Council Candidates Weigh in on the Issues

Each week leading up to the November election, the Herald will publish El Segundo City Council candidate responses to questions covering various matters of local concern

1. What should the City do to strengthen public safety and emergency preparedness while maintaining the level of police and fire services residents expect?

Ryan Baldino

Our Council continues to strengthen emergency preparedness through further supporting the police and fire services El Segundo residents expect. Public safety is our largest budget priority, making outside funding and strategic partnerships essential. Working with Congressman Ted Lieu, we secured more than $320,000 in federal funding to upgrade our Emergency Operations Center, improving the technology that police, fire and city staff rely on during disasters. On October 6, we approved three new Fire Department Chief Officer positions dedicated to emergency communications. These positions will help ensure timely alerts to residents, schools and other potentially affected locations during Chevron refinery incidents, supporting the City's responsibilities under AB 1646 to notify the community of emergencies. Chevron will fully fund the positions' personnel, operating and start-up costs. These are great examples of where supporting public safety and maintaining fiscal responsibility can go hand in hand.

John Pickhaver

The October 2025 Chevron refinery fire demonstrated an important distinction between responding effectively to an emergency and communicating effectively with the public. Our firefighters and regional partners did an extraordinary job containing the fire. But residents received conflicting information, or sometimes no information at all, about what was happening and whether they were safe. At the October 6 City Council meeting, Fire Chief Allee proposed establishing three dedicated emergency communications chiefs, one for each shift, to ensure round-the-clock coordination of public notifications. Chevron would cover the costs. I support moving this proposal forward. We should also examine how we use Alert SouthBay, which can send notifications to registered residents and issue FEMA Wireless Emergency Alerts directly to phones in affected areas without registration. We need to understand what alerts were issued that evening, whether they reached residents, and what needs to improve. Effective emergency communication is essential to public safety.

Chris Pimentel

Public safety is the first responsibility of any government, and our city is the safest and most prepared in the region. In my time in office, we have expanded the personnel, equipment and training of our police, fire and public works. One-hundred percent of our firefighters are paramedics and able to provide immediate medical intervention and by expanding police patrols with new training and techniques, we reduced crime by more than 70%. As a leader in preparedness, we have a both an Emergency Manager as well as three oncoming emergency communications chiefs that ensure 24-hour coverage. Look for our annual "table top" exercise in early 2027 and an all-city rehearsal to follow. As a Marine office with FEMA training, I know the value of continual readiness. Our level of preparedness was on full display in our skillful handling of the Chevron fire, as was our ability to rapidly learn from it.

2. If you received a $1 million grant to use for the City any way you wanted, what would you do with it and why?

Ryan Baldino

I would invest it in the Joslyn Center, where an additional $1 million could make a meaningful difference for El Segundo's seniors. Our five-year capital plan identifies nearly $88 million in needs across 58 projects, which requires careful prioritization.

Council Extends Data Center Moratorium

By Liz Spear

In a 4-1 vote, with City Council member Drew Boyles casting the lone dissenting vote, the El Segundo City Council voted to approve extending its current temporary 45-day moratorium on data centers in the city for an additional 10 months and 15 days, essentially squelching what many residents viewed as a potential data center where the Hyatt Place hotel, 750 North Nash Street, stands after an attempt was made this summer to demolish and replace the building with a five-story data center covering 230,780 gross square feet. Even with those plans removed abruptly in July by developer Eight Form LLC Managing Partner and Founder Arjun Shokeen at a Planning Commission Public Hearing on the project, many residents remained concerned that the developer was conceiving of a workaround to use the existing building in a manner in which the project could avoid city regulations, procedures, and zoning, though such project plans have not been filed with the city.

Both data center moratoriums, the temporary 45-day and additional 10 months and 15 days, are listed as "urgency" ordinances and "impose a temporary moratorium on the approval of any land use entitlements, permits, or other approvals allowing the development, construction, expansion or operation of data centers," according to city documents.

As he did at the regularly scheduled September 15th City Council meeting when the 45-day moratorium was first officially presented as a possibility, Boyles intoned his stance on the moratorium on data centers, saying, "My comments are going to be consistent with the first vote so there's probably not going to be a surprise here, but we've spent decades building El Segundo's reputation as a place to invest and innovate. We're now considering actually moving the goalposts on a property owner's property and their property rights. And moratoriums are generally called for when there's an emergency, so I would ask, 'What is the actual emergency here? We already know we have data centers here. Yes, the technology is changing, but they exist. And we are first and foremost an innovation economy. In the last 10 years, we've had investment unlike no other in frontier, tech, hard tech, defense tech. All of that requires significant computing power. And we also have state legislation, seven new laws… so we keep making it more difficult and more difficult to get anything done in this state, and we wonder why our employers are moving to Utah, Nevada, Arizona and Tennessee, etc. It's happening. And this is an example of, I think, overreach. And the state, I think, their seven new laws are also overreach, a knee-jerk reaction. And we built this reputation over many decades, and I think we're potentially compromising our reputation."

City Council member Michelle Keldorf asked, in response to a public comment, if the length of time could be rolled back from its full term, to which City Attorney Mark Hensley said council could undo and amend the ordinance. Mayor Pro Tim Ryan Baldino said the item would have to be put on a future city council meeting agenda but that the "ask" for the current meeting was to "put the moratorium out with a date certain."

Mayor Chris Pimentel, who attended the meeting via video as did council member Lance Giroux, asked, "Do we think we need the full 10 months? We'll be seating a new council in a few months. Is there any reason staff needs the full breadth of next year to adjust to state laws and adjust our regulations to be commensurate with working in the semi-coastal zone and industrial areas? Uh, I was surprised by the duration. I know we can go up to 10 months under state law, but why wouldn't we go to, like, six months, and if we want to extend it again, do it then? The technology is changing so quickly. It seems like it would give us a little more flexibility. I mean, I guess, we can do 10 months and just end it early but it seems like it would keep it front of mind that we were keeping pace with the technology if we did it for a shorter period and, frankly, be sensitive to the body politic."

In response, city staff said, "Well, yeah, I think there are a lot of variables. Obviously, I think 10-1/2 months is not an overreach, but I think it's just a good amount of time. If we're ready to go before that and bring something to you that's definitive, we'll definitely do that. But I think it gives us enough time to research the matter, vet it through the planning commission, and if possible, if we need to get some additional vetting from the council as well in terms of policy direction. I think that gives us more than enough time. But at the end of the day, if we're ready to come back within seven months, eight months, I mean, we'll definitely do that. We're not going to extend it out, well, we hope we wouldn't, and take, need to go the full 10-1/2 months. But at least it gives us that buffer just in case we need to switch gears. But, in the meantime, we'll do the research, and we'll be able to vet it through the planning commission, through the city council, and then come back with an actual ordinance. That may take several months to do. It could take six months, could be nine months, but I'd hate to put us in a short window and then have to extend it. Whereas, if we're already extended out 10-1/2 months, it gives us that flexibility, but I doubt it'll go the full 10 months. We'll do our best to try to get that before you all before the 10-1/2 months is up."

City Attorney Mark Nesler weighed in, noting that it takes "about three months" just to notice a planning commission meeting, notice a city council meeting, have a second reading of an ordinance, and then wait the requisite 30 days for an ordinance to go into effect. He said, "then you're left with about 7-/1/2 months to do the work." He added that the state laws "are incredibly thick to look through and to understand." He said he thinks the city will need "outside expertise on some of these issues." He also said he thinks 10-1/2 months are needed.

In other news, Joone Kim-Lopez, the new executive director of the Los Angeles Bureau of Sanitation, whose oversight includes the Hyperion Water Reclamation Plant that neighbors El Segundo, addressed council. She said she wants to ensure her team is responsive to the city, its residents, and their concerns, and that "people, relationship and trust" have long been the hallmarks of her career. She began her career in the utility sector at Hyperion nearly 20 years ago and served as a police officer before that. She agreed to speak at a future city council meeting. The next Hyperion Community Forum will be held in person at the El Segundo Public Library, 111 West Mariposa Avenue, from 6-7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 12, in the Sue Carter Community Room. Kim-Lopez will be a "special guest" at that meeting. •

Homecoming Celebrated Even in Loss

By Gregg McMullin

El Segundo High School really knows how to celebrate Homecoming Week. You might expect to see what the school's 1,300 students and our community experience in a tiny Midwest town. From the float-building buildup during the week to the lunchtime game-day rally to the parade down iconic Main Street, it all reminds you of a Saturday Evening Post cover by Norman Rockwell. The game itself against the Santa Monica Vikings didn't go as planned, ending in a 48-29 loss.

During the week, freshmen through seniors gather nightly to assemble their respective class floats. The floats follow a theme, and this year's theme was Music Festivals, or Main Stage to Main Street. The freshmen built their float to represent 'Stagecoach', the sophomores 'Tomorrow Land', the juniors 'Beach Life ', and the seniors 'Coachella.' A select group of judges graded the floats in several areas, and the results were announced at halftime during the game.

Leading up to the announcement at halftime, the Royal Homecoming Court sat sidelined, watching the different classes dance to a well-choreographed routine. When the float-building contest results were announced, the seniors took first place, followed by the freshmen. In reality, no class was a loser, but bragging rights went to the seniors for their elaborate float.

The game itself was another head scratcher. Missing some key defensive players, the Eagles gave up 363 yards rushing and five rushing touchdowns in the 48-29 loss to the Vikings. The offense moved the ball with some big plays, but it was the defense that was stretched, and the Vikings took advantage.

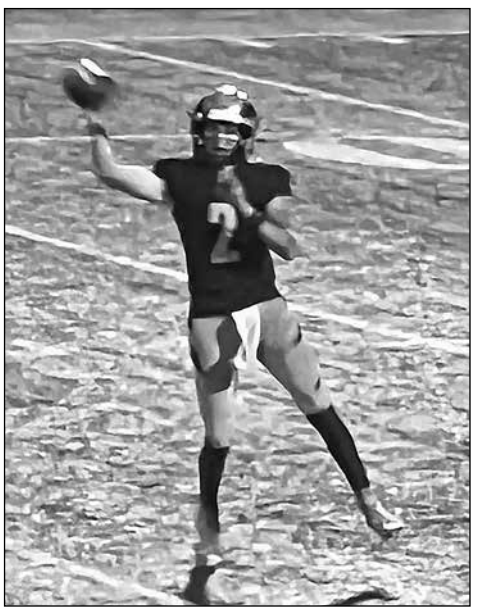

El Segundo opened the scoring with a three-minute opening-game, eight-play drive. A Santa Monica penalty helped extend the drive; senior quarterback Ryan Wiacek completed five passes to set up his two-yard rushing touchdown and a 6-0 lead.

Early in the second quarter, the Vikings scored after an eight-play drive to take a 7-6 lead. On the ensuing kickoff, Kingston Jordon took the kickoff from the El Segundo 35-yard line. He broke one tackle, shook off two others, and got free for a 65-yard touchdown to give El Segundo a 13-7 lead. It would be the last time the Eagles would hold a lead.

Santa Monica responded on their first play with an 80-yard pass for a touchdown. On their next possession, a 30-yard rushing touchdown gave the Vikings a 20-13 lead. But the Eagles tied the game on a Ryan Wiacek pass to Kingston Jordan for a 58-yard catch-and-run touchdown, 20-20.

Santa Monica responded on back-to-back possessions to score. The first came on an eight-play drive that ended with a rushing touchdown by Saul Buendia to give the Vikings

Ryan Wiacek threw for nearly 300 yards and a TD and rushed for two touchdowns against the Santa Monica Vikings

At halftime of the Homecoming game, each class performed a routine leading up to the announcement of the Float contest winners. The seniors react to their float being named the winner a 27-20 lead. The second touchdown came on a 28-yard pass to Ryan Blake, giving the Vikings a 34-20 lead. The Eagles used their last possession to drive to the Santa Monica 22-yard line, helped along by big plays on a 25-yard reception by Ezekiel Sea and a 32-yard catch-and-run by Chase Mattoon. With zeros showing on the game clock, Mattoon connected on a 35-yard field goal to cut the deficit to 34-23.

The 34 points the defense gave up marked the second most given up in a quarter this season. They had no answer for a physical ground game the Vikings inflicted upon the young El Segundo defense.

The second half started with a two-play 73-yard drive. Saul Buendia rushed twice, including a 59-yard touchdown run, to give the Vikings a 41-23 lead. The Eagles moved the ball again with a 30-yard pass play to Mattoon, but they failed to convert on a fourth-down play. The Vikings took possession on a ten-play drive capped off with a two-yard rushing touchdown by Joshua Fernandez to close out the scoring for the Vikings and a 48-23 lead.

The Eagles would not go quietly, and on their first possession of the fourth quarter, Ryan Wiacek directed the offense on a seven-play drive for a touchdown. On fourth down and six, Wiacek scrambled 18 yards for a rushing touchdown, and the Eagles trailed 48-29 with just over ten minutes remaining. The Vikings chewed up most of the fourth quarter with a ten-play drive that stalled out. The Eagles threatened to score but were turned away as time ran out.

Senior quarterback Ryan Wiacek had another good game, completing 21 of 30 passes for 294 yards and a touchdown; he also rushed for two TDs.

With the loss, the Eagles dropped to 0-3 in Pioneer League play and 3-5 overall. They'll need to win their last two games against North Torrance on Friday night on Senior Appreciation night and next Friday on the road against West Torrance if they can expect a CIF Southern Section playoff bid.

Teams Eye CIF Southern Section Playoffs

The boys' water polo team is poised to advance to the CIF playoffs. They competed in the Bay League prelim tournament and played this past Monday for playoff seeding. After defeating Culver City in the first round, they lost to Mira Costa in the second round. They faced Santa Monica in the third-place game on Monday and will await the CIF playoff pairings on Friday at 2 p.m. The Eagles, who are 20-8 on the season, have won twenty or more games for the fifth consecutive season and are expected to advance to the CIF playoffs for the fifty-first time in program history.

The flag football team lost a 13-12 heartbreaker to the Peninsula Panthers in a game to determine third place and an automatic CIF playoff berth. The Eagles will miss the playoffs for the first time in their three-year existence as a program.

The girls' volleyball team finished fifth in the Bay League and missed the playoffs. •

We've completed the $16 million Plunge renovation and budgeted about $5.6 million for improvements to the Teen Center, sports court and skatepark. Next, we need to focus on the Joslyn Center. We secured an $803,000 grant toward the $1.6 million Joslyn Center renovation project, which covers about half the cost. Additional funding would allow us to add more improvements for our residents. The City's use of grant funds for much-needed capital improvement projects shows we can be fiscally responsible while investing in facilities that improve residents' quality of life. A strong parks and recreation department with safe and accessible facilities creates a stronger community.

John Pickhaver

I'd start with my Safe Intersections Initiative, identifying dangerous intersections before they become a site of tragedy. That means investing in safer crossings, better visibility, traffic calming, and four-way stops where appropriate. I'd also prioritize accessibility. El Segundo's ADA report found that 70 of our 90 miles of sidewalks aren't compliant. Nobody using a wheelchair or stroller should have to travel in the street because sidewalks are broken or blocked. Second, I'd improve our popular dog park on East Imperial. Right now, it's more a place dogs go than a park designed for them. Reliable irrigation, shade, seating and basic amenities would make this heavily used space better for dogs and their humans. And my third wish? More wishes. I'd invest in grant-writing capacity to secure additional state, federal, and private funding for projects residents care about. Let's turn that million dollars into many millions more.

Chris Pimentel

State law does not allow cities to give money to schools, which is maddening when you see how education funding is squandered as it descends from the state (it's 48% of the state budget and we see very little of it). That would have been first on my list. If there was $1 million, I would endow a local internship and training program. With a massive, region-leading economy, our ability to help residents of all ages, and particularly young people, access it falls into a gap between the city, the schools and the county. This money would allow us to have a local team both identify and advertise opportunities, vet candidates for businesses, and refer people for relevant training. These programs exist, sort of, but lack the focus of strong El Segundo focus. I'd also pay our residents' trash bills again, because I lose that vote every time!

3. To address housing affordability, should the City consider a rent stabilization ordinance?

Ryan Baldino

Housing affordability needs practical solutions, not just more regulation. State law already limits annual rent increases for covered properties to 5% plus inflation, with a cap up to 10%, and protects many tenants from eviction without just cause under AB 1482. A local ordinance could discourage investment in rental properties and the upkeep that comes with them. I support expanding housing in ways that work for El Segundo, including exploring a live/work preference so affordable units from new developments go first to people who live or work here. The State has assigned us 521 housing units to plan for this cycle. We should meet that mandate with thoughtful decisions that preserve our neighborhoods and quality of life. With 14 years on the Planning Commission, I know how to evaluate development proposals and balance housing needs with community character. I apply that long-standing experience to every housing decision.

John Pickhaver

Should we consider rent stabilization? Yes. But that doesn't mean we should adopt it without examining its consequences. Roughly 60% of El Segundo households rent their homes, and many are struggling. Refusing even to consider ways to help would be an affront to those we're elected to serve. In March 2025, tenants from a 23-unit apartment building came before Council facing displacement through substantial-remodel evictions. They shared the story of a 91-year-old neighbor who had lived there for decades with nowhere else to go. They received sympathy, but few solutions. We should examine rent stabilization alongside stronger protections against displacement, including relocation assistance and stricter rules for substantial-remodel evictions, while continuing to expand housing opportunities. Any proposal deserves careful consideration of its benefits, drawbacks and legal limitations, considering both renters and the people providing housing. Ultimately, protecting El Segundo's small-town character means protecting all the people who make it special.

Chris Pimentel

Affordability is an issue that we cannot wish away. We need real answers to make life more affordable, with amenities at broad pricing levels, city services aimed to reduce fixed costs, and smart spending. Our surge in residential pricing is a cost imposed upon us by our region: other cities' inability to implement basic government economics, public safety and education causes families and companies to surge into our amazing city. Their "business as usual" approach to governance is not ours; and ours works. The California Tenant Protection Act provides state-wide stabilization and inadvertently caused waves of evictions. A century of rent control programs nationwide had clear results: Rent stabilization is seductive, but paralyzes new residential construction, degrades residential quality, and destroys the incentive to invest in communities. Whether looking at crumbling apartments in the Bronx, or the recently paralyzed market in Los Angeles, the truth is: it just doesn't work. •

Building a Birdhouse: A Step-by-Step DIY Process

(Feature Impact) - To add charm to your yard, encourage local wildlife and give you a front-row seat to nature, building a birdhouse is a simple weekend project that checks all of those boxes.

Seasoned DIYers and first-timers alike can follow this step-by-step guide to create a functional, welcoming birdhouse.

Step 1: Choose the Right Design

Start by deciding what type of birds you'd like to attract. Different birds prefer different house sizes and entrance types. A simple, classic birdhouse design makes the project beginner-friendly and works well for common backyard birds like wrens, chickadees and bluebirds. In general, plan for at least a 1-1 2/2-inch entrance hole, a 5-by-5-inch interior space and 2 inches or more of roof overhang.

Step 2: Gather Materials and Tools

Most DIY birdhouses can be built with basic materials and tools you may already have at home, including untreated cedar or pine wood, screws or nails, wood glue, sandpaper and exterior-safe paint as well as a measuring tape, pencil, saw and drill.

Step 3: Measure and Cut Wood

Measure and cut wood to make the front panel, back panel, two side panels, floor and roof. Then sand all edges for smooth assembly.

Step 4: Drill Holes

Using a hole-saw bit, drill the entrance hole into the front panel. Position it a few inches below the roofline to keep predators out. Next, drill 2-3 small drainage holes in the floor piece to prevent water buildup and help keep the birdhouse dry.

Step 5: Assemble the Birdhouse

Attach the side panels to the back panel using screws or nails. Add the front panel then secure the floor piece, slightly recessed, so rainwater can drain. Attach the roof last, making sure it slopes slightly to allow water to run off.

Step 6: Paint the Exterior

If you plan to paint your birdhouse, stick to neutral, nature-inspired colors. Light browns, soft greens or white help regulate temperature and blend into the environment.

Step 7: Mount Your Birdhouse

Once dry, place your birdhouse in a quiet, sheltered spot away from heavy foot traffic. Mount or hang it 5-10 feet off the ground, facing away from prevailing winds.

AN OPEN LETTER TO EL SEGUNDO
from CITY COUNCIL CANDIDATE JOHN PICKHAVER

PICK YOU

DEAR NEIGHBOR,

The other candidates are asking you to vote for them. I'm asking you to vote for yourself.

Too often, City Hall treats public input as something to manage rather than to act upon. You're given an opportunity to speak. But what good is that if your input doesn't influence the decisions being made?

I've spent years organizing residents to make sure it does.

> When the City Council moved to convert El Segundo to a Charter City with little public awareness or education, I pushed for a town hall. You asked questions. Together, we got the City to change course.
> When a massive data center was proposed using a 25-year-old environmental impact report, I sounded the alarm. You rallied in opposition. Together, we helped stop the proposal.
> When Flock AI surveillance cameras were installed without a City Council vote or community input, I raised concerns about transparency. You showed up. Together, we demanded answers.

In the past, residents have had to push back just to be heard.

I will make sure they're heard from the start.

You shouldn't have to organize a public outcry to get a public response. Listening to residents and allowing their input to shape decisions should be how our City works every day.

- ✓ Imagine asking for a stop sign and seeing action before someone else gets hurt.
- ✓ Imagine having access to aquatics programs and facilities at times that actually work for you and your family.
- ✓ Imagine City Hall bringing the same urgency to keeping you informed that our incredible first responders bring to keeping you safe.
- ✓ Imagine seeing the ideas you shared for the City's Vision 2050 plan reflected in the decisions shaping El Segundo's future.
