No matter who their opponents happen to be though, the Chargers are hungry to finally prove to their fans that they have the talent on their roster to get out of the gutter of the AFC West--a place where they have been relinquished to in recent years. "I think our guys are hungry," Telesco continued. "They should be. The guys that have been here three, four or five years--they won five games last year, four games the year before. You want to show people you're better than that. I think they have that attitude." That means it's up to players like quarterback Phillip Rivers, running back Melvin Gordon, receiver Keenan Allen, and a revamped offensive line to make a change in this year's Chargers team, once and for all.

With less than a month until kickoff, the Chargers are getting ready to prove to fans across Los Angeles that they are the team to beat in the NFL and the team to root for in the city. Barring more unforeseen injuries biting the team like last year, the Chargers have the talent on their roster to not only compete for an AFC West championship, but to also make a strong playoff run. What might be even more important this year, though, is that with success also comes ownership of one of the biggest football markets in the entire world.

El Segundo High Football Coaching Staff is Recipe for Success

By Gregg McMullin

The El Segundo High School football team has enjoyed plenty of success in the 24 years that head coach Steve Shevlin has been at the helm. No, there aren't any CIF championships or many league championships. What Coach Shevlin has done for years is get the most out of his athletes. His teams have been competitive against bigger opponents and schools--and that is a success.

El Segundo has been long been associated as a baseball factory with its storied heritage. The football team is building its own history. Coach Shevlin has directed his Eagles to a CIF Southern Section final in 2013, a CIF-SS semifinal appearance in 2008 and three quarterfinal appearances in 2009, 2012 and 2014. Also, the team has won 10 or more games in three of the past four seasons.

So what is the recipe for the Eagles' success? Shevlin says he surrounds himself with great assistants--and many of those are former players of his or at the school.

Shevlin was a standout receiver and defensive back at Culver City and helped lead the Centaurs to the CIF playoffs. In his 24th year as head coach here, he is not only the longest tenured head football coach at El Segundo but also one of the longest in the South Bay. His 140-105 overall mark is also a school record and puts him in the select company of coaches who have won 100 or more games.

Shevlin, who calls the offense, has developed some of the South Bay's top quarterbacks. His teams have averaged 29.7 points per game in the last 116 games over the last 10 seasons. He says a goal for his quarterbacks is to throw for 2,000 yards each year. He has had some good ones, including Matt Engle (2001-03) who threw for 8,800 yards and 95 TDs; and Lars Nootbaar (2013-14), who threw for 5,362 yards and 64 TDs.

Coach Shevlin says any of the success his teams have had can be traced to his outstanding assistant coaches. On he has leaned upon to help with the offense is Gene Engle. Engle, who was a standout offensive tackle at Stanford (1977-78), has been in coaching since 1980. Though he has been the offensive line coach at El Camino college since 1982 (and retired last November), he has been helping out with the El Segundo program since 2001 running the high-octane offense.

First Day Jitters By Julie Danneberg and Planet Kindergarten By Sue Ganz-Schmitt

Reviewed by Katrena Woodson,
Teen and Young Reader Librarian,
El Segundo Public Library

If you can believe it, summer is coming to an end and the kids will be heading back to school before you know it. This week, I will be reviewing a couple of picture books that are focused on being nervous about starting school. First Day Jitters by Julie Danneberg can be an excellent conversation starter between parents and children on the subject of being nervous when beginning at a new school. In this story, Mr. Hartwell is trying to coax Sarah out of bed where she is hiding because she is too nervous to go to school. Finally, Sarah gives in and heads off to school where she is greeted by the principal who tries to reassure her that it is all right to be a little scared or nervous on your first day. This is a well-written book that is charmingly illustrated. I would say it is best for young readers between five and eight years old. But what makes this book particularly notable is that Danneberg is actually very craftily misleading the readers the drawn in a retro-space style slightly reminiscent of the Jetsons cartoons. This book is sure to ease the fears of any other young astronauts as well as making parents chuckle to themselves. It is an excellent book for children ages three to five who will soon be embarking on their own mission to the strange yet wonderful place known as “planet kindergarten.”

The El Segundo Public Library offers access to its collection of titles in a variety of formats, including traditional hardback, e-books and books on CD. majority of the time. At the end, Danneberg reveals her brilliant plot twist. Sarah is not a new student--she is the new teacher. This proves that anyone can be nervous about their first day of school.

Planet Kindergarten by Sue Ganz-Schmitt features the main character imagining himself as a young astronaut who is preparing for his mission to Planet Kindergarten. For this brave boy, kindergarten is not just a grade--it's a destination. He travels to school in a rocket ship and is sure that his classmates are aliens. He tries the space food and is surprised by how good it is and he is briefly worried that they are running out of oxygen since at one point all of his classmates lay down and fall asleep during

NEXT FEST Brings Sundance Hits Lemon and Gook to Los Angeles

By Morgan and Ryan Rojas
for www.cinemacy.com

Every summer, the Sundance Film Festival brings a handful of films directly from Park City to Los Angeles to make their L.A. debut at Sundance NEXT FEST. This diverse selection of films played in Sundance's NEXT category that showcases bold films by up-and-coming talents of tomorrow. The festival is held at the beautiful Ace Hotel Theater in Downtown L.A. and pairs comedy and musical acts with each film, making for a full night of entertainment.

This past weekend, Morgan and Ryan Rojas attended NEXT FEST and caught Lemon and Gook, two films that made our heads spin (along with musical acts Lizzo and Sleigh Bells--two female-fronted bands who brought the Ace Hotel Theater's roof down). For our red carpet interview with the cast of Gook, visit www.cinemacy.com.

Lemon (2017) Review by Ryan Rojas

Lemon has been getting reviewed as a cringe-inducing comedy, which is exactly what writer and director Janicza Bravo would audience to keep up with it as much as it does apathetically stroll from start to finish. It is an interesting tension that is kept intact from beginning to end. If you want to see a movie that may make you as uncomfortable as it does make you laugh out loud, and if you like your comedy brainy and re-wired for your IQ, then Lemon will tickle you in just the right way.

Gook (2017) Review by Morgan Rojas

Writer/Director/Actor Justin Chon was just a boy during the L.A. Riots of 1992. He since took to filmmaking to express his experience as a Korean American living through one of the city's most infamously tumultuous times which, until now, has generally been considered a black/white issue. Chon's latest film, Gook, gives audiences a fresh perspective of how the Rodney King riots affected the Asian population living in Los Angeles at that time. From destroyed businesses to strained cross-cultural relationships, this Sundance award-winning like. Making her feature film debut, Lemon is the story of sad-sack Isaac (Brett Gelman, Bravo's real-life partner), a struggling L.A. actor whose life begins to slowly unravel when his girlfriend of 10 years Ramona (Judy Greer) decides to leave him. The break-up is more or less the driving center of this absurdist comedy, around which a number of other nonsensical and low-stakes events orbit. Some instances include amateurish theater scenes in which Isaac workshops Chekhov's The Seagull with two self-serious actors (Michael Cera and Gillian Jacobs) as well as celebrating Passover with his pregnant sister (Shiri Appleby) and quirky parents (Fred Melamed and Rhea Perlman).

While it's all utter nonsense, Lemon is still delightful and fun throughout its relatively short 83-minute runtime. The deadpan seriousness of Isaac's spiral-diving life is a fun time--if neurosis-obsessed humor is your thing. Lemon both challenges its drama uses black and white cinematography to tell a truly unique story that celebrates the artistry in diverse voices.

Gook tells the story of two Korean American brothers, Eli and Daniel, who struggle to make ends meet by working in their late father's shoe store, located in the South Central neighborhood of Paramount (a stone's throw from Compton). The brothers' tough exterior of gold chains and foul language may seem intimidating to outsiders, but that doesn't deter 11-year-old Kamilla from hanging around them any chance she gets. Kamilla is a street smart, orphaned black girl whose own dysfunctional upbringing has her searching for the security of a family in unconventional ways. As racial tension runs at an all-time high, the special bond between Kamilla, Eli and Daniel is put to the test in a major and life-altering way.

Murder in Charlottesville a Tragic Reminder We Must Always Be Vigilant

By Cristian Vasquez

It's heartbreaking that Heather Heyer, the victim of Neo-Nazi rage, lost her life in Charlottesville during the weekend because of the savage behavior of an unhinged racist. However, it is infuriating that the President of the United States must have his arm bent in order for him to place blame where it belongs: with violent Neo-Nazi groups. I'll be clear and state that President Trump did not give birth to these extreme racist groups. They have existed in one form or another throughout our nation's history. These groups usually hide and only expose their ignorance when they have a compelling reason to make noise. The problem we have today is that President Donald Trump is their reason to come out in full force. And the President's refusal to directly call out these radical racists for their actions is not only disgusting, but it empowers the very scourge that killed Heyer.

After this weekend's horrible events, let's stop using the label "Alt-Right" and identify these groups for what they are: racist Neo-Nazi groups. The longer decent Americans continue to call racists "Alt-Right" supporters instead of Neo-Nazis, the more these racists are normalized and empowered. Let's stop sugarcoating our own reality. People like Richard Spencer, David Duke and suspected murderer James Alex Fields, Jr. are racist. These three animals want nothing less than a homogenous state--and the murder of Heyer is only a small sample of what they are willing to do. When the President of the United States fails to directly condemn the actions of these groups, the racists are empowered.

This argument isn't hollow rhetoric either. Neo-Nazi supporters across the country see President Trump as that inspiration to come out of hiding. In a video shot during the Charlottesville "Unite the Right" rally, Duke is recorded saying that he and his like-minded supporters are determined to take the country back: "We are going to fulfill the promises of Donald Trump. That's what we believed in, that's why we voted for Donald Trump. Because he said he's going to take our country back." Duke said these words. So it's not paranoia from the left. It's not an unfounded accusation by fake news. These are the words of a prominent racist leader to describe how they feel about our current President. The only thing more disgusting than Duke's believes is Trump's reluctance to condemn people like Duke.

The President condemning these actions and ideologies is not going to eradicate them from our country. However, it does make it clear that such behaviors and actions are unacceptable, which in turn will stop normalizing racism. We, as a society, need to stop calling the Spencers, Dukes and Fields of the world anything less than what they are: racist. There is no "Alt-Right"--because hard-working, kind-hearted, God-fearing conservatives do not support these fringe behaviors. Alt-Right is a term used to lie to ourselves about the reality of this new wave of racism, and it must be stopped. Since the President won't take them to task, then it's up to us. •

Fear and Loathing in Washington, D.C. and Around the World

By Duane Plank

My summer reading list included some of the works of the prolific "Gonzo" journalist, the late, great Hunter S. Thompson, who often opined on the political scene. Not a fan of most politicians, he labeled most pols as "swine."

My introduction to the writings of Dr. Thompson, who penned multiple tomes for Rolling Stone magazine when he wasn't wasted on alcohol, illegal drugs, or obsessing about firearms, (or maybe he was wasted when he wrote?) came via my son Phillip, who was tasked to read the Thompson masterpiece Fear and Loathing on the Campaign Trail '72 when he was attending UCSB.

Phil knows of my passion for politics and suggested I read Thompson's seminal book on the run-up to the Richard M. Nixon electoral massacre of the well-meaning, but overmatched George S. McGovern in the first presidential election of the 1970s.

This was a period when the perennially paranoid Nixon was forced to deal with the fallout when some of his henchmen decided to break into the Watergate Hotel in D.C. to glean some intel about the soon-to-be down-the tubes McGovern campaign. What a waste of time. Electoral score: Nixon 520, McGovern, 17.

McGovern had about as much chance of defeating an incumbent President as some neophyte politician and maverick business guy named "The Donald" did running against the Hillary Clinton "machine" and the pseudo-criminals like Congress gal Debbie Wassermann Schultz, who stacked the deck against the insurgent campaign of outsider Bernie Sanders.

There are current rumblings about improprieties in the Sanders household, including some possible shady dealings involving Sanders' wife, Jane, who is the subject of an FBI investigation because of alleged shady financially dealings surrounding a now-defunct college with which she was involved.

Shocker! Do you remember how the Monica Lewinsky "Devil in the Blue Dress" imbroglio came to light? The investigation of Slick Willie Clinton and Hillary began as a poke into financial shenanigans that the couple had allegedly masterminded back in the day. A special prosecutor was assigned to delve into the alleged financial tomfoolery.

Bill and Hill never faced prosecution for possible skimming and scamming. Sound familiar--a Clinton profiting because of political position? While the Whitewater investigation of Clinton fizzled, it spilled over into other areas of his life. Special counsel Ken Starr stumbled upon the fact that the 42nd President was becoming chummy with a chubby intern at the White House, which led to impeachment proceedings.

A special counsel should not nearly be being able to bring down a sitting President because of personal peccadilloes, but if I am Donald Trump and they are investigating the ruse that is Russian collusion, I would fear that special counsel Robert Mueller and his minions who all supported Hillary may find nothing Russia-related, but stumble onto some other alleged impropriety that Rachel Maddow would scream was an impeachable offense.

With that swine Kim Jong Un threatening to bomb Guam and detonate WWW III, don't we all have something a little more important to focus our attention on these days? Nuclear war? Now that is something to "Fear and Loathe." •

City Council

Fuentes expressed concern that TopGolf is not holding up its end of a commitment that it originally instigated. Councilmember Mike Dugan called it a "moral obligation to maintain our commitments" and asked to "find a way to find a link to keep the golf pros connected"—given that without a TopGolf project, The Lakes wouldn't be closed for six months and potentially prompt the pros to move elsewhere.

Councilmember Carol Pirsztuk voiced frustration about the discussion considering the pros are not City employees in the first place. "Why are we belaboring over two people in a six-month period when we're getting 450 jobs right off the bat and turning a profit?" she asked.

Dugan emphasized that "it's not as much about the pros as protecting the programs. The mechanism to do that is to maintain contact with the people who run the programs." Pirsztuk then suggested that if the City can't find a pro to come in, that it can ask TopGolf to run the program.

While the golf pro compensation item remains up in the air, other points sailed through for the most part. On getting Chevron approval for the land use and grant deed, the City asked for an exhibit with the exact language of the terms in case the refinery isn't able to sign off until after the Council's second reading (and approval) of the project. Chevron representative Rod Spackman confirmed, "We have agreed in concept or practical terms to the substance of the agreement." However, he also explained that the process is complicated and that "material requests are added to the document each time we see it—so we have to go back and do our due diligence."

TopGolf committed $400,000 towards lighting on the golf course and wants an indemnity clause added to the agreement where the City is responsible to pay for any amount above that. "It was never anticipated that $400,000 would cover the entire cost," Hensley said. The Council will decide how to proceed after TopGolf bids out the lighting. Current guess-timates put the City's potential price tag at anywhere from $100,000 to $200,000. City Manager Greg Carpenter thought it would be best if CenterCal includes the lighting as part of its scope of work at the same time as the golf course renovation and clubhouse construction. "[Potentially] their bids will come in lower than the City's," he said. Carpenter added that the Council could also choose a $400,000 lighting project covering just the final six of the nine holes. Later, former Councilmember Dave Atkinson warned, "If we do six holes, we're never gonna do the other three."

The Council was also amenable to driving range hours and associated fees negotiated by the Golf Course Subcommittee for use by professionals and youth groups. Under the plan, the groups can use the range at 10 hitting bays Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and at four bays from 4-7 p.m.; on Fridays at six bays from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and at three bays from 2-6 p.m.; and on weekends at four bays 8 a.m. to noon and three bays 12-4 p.m. Additional bay usage within those hours will be discounted by 50 percent. Usage outside of those hours will be at the TopGolf rate less $10 an hour. "We feel these hours comply with what we need," Pirsztuk said. Dugan elaborated that the agreed-upon hours are "what it would take to maintain the existing programs."

If the Council approves TopGolf on October 3 (the second reading won't take place on September 19 because Fuentes will be out of town), the ordinance would go into effect 30 days later. Chevron documents and applicant guarantees will also have to be executed during the interim period, Hensley noted.

In a subsequent presentation, Recreation and Parks Director Meredith Petit showed renderings of the golf course redesign that will include changes to tee boxes and greens, converting the Par-4 ninth hole to a long Par-3 (deemed of equal difficulty) and flexibility in length for holes five and eight. The revamped course will be a bit shorter (1,200 yards compared to 1,340), with a reconfigured clubhouse overlooking the first hole for better management. The clubhouse will feature a lobby, gathering area, kitchen, dining area, wrap-around patio, restrooms, offices and reduced-size pro shop. The City may also consider subleasing the restaurant portion, Pirsztuk said. Concerned about parking issues after visiting a TopGolf facility in Roseville, California, Councilmember Don Brann spoke of 104 additional spaces from West Basin. Hensley reported that the due diligence agreement includes a clause specifying 30 spaces for golf course use during regular hours of operation.

Also on Tuesday, the Council received the quarterly investment portfolio update from the Treasury Department and a quarterly update for the Strategic Work Plan from Finance Director Joseph Lillio--as well as annual reports from both the Recreation and Parks Commission and Arts Advisory and Culture Committee.

The consent agenda featured a lengthy talk about new recreation management software. Staff recommended going with the company CivicPlus, feeling the software will be easier to implement and similar to what personnel are used to currently—as well as being less expensive than the other option considered, PerfectMind. However in a letter to the Council received on Tuesday, the City's Technology Committee expressed concern with CivicPlus and indicated its preference for the long-term technological capabilities of PerfectMind, while also feeling the latter will prove less costly over time. The Tech Committee also felt that potential bidders didn't have enough time to respond to the request for proposal—thus resulting in only two vendor choices. The Council ultimately postponed its vote to allow Mayor Pro Tem Boyles to weigh in on the matter next month. Recreation and Parks' current system will reach end of life by December, making a quick decision on the new software critical.

To comply with state law, the Council in two weeks is set to adopt an ordinance (introduced on Tuesday) streamlining the permitting process for electric vehicle charging stations. The City recently unveiled a new EV charging station at City Hall in the parking area along Holly Avenue.

During presentations, the Council recognized County Supervisor (4th District) Janice Hahn for her role in resolving the Vista del Mar restriping issue that created uproar across the beach cities in recent months. Fuentes said Hahn "gets complete credit" for working with Los Angeles Councilman Mike Bonin to come up with a solution to go back to the previous lane configuration to ease traffic congestion while addressing safety concerns. Hahn, who represents two million people in her district, remarked, "I am so lucky El Segundo is one of my cities." •

Five Projects You can Tackle in a Weekend

(BPT) - This time of year was made for DIY projects. The weather is perfect, the projects have mounted, you've got the time and the motivation. Now if only you had the budget.

Not to worry, DIY doesn't have to be synonymous with expensive! There are plenty of impactful DIY projects that can be tackled quickly and affordably in just a single weekend. Below is a list of five projects that you can use to scratch that project itch without putting a noticeable dent in your wallet.

Seal the Gaps

Hidden gaps and cracks in your home could be allowing air to escape, making the temperature in the house more difficult to regulate and your energy bill more expensive than it needs to be. Seal these gaps with an innovative air-sealing insulating foam to help protect against air and moisture infiltration. It will create a tighter building envelope that helps to reduce your energy waste and your monthly bill.

A Fresh Coat of Paint

How many times have you walked by that wall, those cabinets or that wooden chair and thought, "I need to repaint that"? Well, now's the time. Painting small spaces and furniture yourself is a small, inexpensive project that can be finished in a single weekend. So start picking colors today. Once you're done, you can feel proud knowing that you put in the hard work to give your home a fresh look.

Ward off Vermin

You're not the only one who's happy to see that warmer weather has arrived. Vermin of the mammal, reptile or insect variety will also be more active during the warmer months and they may set their sights on your home. GREAT STUFFTM Pestblock Insulating Foam Sealant helps block vermin from entering your home through gaps, cracks and holes. Spray the foam to block these points of entry and the only guests you'll greet this season are those you actually invited.

Update Window Treatments

If "treatment" is a generous word when describing the accent pieces around your windows, it's time for an upgrade. Whether curtains, blinds or drapes, window treatments can be as cost effective as you want them to be, so don't be afraid to be picky. And once you find treatments that appeal to you, use them to block the sun on the hottest days to reduce your energy expenses.

Expand Your DIY

Your DIY projects don't have to be confined to your home; they can also involve your boat, your RV or your other vehicles. GREAT STUFFTM Multipurpose Black Foam Sealant can be used to fill unwanted gaps and cracks in vehicles, allowing you to cruise into vacation with no worries.

You can scratch that DIY itch without a month-long commitment or completely draining your bank account. All you have to do is pick the projects that match your budget, your time frame and your goals, and get to work. And when they're done, you'll have the rest of the season to enjoy your new and improved home. To find more simple projects you can tackle with GREAT STUFFTM Insulating Foam Sealant, visit greatstuff.dow.com.

Football Staff

Engle's overall football knowledge is on par with that of a Division I head coach. His offensive-minded skills have brought an added dimension to El Segundo football. Shevlin says that he's learned so much about football and life in general from Engle, who has been a close friend and mentor.

Within every good football program is a great defense that is also part of the recipe for success. Dan Heck has been the defensive coordinator for the past 11 seasons. Heck, who was a quarterback at University of Kansas, was also a standout shortstop in high school. He was drafted out of Leuzinger High School by the Braves.

Heck saw himself as a quarterback and eventually made his way to Kansas after playing at El Camino. After graduation, he landed an assistant's job back at El Camino where he became the linebacker's coach. Coach Heck has developed one of the South Bay's stingiest defenses. In the past 33 games, the Eagles have held teams to a total of 13.4 points per game.

Heck has authored this successful part of the team, but he says the credit goes to the players. "We've been fortunate to have some great athletes come through here," he said. He added that many of the players he coaches, like Jimmy Quinones, are most likely not to play at a Division I school--but these players compete with more heart than those who end up at Division I schools.

When Shevlin started his head coaching job, Jason Parker had been a part-time assistant for a season or so. Twenty-five seasons later, running back coach Jason Parker is an integral part of the offense and someone his head coach leans on for advice.

Parker was a standout running back in high school and went on to play at Eastern Washington University. He says that in an offense that has had so much success throwing the ball, some of the running backs in the system have done pretty well too. He mentions Chris Atmore (2005), who rushed for 2,040 yards and 28 TDs his senior year, as one of the hardest working players. It's hard to argue with Atmore's effort against a highly touted Torrance team. All Atmore did was rush for 382 yards and six touchdowns and make seven tackles.

Shevlin has no plans of stepping down anytime soon--but when that time does come, he's hoping to hand his knowledge and team over to Jeramie Stewart. Stewart, who coaches

UCLA where he was a linebacker. He has been helping out coaching the Eagles defensive line for the past 15 years to develop such top players as Trevor Richter and Austin Kurke.

Joey Boulder, who is a Los Angeles County Deputy, was a teammate with Puffer in 1994. Boulder was the Eagles' top running back and also one of the team's top defensive backs. He

Of course, any good football program has a feeder system in the way of lower-level teams. The Eagle football family has a coaching staff at the JV and frosh level as good as many varsity staffs in the area. Darin Glotz is a 2002 Eagle graduate and has been helping out the program for 12 seasons and in is in his fourth year as the JV head coach. Glotz started coaching by assisting Shawn Green at the soph/frosh level and over time assumed more and more responsibilities.

Green has led the frosh/soph team to a number of league titles and coached the future of the Eagle program for the past 14 years or so. His knowledge of the offense and defensive systems in place has allowed the maturation and development of players who have gone on to success at the varsity level. He's now assisting Coach Glotz at the JV level.

When an opening for the freshman team opened up three seasons ago, Mike Wagner--a standout on the 1988 team--was more than willing to leave his position as the defensive coordinator at Serra High School. He says his assistant coaches make his job easy because of their knowledge, passion for the game and their commitment and loyalty to the program.

Rob McKenna is in his ninth year helping out as an assistant coach with the freshman team. He works with the line and special teams and says he has really enjoyed watching the young players improve. He points to former players such as Connor Underwood, Tim Shartz and Noah Bergren who were really coachable.

Seth McKenna was an all-league receiver and defensive back for the Eagles who graduated in 2013. He has been helping out for the past four seasons where needed. This will be his second season with the freshman team.

Paul Keiser is in his third season with the freshman team and sixth season overall. He'll be working with the offense and defensive line.

When the season starts in two weeks, the Eagles coaching staff that Coach Shevlin has assembled will have figured out the recipe for another winning season. • the offensive line, played for Shevlin as one of his top linemen before graduating in 1999. He played at El Camino before moving on to Portland State and then returning to help his former coach 10 seasons ago.

Another line coach is Chris Doukakis. Doukakis, who played for the Eagles in 2006, has been regarded as one of Shevlin's top centers. He played at L.A. Harbor and finished up at West Liberty State. This is Doukakis' fifth year with El Segundo after a year at Cal Lutheran and one season at Thousand Oaks High School.

Jeff Puffer was a standout defensive lineman for the Eagles in 1994. He took his talents to went on to play linebacker and strong safety at Columbia University and earn his degree before joining the L.A. County Sheriff's Department. For the past 12 seasons, he has been helping out the Eagles by coaching the secondary and linebackers.

The Eagles' defense has been one of the top units in the South Bay. One reason is the secondary has been so good. Tyler Murray, a top running back and linebacker for Shevlin on the '07 team, has been assisting with the secondary for the past seven seasons. He splits time between the varsity and JV teams working with the secondary.
