Inglewood Is Eddy Finalist Again

By Haleemon Anderson

Inglewood is once again a finalist for an Eddy award, it was announced at Tuesday's City Council meeting. The prestigious honor recognizes business leadership throughout Los Angeles County as selected by the LA County Economic Development Corporation (LAEDC).

District managers Barbara Levine and Jose Torres were on-hand to present the nomination to the Council. "We are honored to have Inglewood as a finalist for the second year in a row," said Torres. Inglewood is joined by the cities of Rosemead and Whittier as finalists in the Most Business-Friendly City (MBFC) category of municipalities with populations over 50,000. "These cities have made economic development a high priority," said Torres.

Senior District Manager Levine said the winner will be announced at the 23rd annual Eddys on Nov. 8. The gala fundraiser held in Downtown Los Angeles will also award a small cities winner plus honorees American Airlines, Cal Poly Pomona and Emmy Award-winning producer Beatriz Acevedo.

Previous winners of the MBFC award include the City of Downey in 2017 and Pico Rivera in 2016.

Police Chief Mark Fronterotta spoke about a recent grand jury investigation of law enforcement practices. Entitled "Policing the Police," the report included findings regarding the processing and tracking of citizen complaints. Inglewood was one of 12 cities in LA County randomly selected for the investigative report and follow-up. "I'm happy to report we are at 96 percent compliance," said Fronterotta. The grand jury issued seven recommendations to the City -- four of which were recommended to all 12 cities investigated.

Fronterotta noted that his department has complied with all of the grand jury recommendations except one. The City did not agree with the recommendation to develop "an appeals process" when a complainant is dissatisfied with the results of an investigation or disposition, deferring to use Internal Affairs when a follow-up is warranted. The complete report, including City responses, can be found on the city's website.

Community Affairs Liaison Cinder Eller reported on efforts to find shelter for several homeless persons in Inglewood. Eller said her department has recently been successful at finding housing for five people, including a woman who is pregnant. Councilmember Ralph Franklin applauded her efforts, saying, "It takes time, patience and tenacity." He pointed out that Eller has worked with the Inglewood Police Department and City legal counsel to help families find transitional and permanent housing. "More families are starting to embrace her," said Franklin. "It's a win-win for all of us."

Councilmember Eloy Morales noted how difficult it is to work with the homeless in gaining their trust. He praised Sergeant Reginald Blaylock, saying, "He is really out there in the community."

Franklin reported on visiting Alta Vista Innovation High School in District 4. "It's a great honor to have them here," he said. "The city is embracing their efforts." The charter school specifically targets students who are in credit recovery, or other at-risk situations.

Mayor James T. Butts announced two appointments to local commissions. Cheryl Matthews is now Inglewood's representative to the LA County Vector Control District. Matthews said the City had no representative to the board, which tries to staunch outbreaks of any animal or insect-borne disease or health risks. Butts appointed Jacob Farhosa to the Park and Recreation Commission.

Upcoming City events include a cultural fair at Edward Vincent Park on Nov. 10, and the two-day Inglewood Open Studios art exhibit Nov. 10 and 11. The City will provide shuttle service to various art studios throughout the community.

The Inglewood City Council meets every Tuesday, unless otherwise noted, at 2 p.m. in the Council Chambers on the 9th floor, Inglewood City Hall. •

MASCOT Lands Safely on Asteroid Ryugu

Based on a Press Release from DLR, the German Aerospace Center, Provided by Bob Eklund

The near-Earth asteroid Ryugu, located approximately 120 million miles from Earth, has a new inhabitant: On 3 October 2018, the Mobile Asteroid Surface Scout (MASCOT) landed on the asteroid and began to work. The lander successfully separated from the Japanese Hayabusa2 space probe at 03:58 CEST. The 16 hours in which the lander will conduct measurements on the asteroid's surface have begun for the international team of engineers and scientists. The day before, the Japanese Space Agency's Hayabusa2 began its descent towards Ryugu. MASCOT was ejected at an altitude of 51 meters and descended in free fall—slower than an earthly pedestrian—to its destination, the asteroid.

The relief about the successful separation and subsequent confirmation of the landing was clearly noticeable in the MASCOT Control Centre at the German Aerospace Center (Deutsches Zentrum für Luft- und Raumfahrt; DLR) as well as in the adjoining room: "It could not have gone better," explained MASCOT project manager Tra-Mi Ho from the DLR Institute of Space Systems. "From the lander's telemetry, we were able to see that it separated from the mothercraft, and made contact with the asteroid surface approximately 20 minutes later." The team is now in contact with the lander.

The moment of separation was one of the risks of the mission: If MASCOT had not successfully separated from Hayabusa2 as planned and often tested, the lander's team would hardly have had the opportunity to solve this problem. But everything went smoothly: Already during the descent on the asteroid, the camera switched MASCAM on and took 20 pictures, which are now stored on board the Japanese space probe. "The camera worked perfectly," says Ralf Jaumann,

DLR planetary scientist and scientific director of the camera instrument. "The team's first images of the camera are therefore safe." The magnetometer team was also able to recognize in the data sent by MASCOT that the MASMAG instrument had switched on and performed measurements prior to the separation. "The measurements show the relatively weak field of the solar wind and the very strong magnetic disturbances caused by the spacecraft," explains Karl-Heinz Glaßmeier from the Technical University of Braunschweig. "At the moment of the separation, we expected a clear decrease of the interference field—and we were able to recognize this clearly."

MASCOT came to rest on the surface approximately 20 minutes after the separation. Now, the team is analyzing the data that MASCOT is sending to Earth to understand the events occurring on the asteroid Ryugu. The lander should now be on the asteroid's surface, in the correct position thanks to its swing arm, and have started to conduct measurements independently. There are four instruments on board: a DLR camera and radiometer, an infrared spectrometer from the Institut d'Astrophysique Spatiale and a magnetometer from the TU Braunschweig. Once MASCOT has performed all planned measurements, it is expected to hop to another measuring location. This is the first time that scientists will receive data from different locations on an asteroid. "With MASCOT, we have the unique opportunity to study the Solar System's most primordial material directly on an asteroid," emphasises DLR planetary researcher Ralf Jaumann.

With the data acquired by MASCOT and the samples that Hayabusa2 brings to Earth from Ryugu in 2020, scientists will not only learn more about asteroids, but more about the formation of the solar system. "Asteroids are very primordial celestial bodies." •

"Looking down the road, space exploration and the benefits it yields - in medicine and information technology - should not be overlooked."

PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS

Purrrfect Companions

Carlotta

“Second-hand” cats make first-class companions. Give one of these kitties another chance by giving them a lifetime of love with you.

Duncan is a very sweet, loving young boy. He is very playful and will need a play buddy in his new home. With his affectionate personality, he likes to be by you and receive attention. Duncan also likes to sleep with you at night.

Duncan

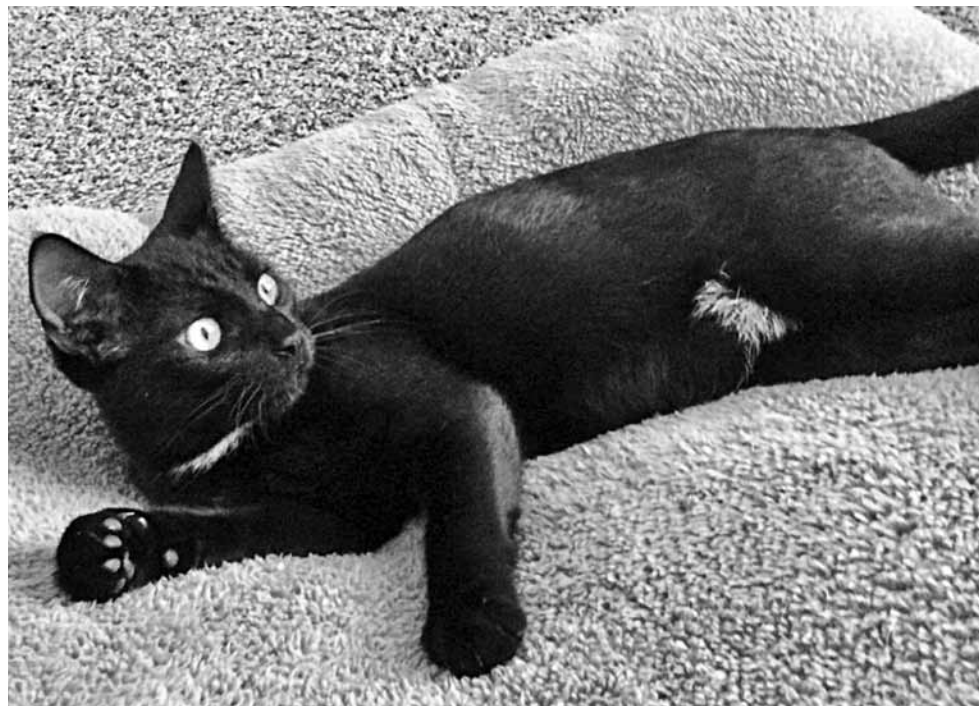

He gets along well with other cats, but dogs are still an unknown with him.

Black cats are more likely than other cats to be passed over by adopters. You don't choose your friends by the color of their hair. Marlon, Carlotta and Angelica ask that you don't overlook them because of theirs.

Marlon is intelligent, playful and sweet. He loves to chase wand toys, toy mice and ping pong balls... and to cuddle. He will wait at your feet until you reach to pet him or pick him up.

Rogue

she loves talking. She's very vocal when it comes to feeding time and will answer when you talk back to her. Even when she's sleeping, she will let out little chirps. Rogue loves playtime and would love to have one of her sisters or another kitty as a playmate and cuddle buddy. No doubt, she will fit seamlessly into any loving home.

Delphine is a sweetheart of an Abyssinian tabby mix. “Del” is an independent and expressive young lady, especially after capturing a favorite toy. She loves exploring and discovering a cozy nook where she can nap or just watch you work. In a show of kindness, Del several times presented her toys to another kitty for whom Del's foster mum is caring. The other kitty, named Florence, is shy. However once she touched noses with Delphine, the two were fast friends. Both cats love playing together and chasing each other around their foster home. Once a young mum herself, all of Delphine's kittens have been adopted. Now it's this lovely lady's turn to greet you when you return home and be your forever companion.

Florence (“Flo Kitty”) is a very shy, reserved kitty who loves taking treats from your hand. Florence is very expressive when it is mealtime and will always let know when she's hungry (no shyness about that). Florence is very playful. She loves chasing her toys and Delphine, with whom Flo Kitty is best friends. Thought not a lap cat, Florence enjoys being near wherever her foster mum and Delphine are! Florence would best thrive in a quiet home where her adopter is experienced with shy cats and who is willing to be very patient for the rewards of love this beautiful cat will surely bestow upon her forever companion.

These kitties are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Blvd. #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

On Saturdays, we have adoptions from noon to 3:30 p.m. in Westchester at 8655 Lincoln Blvd. just south of Manchester Avenue, and also in Mar Vista at 3860 Centinela Ave, just south of Venice Boulevard. Our website lists additional adoption sites and directions to each location.

Be kind. Save a life. Support animal rescue. •

Florence

Marlon purrs upon contact. After playing, he falls asleep at your side. Marlon is comfortable with children and other cats and is learning to accept dogs. This boy is very special. He will warm your heart with his sweet, heart-shaped face and calm demeanor. If you have another cat, he likes to sit nearby and get to know his housemates. He is a real love!

Angelica

Carlotta is a delightful black kitten with a little white area on her neckline, known as a locket. She was born with a “fever coat,” which is a temporary coloration of the fur that made her appear closer to a baby raccoon than a black kitten. Carlotta will need a playmate to keep her company. If you don't already have another young kitty in your home, please consider one of her other roommates. She hasn't been around kids or dogs, but she should be fine with gentle kids ages 6 and up and mellow, cat-friendly dogs.

If Lara Croft had a cat, Angelica would be it. She is adventurous, curious, fearless and smart. This girl will explore all the nooks and crannies of your home, seeking treasures, treats and adventures. Angelica is a beautiful, sleek, black cat with the lines of a Siamese. Angelica's ideal home would be one with a person who would take the time to play with her and give her challenging games and toys. We also suspect that she would be a hostess kitty and entertain your friends and family when they come to visit. If you like bold, outgoing personalities, then Angelica is the right cat for you

With a distinct streak in her hair, Rogue is part of the “X-woman litter” along with her sisters Phoenix and Domino (also available for adoption). Rogue is an absolute joy to have in the home. She runs to you as soon as you open the door, loves being held and will start purring by just looking at her. She's extremely sweet and loves cuddles -- but most of all,
