New Year Means Changes for Hourly Workers, Drivers

By Rob McCarthy

The state's lowest-paid workers will get a raise on Sunday when the minimum wage moves to $10.50 per hour, and it won't stop there. Governor Jerry Brown signed a bill in March making California the first state to commit to a $15 minimum wage. The first 50-cent jump kicks in on January 1 and affects businesses with 26 or more employees. Smaller businesses are being given additional time, though all businesses eventually will pay the same rate.

The law calls for another 50-cent raise in 2018, followed by a $1 per hour jump annually until 2022. Once the minimum wage reaches $15 for small business, the rate will rise annually with inflation.

The Governor has the power to suspend an annual increase if the state is projected to run a deficit or the economy sputters. Brown called the gradual increase in the minimum wage a "careful and responsible" approach that leaves the Governor flexibility to ease the burden on employers should the economy slow unexpectedly over the next five years.

This is the third consecutive year that California has raised the minimum wage. It increased to $9 in 2015 and $10 this year. A full-time worker making minimum wage will earn $21,840 this year.

The federal poverty level for a family of four is $24,300, and the federal minimum wage is $7.25--though a federally contracted worker in California would make the higher $10.50 per hour under the law.

Along with the higher hourly rate, minimum wage earners are awarded paid sick days--though that provision of the law won't begin for another year. When the $15 hourly minimum takes effect sometime next decade, full-time workers will earn $31,200 per year and have three paid sick days.

Filling the Retirement Gap

Take-home pay isn't the only employment issue for hourly workers in the state. An estimated seven million people don't have a workplace retirement savings plan because their non-covered employers don't offer one. A voluntary program for non-covered employers who want to save for retirement starts in 2017.

The bill's author, Senate President Pro Tem Kevin de Leon, said he pushed for creation of the California Secure Choice Retirement Savings Trust to provide retirees the same opportunity for financial security at retirement that millions of Californians enjoy as a job perk.

"Nearly seven million of our workers, who help make California the sixth largest economy in the world do not have access to a retirement savings plan at their place of employment, and after a career of working tirelessly they are forced to retire into poverty when their bodies give out," Leon said.

Much like the minimum wage law, the retirement-saving program would be phased in to give smaller employers more time to set up automatic payroll deductions for employees who choose to participate. Businesses with 100 employees have 12 months after the plan opens enrollment to create a payroll-deposit system for non-covered employees.

The minimum contribution level is three percent of wages in the Secure Choice Retirement Savings Trust, and like employer-sponsored plans the participants can have more deducted as their incomes rise and they approach retirement age. There is no liability to employers or the state, and the monies in the plan will be invested for long-term growth in a diversified, managed portfolio.

Nearly 50 percent of middle-income workers are at risk of entering poverty when they retire, according to statistics. The average American's Social Security payment is $1,341 per month.

Affecting Your Ride

While some people will be making more in 2017, California drivers will be paying $10 more in vehicle registration fees in the new year. The Department of Motor Vehicles also received the okay to collect $5 more to renew, transfer or duplicate a personalized license plate, and $10 more for a newly issued one.

The state is requiring the ridesharing companies, including Uber and Lyft, to conduct more thorough background checks on its drivers starting Sunday. While the enhanced passenger protection for riders won't be in place before New Year's Eve, every ridesharing business in the state will face penalties of up to $5,000 for hiring or contracting with drivers who are registered sex offenders or have been convicted of committing dangerous crimes--including assault and battery, domestic violence or driving under the influence--within the past seven years.

Taxi services are not covered by the stricter background checks. Ridesharing is a popular option for people who don't want to drive themselves and need to get somewhere quickly. While Uber is the name most people know, Lyft is the other big player in this alt-driving industry.

Passengers arrange for rides on short distance using a smartphone app to hail a driver to a pickup location. The ridesharing companies have insisted they are a ride-matching service--not a transportation company to shield themselves from liability in case of a crash or act of violence.

California lawmakers have made it clear through this new law that the responsibility for protecting passengers lies with Uber and Lyft even if their drivers are classified as independent contractors. Attacks on passengers by drivers are infrequent, and everyone seems to agree the majority of drivers are competent and professional. This new bill aims to keep it that way.

A few other driving-related changes in the law that South Bay residents should know about going into the new year include more restrictions on cellphones. No longer can drivers hold their cellphones while driving for any reason other than to call 911. The new restrictions also include tablets, laptops and any wireless device. This loophole-closing law was detailed in the Herald in a December 8

Inglewood Improvement Project May Cause Delays on Century Boulevard

Airport officials are advising motorists and travelers that the City of Inglewood's ongoing project to improve Century Boulevard may cause delays for motorists leaving Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) from now and potentially into March 2017.

As part of Inglewood's Century Boulevard Mobility Improvements Project (CBMIP), eastbound Century Boulevard will be reduced from three lanes to one lane between La Cienega Boulevard and Felton Avenue, including the I-405 underpass, for roadway excavation, removal and new concrete pavement. Further east, Century Boulevard will be reduced to two lanes between Felton and Inglewood avenues.

This work may impact drivers exiting LAX and using eastbound Century Boulevard to reach northbound I-405.

The City of Inglewood will post detours, and motorists leaving LAX can use I-105 as an alternative route to reach I-405. Work will not occur on weekends, nor on Monday, December 26 and January 2.

The CBMIP encompasses a three-mile distance from the Inglewood city limit at La Cienega to Van Ness. The project will improve roadway surface conditions; bring all traffic lanes and signals to current codes and standards; improve traffic and pedestrian safety; and reduce congestion along Century. Construction work is expected to be completed in mid-2017.

Traffic alerts and current airport conditions are posted on LAX's social media sites at www.Facebook.com/LAInternationalAirport and www.Twitter.com/flyLAXairport. Real-time traffic conditions in and around the airport are available at www.laxishappening.com and by following @LAAirportPD on Twitter. LAX is also now on WAZE, the community-based navigation app. •

2016: A Year of Firsts in the World of Sports

By Adam Serrao

So much can happen in sports throughout the course of one calendar year. Granted 365 days doesn't necessarily sound like a long time... but as 2016 has shown us all, just one year has the potential to take everything that we thought we knew about sports and turn it all completely upside down. In the leap year of 2016, we were all afforded one extra day to appreciate the sports world as we have all become accustomed to doing. In a year that was so entirely jam-packed with record-breaking history, any amount of extra time is, of course, extremely valuable and has shown us all that there truly is a first time for everything.

The city of Cleveland was very busy in the year of 2016, most specifically with providing the sports world with its share of groundbreaking events. One of those events people across the nation have been waiting their entire lives for was the championship won by the Chicago Cubs in Game 7 of this year's World Series. The series was special for a few reasons. It was the first-ever postseason meeting between the Cubs and the Cleveland Indians (who had home field advantage in the series). Everyone loves a do-or-die Game 7, and this series gave you more than that. The final and deciding game went extra innings and was interrupted by a rain delay just as the 10th inning was about to begin. Chicago came back from a three-games-to-one deficit in the series to win its first MLB championship in 108 years. It was something not even the movie Back to the Future could have predicted, though it came close.

Keeping the winning in Cleveland, the NBA's Cavaliers won that city its first major professional sports championship since 1964. The 2016 NBA Finals was a rematch of the 2015 Finals in which the Cavaliers took on the Golden State Warriors in what has become one of the sport's biggest rivalries to date. The series went a full seven games, like all sports fans love to see, and ended with LeBron James bringing his team back from a three-games-to-one deficit to give the title to the Cavs. It was the first time since 1978 that the road team had successfully won a Game 7 and the first time in NBA Finals history that a team has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the series. James, of course, took home the series MVP and had an iconic block in the final seconds on Andre Iguodala of the Warriors that played a huge part in the victory.

The year 2016 has become famous across the sports world for some of the great athletes who have said goodbye. Peyton Manning went out on top and rode his white bronco off into the sunset after he defeated Tom Brady and the New England Patriots in the AFC championship game and Cam Newton and the Carolina Panthers in the Super Bowl. With the win, Manning became the first quarterback to win the Super Bowl with two different teams and notched the second championship of his career.

Losing Kobe Bryant and Manning in the same year was certainly a big blow to the sports world, but that's exactly what happened in 2016 when Bryant retired after a 20-year career with the Los Angeles Lakers. The basketball legend left the game a five-time NBA champion and two-time NBA Finals MVP, and made the All-Star team 18 seasons in a row. Bryant was, of course, known for his high-flying, high-scoring ability. Despite being broken down and battered, he finished the last game of his career in typical Kobe Bryant fashion. He scored 60 points and left the crowd at the Staples Center in awe. It wasn't the first time that he did that.

Perhaps no athlete can be considered more of an icon than Michael Phelps--not only for his own career accomplishments, but also for what he has done for the United States in the Olympics. Phelps is the most decorated Olympian of all time with a total of 28 medals--23 of those gold. At the 2016 Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, Phelps brought home a total of six medals with five golds and one silver. The accomplishment in 2016 made Phelps the most successful athlete of the Games for the fourth Olympics in a row. Like Manning and Bryant, Phelps used the year of 2016 to retire, but did so as arguably the greatest athlete of all time.

With so much that happened in 2016, it is truly impossible to get to it all. Some other notable events, however, included an absolutely thrilling NCAA basketball championship win by the Villanova Wildcats. With perhaps no bigger shot in NCAA history, Kris Jenkins hit a three-pointer as the final buzzer sounded to give his team a 77-74 victory. Normally the winner of the college football championship would be notable, but Nick Saban and the Alabama Crimson Tide win it so often that it has become commonplace. Saban and the Tide are the favorites to win it all again in 2017. In golf, the U.S. team won the Ryder Cup trophy for the first time since 2008 and for just the third time in the last 11 competitions. Serena Williams won her 22nd career Grand Slam, Ronda Rousey lost the first UFC match of her career, Simone Biles won four gold medals in Rio, and Leicester City overcame 5,000:1 odds to win the Premier League championship.

It's impossible to cover everything that has happened throughout the course of one sports year in just one article, but it's clear that 2016 was a tremendous year of amazing accomplishments across the board. Iconic moments were created while a few great icons left their respective sports. There is a lot about this year in sports that will surely be remembered forever, but with 2017 just around the corner, it's now time to look forward to what another year of athletics has in store. • - Asixlion@earthlink.net

Easy DIY Tips to Save on your Winter Energy Bills

(BPT) - Here's what Americans have to look forward to this winter: While the south will be drier and warmer, the northern U.S. can expect "wetter, cooler conditions," predicts the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

"Regardless of the outlook, there is always some chance for extreme winter weather, so prepare now for what might come later this winter," says Mike Halpert, deputy director for NOAA's Climate Prediction Center.

As a homeowner, what can you do to get ready for the season's frigid blasts, in order to keep your family warm and comfortable while avoiding heart-stopping heating bills?

Whether you have an older or a newer home, chances are it could use additional insulation to make it more energy efficient. Approximately 90 percent of U.S. single-family homes are under-insulated, according to research conducted by Boston University for the North American Insulation Manufacturers Association. With proper insulation, "residential electricity use nationwide would drop by about 5 percent and natural gas use by more than 10 percent," says Dr. Jonathan

Levy, professor of environmental health at Boston University.

Fortunately, adding insulation in a few key spots in the home isn't difficult, and is within the skill level of many do-it-yourselfers. Two key areas to check for proper insulation are the attic hatch and basement walls.

If your home's hatch to the attic is above a heated space (versus in an "unconditioned" space such as the garage), it could be a prime source for heat loss. "Hot air rises, and many attic hatches are not properly sealed and insulated, so homeowners can be losing big money through that opening," says Tom Savoy, technical director for Insulfoam. The U.S. Department of Energy recommends inspecting the attic hatch to make sure it is "at least as heavily insulated as the attic, is weather stripped, and closes tightly." For the insulation, homeowners can easily cut and attach rigid foam panels made of expanded polystyrene (EPS) or graphite polystyrene (GPS), notes Savoy.

Rigid foam insulation is also easy to install on basement walls, in garages and attics. Some manufacturers even offer DIY Insulation Kits to help simplify the job. Available at home improvement stores nationwide, such kits can be used for a quick weekend project to boost your home's energy savings.

Because insulating the attic hatch and basement walls happens inside the home, you can complete these jobs even in the dead of winter in order to start seeing immediate savings on your energy bills. •

Film Review

In I, Daniel Blake, the Most Valuable Parts of Life Cannot Be Monetized

Caption: Dave Johns in I, Daniel Blake. Courtesy of IFC Films

By H. Nelson Tracey for www.cinemacy.com

While many critically acclaimed movies are buoyed by their flashy craftsmanship and ostentatious use of cinematic technique (which I love nonetheless when done right), there is an equally fascinating space for the films that reject these notions. Indeed, unassuming style is a technique in and of itself--and when paired with the right material it can be equally effective. This year's Manchester by the Sea may be a more mainstream example of this. The work of the Dardenne Brothers (most recently Two Days, One Night) also comes to mind.

Another entry to add now is Ken Loach's I, Daniel Blake. In blue-collar England, an aging carpenter recovering from a heart attack is forced back into the job search, which is as foreign as a new language for this elder craftsman. In our first few scenes, we see Dan face countless bureaucratic roadblocks on his road toward any shot of achieving financial security. This is a film that pays tribute to the working-class people whose lives are the most impacted by government-implemented institutions.

Dan (Dave Johns) is unique in that he's a relic in two ways. First, he's a man with a craft. Being a master carpenter has never been a lucrative profession, and in our present world has been essentially lost with the advent of more tech-savvy alternatives. My parent's generation grew up with woodshop as a staple elective in grade school; now that's been all but entirely replaced with computer classes in a generation that would rather not let kids' hands be worn down in favor of them staring at a screen all day. Soapbox aside, Daniel Blake is an anomaly for this reason and the world doesn't know what to do with him. His age and profession go hand in hand as he feels lost in a modern world that is more interested in keeping order than actually helping people in the system that it is theoretically supposed to be serving.

The film develops a new dimension with the introduction of Katie (Hayley Squires), a single mother Dan meets as the two struggle for any kind of governmental aid. United in their desperation, they form a loving friendship where Dan's craftsmanship and tender affection is actually valued. All throughout his community, Dan is someone who brings greatness into every corner--and yet it is all in ways that cannot be monetized, so he can't escape his financial struggle. In this way, the film demands discussion. Its subdued style makes no pandering to tell you what emotions to have, but seeing these characters and their authentic struggles leads one to beg the question if something needs to be amended here.

Like its protagonist, I, Daniel Blake is a film likely to get lost amidst other holiday movies in favor of more heavily marketed, big-budget fare, even among the prestige pictures. And yet here is a film that almost effortlessly casts emotional depth and compelling social commentary through the lens of its two protagonists. And at the very least, by the end of the film, you'll be reminded that the most valuable parts of life cannot be monetized and that there is no shortage of love that can be shared amongst all fellow men and women in this world.

I, Daniel Blake is rated R for language. 100 minutes. Now playing at Laemmle's Royal Theatre. •

Seniors

A Senior-Friendly Workout to Improve Movement and Prevent Injury

(BPT) - Exercise is good for everyone, but seniors with mobility or balance issues may wonder what kind of exercise they can do that will be safe, easy and effective. Jogging outdoors, running on a treadmill or lifting weights at the gym aren't always practical - or enjoyable - activities for everyone. However, one type of exercise works for everyone, no matter your age or ability, because it relies on improving practical movements often involved in everyday activities.

"Natural movement is universal, and it's about bringing movement back to the basics," says Bradley Prigge, wellness exercise specialist with the Mayo Clinic's Healthy Living Program. "It's not about following the latest fitness craze or learning the newest secret to weight loss. Natural movement is about connecting with your body and cultivating an awareness of your full abilities."

Rather than engaging in strenuous activity for its own sake alone, natural movement training emphasizes improving the efficiency of practical movements which can include rising from a seated to a standing position, getting up off the floor, crawling, stepping under or over objects, and more. The objective, Prigge explains, is not just to improve health but also enhance how well you can perform each movement.

Efficient movement can help with balance, inspire more healthful activity, and provide practical benefits in everyday life - all of which are especially valuable to seniors facing mobility or health challenges.

"The practice and training of movement shouldn't feel like a chore or something you have to do," Prigge says. "Rather, it should empower and liberate you, and, as a result, enhance your life. Natural movement training can help improve your strength, mobility and conditioning, but they're not the direct goal. Those improvements are the result of practicing and developing movement skills that are directly transferable to real world situations, like rising from a seated to a standing position, walking with balance and confidence, and lifting a bag of groceries without injury."

Natural movement is for everyone because at its most basic level it incorporates movements that are instinctual to all humans. For example, a natural movement workout might include crawling on your hands and knees for 30 seconds to a few minutes, sitting on the floor and swiveling hips and knees to facilitate standing up, or balancing while walking across a beam.

"I realized just how organic this type of exercise is after attending a natural movement training class," Prigge says. "I came home and saw my 2-year-old daughter doing the same kind of moves I'd just learned in training, without anyone teaching her to do them."

Prigge offers some advice for making the most of your natural movement workout:

- Pay attention to your movement and strive to develop awareness of your body's sensations, and how different movements feel. For example, where do you feel pressure and/or tension in your body when making a particular move? How does shifting your body weight or changing position alter those sensations?
- Only perform movements and positions that your body allows without producing pain. Just as walking, sitting, standing and other everyday movements shouldn't cause pain, your natural movement workout should also be pain-free.
- It's alright - and even advisable - to use your hands for support or raise your hips with bolsters or pillows until you develop greater mobility and strength.
- Be kind to yourself and realize it is important to meet yourself where you currently are, rather than where you used to be or feel you should be.

Wowser Schnauzers

Pinkie

We are looking for volunteers to help with our pet adoption fairs which are held every Saturday at the Petco located at 537 N. Pacific Coast Highway, Redondo Beach 90277, from noon-3:30 p.m. If you are interested in volunteering and can commit to at least one Saturday a month, please contact us at info@msfr.org. You can also visit all of our Miniature Schnauzers & Friends rescues at the adoption fair or check out our website, www.msfr.org. If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability, you can email us at info@msfr.org.

Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one! From all the folks and furry kids at Miniature Schnauzers and Friends, we'd like to thank everyone for helping us find homes for our "orphans" and wish everyone a happy holiday season.

"Are you looking for an elegant, reserved, mature lady to be your adoring and quiet companion? If so, look no further. I'm Pinkie, an eight-year old, female, purebred Miniature Schnauzer. Sadly, my elderly owner could no longer care for me--so one of her relatives took me to an LA County shelter and left me. I'm a shy, reserved lady with a docked tail, natural ears and gorgeous eyes. I've had a vet exam and a dental, which left me with eight less teeth but I feel absolutely wonderful. I'm a bit on the larger side, weighing about 17 pounds, but I'm still able to fit on your lap and I have many years left to give to a family who can appreciate and love me. I was really hoping to find my forever family to spend Christmas with since it's the first time I've ever been without a family for this special time of year. Well, if not for Christmas, how about starting off 2017 with a lot of love and companionship for you and a home for me?"

If you are interested in Pinkie, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"They call me Corky and I'm a six-year old, female, purebred Miniature Schnauzer. I was confiscated with eight other dogs and we all ended up at an LA County shelter. Most of the other dogs were adopted directly from the shelter, but my buddy Russell and I needed rescuing...so I stepped MSFR. Lucky for Russell, he found his forever home several months ago. But as for me--well, I haven't been so lucky. When I was rescued, in addition to being a stinky, matted mess, my eyes were all crusted over due to an untreated dry eye condition, and my teeth were so bad that even I didn't want to be around me. The rescue folks, who by the way are very savvy, suspected that I had bladder stones and they were right! One procedure took care of the stones, the neutering and a dental, which resulted in the removal of 15 teeth. Looking good and feeling even better than I look, but I will have to remain on eye drops to keep my eyes clear and on Rx dog food to prevent reoccurring stones. I'm just a bit of a gal, only 12 pounds, and I'm cute as a button with my natural plume of a tail. I get along great with other dogs and I'm very affectionate. So I ask, 'Why am I still here and feeling sad and lonely?' The holidays are no time to be without a family to love and be loved in return. I still have hope that the new year will bring me luck in finding my forever family. I know you're out there and once we meet, you'll never regret making me a part of your family."

Corky

If you're interested in Corky, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"Hi there, my name is Donny and I'm a lovable, 17-pound, five-year old, male, purebred Miniature Schnauzer who has had a pretty eventful life. One night I was out for a stroll, and the next thing I knew I was in an LA County shelter. I was told that I ended up there after sustaining some nasty injuries when a car hit me. Since I was a stray and injured, I wasn't going to be adopted--so I was very lucky to be rescued by the MSFR folks. They took me to their vet, who took x-rays and found that that I had several fractures in my pelvis. The surgery, on February 10, to repair my pelvis required a plate and six screws. I have completely recovered from surgery and am now on a mission to find my forever home. My visit to the groomer has transformed me into quite a good-looking guy. My eyes and my natural tail are my best features, but my sweet temperament is what will win you over."

If you are interested in Donny, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"Naming me Holly seemed most appropriate since I wandered off with my friend during the holiday season and ended up at an LA City shelter. He was very lucky and was adopted by the public. Unfortunately, I wasn't quite so lucky. When I was examined at the shelter, they found blood in my urine--so I was confined to the medical ward. Not a fun place for a four-year old, female, purebred Miniature Schnauzer. I was so lonely and the public couldn't even come visit me, so I was feeling pretty hopeless. Then the MSFR folks heard about me and came to my rescue! Their veterinarian examined me and determined that I just had a bladder infection that was totally curable with antibiotics. Things are definitely looking up for this 18-pound gal with an adorable face. I get along great with other dogs and am a real sweetie pie. Now, I just need to find my forever home to make the new year a great one!"

If you're interested in Holly, please email info@msfr.org for more information. •

Happy Tails

Congratulations to Eugene, who found his forever home in time for Christmas! His new "parents" had dogs when they were children but not as adults, so this will be their first dog as a family. When Eugene met their seven-year old daughter, he was so gentle and sweet with her that we believe he came from a home with children. It was just second nature for him to make friends with her. With the holidays upon us, everyone will be home for the next few weeks...so his new sister will be able to dote on him and everyone will share in the love. What a perfect time to make Eugene a member of the family! We wish them a very happy holiday season a long, happy life. •

article titled "The Hands-Free Device Every Driver Needs."

Drivers are prohibited from driving a motor vehicle while holding and operating a handheld wireless telephone or a wireless electronic communications device unless it's mounted on the windshield, the dashboard or the center console without hindering the driver's view of the road.

A driver may only touch his phone or other device to open or close an app with a swipe of a finger or a touch of a button. GPS devices installed in car are exempt from the tough new hands-free cell phone law for drivers, which targets a national epidemic of distracted driving. Highway deaths and injuries are rising again after a 50-year decline, and cell phones are a big part of the reason why.

Child safety seats: A new requirement says that children 2 and under must be strapped in a rear-facing child seat unless the child weighs 40 pounds or more or is 39 inches taller or more.

Accident reports: A driver involved in a motor-vehicle collision must report the crash to the DMV if the damage to property is $1,000. Fewer minor collisions and fender benders will need to be reported under the financial limit, which currently is $750.

Vehicle safety recalls: A car dealer or car rental company cannot loan or rent any vehicle that is under a manufacturer's recall. Companies have 48 hours after receiving a recall notice to pull the car from their fleets. The one exception is for licensed dealers or rental companies with fleets of 34 or fewer loaner or rental vehicles. The DMV can suspend or revoke a vehicle dealer's license if they break the law.

Motorcycle lane splitting: Driving a motorcycle between rows of stopped or moving vehicles is legal in the state, and riders and drivers need to watch out for one another. The California Highway Patrol will develop educational guidelines about lane splitting for the safety of motorcyclists, drivers, and passengers. Expect the California Drivers Handbook to add a section soon with some suggestions for drivers and riders about safe passage in the aisle. •
