Local Lawmaker's E-Scooter Bill Offers Path Forward for Cruisers

By Rob McCarthy

Legislation to regulate electric scooter rentals offers them a chance to operate again in South Bay cities, some which have banned the motorized boards over liability and safety concerns. Supporters think that Assemblyman Al Muratsuchi has struck the proper balance between protecting cities from lawsuits and being opened-minded about a new technology.

Scooters and bikes for rent are popular with office employees and tourists for short trips. The bill requires rideshare companies, including Bird, Lime and L.A.-based Wheels, to work with cities before launching operations. The Consumer Attorneys of California supports the attempt to regulate e-scooters and bikes and the "Wild West" nature of the business.

The attorneys don't consider the state protections a huge burden, calling them minimal. One of those protections is to set a limit on how much insurance the scooter companies must carry before they approach local governments to enter their zones. "E-scooters and bikes have appeared in major California cities often overnight," and left cities and counties "in the dust as they attempt to catch up and create regulations," the consumer attorneys group said. The chaotic rollout of e-scooters led to a "patchwork of conflicting laws and regulations" that needs continuity, according to the group the filed its remarks in support of AB 1286. The State Assembly approved the bill on May 3.

The State Senate must approve the bill yet, and the governor sign it for the e-scooter regulations to become law. The scooter and bike operators themselves are divided on the idea of being regulated in California. Three operators of mobility devices oppose restrictions while three are neutral, according to Muratsuchi's office.

Short trips under 10 miles account for a majority of the travel by car done by local residents and commuters, according to the South Bay Cities Council of Governments that studies transportation trends. The council is drawing up a map of low-speed corridors in the South Bay, which would be safe routes for e-scooters and bikes to travel. The goal of regional transportation planners is to ease traffic congestion and gridlock by promoting access to bus and Metro lines in the hopes that more drivers will use public transportation.

The scooter and bike companies would be required to carry liability insurance in case of accident, injury and damage under the proposed legislation. The general liability policy must cover at least $1 million per event. A company must be insured for $5 million or more against multiple crashes and mishaps, and must cover injuries and damage claims made by the person riding the e-scooter or bike when the crashed occurred, according to the bill.

A city or county that authorizes a provider to operate within its jurisdiction on or after

January 1 next year must adopt rules regarding the use of e-scooters and bikes before a provider can offer them for rent. Local rules must cover the operation, parking, maintenance and safety of the devices within the city or county limits, under the law.

E-scooters are a "last mile" transportation option and they give access to bus and Metro lines to people living in traditionally underserved communities, Muratsuchi noted. The regulations in his bill reflect the approach taken successfully by Santa Monica, he believes, and create guiding principles and financial obligations for the free-wheeling industry.

"California has been in the forefront of consumer protection with emerging technologies such as our first-in-the-nation insurance requirements for transportation network companies such as Uber and Lyft," the assemblyman said. Companies that offer shared mobility devices are already complying with minimum insurance requirements in cities like San Francisco and Santa Monica. "This bill would codify these regulations to create a uniform statewide standard, require basic safety standards, and prohibit waivers of rights to protect riders," Muratsuchi added.

As noted, three of the rideshare operators in the state oppose the restrictions on how and where e-scooters are permitted to go. A group called the Civil Justice Association of California opposes this bill over a concern it will lead to more lawsuits against proud of our students." Silvers added, "The amount they raised this year was phenomenal." He called the experience "one of those times that we can teach kids to give back. We are proud of the kids, the teachers and the community in general."

Board member and administration reports followed after WEF representative Rebecca Hamburg gave a quick report about the funding success of the recent Rock Around Rock event, as well as newly endowed scholarships.

Member Nelson Martinez called Thursday's meeting a "wonderful evening" for recognizing the "amazing and wonderful things happening in the district. Sometimes we don't take the time to recognize them." He also gave kudos to teachers, noting the strong showing that the TUEFOUTIBEJOUIFSDFOUTDJFODFUFDIOMM had to have a plaque placed in her honor at one of the sporting venues where she had volunteered. He also thanked the teachers for their above-and-beyond work during what he termed the "open house season."

Purrrfect Companions

Waffles

A cat (or two) makes every home more fun! Come meet our kitties and be prepared to fall in love!

Waffles is an easygoing cat who easily acclimated to living at our sanctuary. From the moment he arrived here, Waffles wanted to get out of his enclosure and mingle with the other cats and especially with people.

Sybil

not left alone too long when he knows you're home. Manchego's fearless nature would make him a great candidate for integration with friendly dogs, though he hasn't met any yet. Since he is young and playful, he will need to be adopted with a buddy. His brother Ricotta would be a great match

Ricotta is an amazing little bean of a kitten with a thick, fuzzy coat. He purrs to the touch and loves rolling on his back so you can give his belly a rub. Ricotta was underweight at the time of rescue and is still on the little side, but he makes up for it with his big personality. He keeps pace with everyone in the room and gives everyone a workout. He's a wonderful little sweetheart of a guy. Ricotta is a bit on the vocal side, making little peeps here and there, mainly at mealtime while you're serving food. He would integrate well with older kittens and cats, though they'd have to be playful since he will pester them for interaction. He may also do well with gentle dogs. Since he is young and playful, he will need to be adopted with a buddy or even his brother, Manchego.

Tipsy was turned into the pound with some lacerations on her head and one of her paws. When we saw her there, we knew we had to help her find her forever home! This petite kitty will roll over for belly rubs and head pets, but she can get a bit nippy when she is overstimulated. So a home with small children will not be a good match for her. Tipsy seems to adapt well to new environments if given a little time to acclimate. She has now shown interest in playing with the other kitties and is having fun exploring kitty tunnels and other toys.

These kitties are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

Manchego

This boy really loves to get attention and pets. If you are looking for a cat that will interact with you (and probably help you co-host any social gatherings at your place), Waffles is the one for you!

Pounce, romp, cuddle, play... those are a few of little Pixie's favorite things! She is one of the most affectionate and loving little girls you'll ever meet. She loves to be held and petted, and she purrs to the touch. Pixie has a lot of energy and loves to wrestle with her foster mate Pegacorn or toss about a seek out human attention. With his very playful nature, he loves to wrestle with his foster sister, Pixie. He also gets along with other cats and kittens and would adapt well to a cat-friendly dog. Due to his age and energy level, Peg will need to go to a new home with another young, playful cat or kitten. Of course, he would love to join a new family with his foster sister, Pixie.

Sybil was first discovered living on the streets. She was brought inside and soon delivered a litter of seven kittens! She was a good mother, but as soon as the kittens were weaned, Sybil made it abundantly clear that she was done sharing her space with other felines. Sybil loves people — any size, shape, gender or party preference. But she does not like other cats or dogs. If she is the only cat in residence, Sybil is everything you could possibly want in a companion. She will greet you when you come home with meows of "welcome" and "how was your day?" If you toss her a toy, she will play. She will even walk on a leash if you want some fresh air. Sybil is sweet, funny and a good conversationalist. What more could you ask? If you can only have one cat, make it Sybil!

Manchego is a wonderfully sweet, affectionate little dude with a sparkly tabby coat. As the big guy in his litter, he's always leader of the pack. He meets you front and center for playtime, hugs or treats. Manchego purrs to the touch and loves to be with people and other animals. His main concern is that he's
