Special Dogs That May Be Angels

By Ron Sokol

Genetic studies show that all ancient and modern dogs share a common ancestry, descended from a now-extinct wolf population or closely related wolf populations. There also is archaeological evidence that dogs were the first animals domesticated by humans. Some say thirty thousand years ago, some say ten thousand years ago, but in any event, well before the domestication of such beloved other animals, we enjoy, such as horses.

There are many affectionate expressions about dogs, not just that “a dog is a man’s best friend.” For example: “A dog is the only thing on earth that loves you more than you love yourself”; and “No matter how little money and how few possessions you own, having a dog makes you rich.”

Last month, an outstanding presentation was made by two representatives from Guide Dogs of America (GDA) to the Hawthorne Kiwanis Club. Nancy Matthews and Becky Robelotto, both South Bay residents and volunteers, each brought a labrador retriever “pup in training.”

We learned that it takes about two and a half years to adequately raise and train a guide dog at the cost of some $60,000. These expenses include food, medical care, intensive training, upkeep of the facility, and salaries, among other costs. But, the persons who receive a dog do not pay. Guide Dogs of America (GDA) is a non-profit organization, and donations, of course, are its lifeblood.

In 2020, GDA merged with Tender Loving Canines Assistance. Thus, today GDA seeks to empower not only persons who are blind and visually impaired, but also to assist children and others with autism, veterans with PTSD and mobility issues and to place facility dogs in institutional settings (such as a court room to provide comfort to a person who has been the victim of violence).

All this said GDA had a most humble origin. In the 1940s, Joseph Jones, Sr., a retired Union member, became blind. Mr. Jones assessed his options and decided a guide dog would best meet his mobility.

However, all of his applications were turned down because of his “advanced age” (just 57). Undaunted, he sought help from his Union. The Executive Council conducted substantial research, determined there was, in fact, a growing need for guide dog services, and founded International Guiding Eyes in 1948, changing its name in 1992 to Guide Dogs of America.

Gilded by Marissa Meyer

By Kim Harris, El Segundo Middle School Library Assistant
El Segundo Middle School Library

Gilded is the latest book by Marissa Meyer that follows the tradition of her Lunar Chronicles series and reinvents a gothic fairy tale. The Lunar Chronicles are set in the future, and this book is definitely set in the past. The story takes place in Germany, and seamlessly blends folklore and dark fantasy to create a dark fantasy based on the fairy tale Rumpelstiltskin. Serilda is an 18-year-old with the ability to tell stories. She was blessed by the god Wyrldith who is the god of stories, fortune, lies and fate. Serilda's father is a miller and helped save Wyrldith one day. In return, Wyrldith granted one wish and the miller and his wife asked for a baby. Serilda was born and was gifted with black eyes with a golden wheel in the center. She is a gifted storyteller, an excellent liar and has a talent for deception. Because of her eyes, she is shunned by most locals as cursed, untrustworthy and a born liar. As a school assistant, however, she is loved by children for her ability to spin stories from what appears to be thin air, but are her stories really lies?

Every month during the full moon, the fae hunt takes place, lifting the veil between worlds. It is then that the Erlking and his undead court go on a wildly exuberant hunt for supernatural creatures that is notorious for taking children and bewitching others, often to never be seen again. It is during the Hunt that Serilda rescues two moss maidens, granddaughters of Shrub Grandmother. When the Erlking comes to her door and demands that she hand over the maidens, Serilda lies and spins a tale that she can weave straw into gold. The next month during the Hunt, the Erlking kidnaps Serilda and tells her that if she doesn't spin straw into gold, he will kill her the next morning. Terrified that she is going to die, Serilda tries spinning but fails. While she is locked in the basement at Adalheid Castle, she meets Gild, the local poltergeist. Gild is somehow blessed by the goddess Hudda, who has the ability to turn objects into gold. He knows nothing of his past and somehow is tethered to the castle. He decides to help Serilda out, but for a price. Begrudgingly, Serilda grants him her firstborn child in exchange for the gold. The Erlking is happy to have all of the golden ropes Gild creates because he uses them to bind mythical creatures. Serilda escapes, only to be captured again the next month. When she escapes again, the nachtkrapp, a supernatural type of raven, spies on her and reports back to the king.

Serilda's lies eventually put her friends and family in danger. Just when she thinks she's safe, another horror happens. What's going to happen to Serilda now that she's trapped in the castle? The ending was a surprise for me because I didn't realize that this is book 1 of a duology.

I like that the book is full of twists and turns. Her characters are well developed and the story flows, even though it gets a little bogged down in the middle because of all the action in the undead woods. I really enjoyed reading this book and think you will too! If you like YA literature and reimagining of fairy tales, this is for you. If you like this book, check out Marissa Meyer's Lunar Chronicles, starting with the book Cinder.

Film Review

Four of the Best Indie Films of 2022

By Cinemacy editors, cinemacy.com
EO (88 min.)

84-year-old director Jerzy Skolimowski's film EO tells more than just the story of a wayward donkey, but also captures human nature during its wordless journey across Europe. With stark imagery and a pitch-perfect score and sound design, EO is an unforgettable piece of filmmaking.

The protagonist of the picture, a gray Sardinian donkey, is the heart of the film. His expressive eyes and cheeky personality convey so much through subtle movements and melancholic grunts. Six donkeys were used throughout the filming process, and it's been made clear that no animals were harmed in the making of the film.

Tenderly told with striking visuals and a ruminating score, EO deserves a top spot in the modern arthouse canon.

Not rated.

Aftersun takes place during a week-long vacation between Sophie (Frankie Corio) and her young dad, Calum (Paul Mescal). Set in a sunny Turkish beach town, Aftersun shows the simple yet important moments that also suggest the start of a pivotal time of coming-of-age.

Bringing this story to the screen is first-time feature filmmaker Charlotte Wells. Wells' natural ability to capture and realize profoundly small moments also makes sense when you consider that Aftersun was inspired by her own childhood.

Aftersun creates incredible depth in showing just how impactful the subtle moments between a parent and child can be. This directorial debut is such an impressive accomplishment, and it's easily one of the best films of the year.

Rated R for some language and brief sexual material.

The Territory (85 min.)

Equal parts heart-wrenching and poignant, The Territory uncovers the horrible reality and unjust hardships faced by the indigenous Uru-eu-wau-wau tribe as they fight to save their livelihood deep within the Brazilian rainforest.

When we first meet the Uru-eu-wau-wau community, they are desperate for help. The recent public support of land-grabbing by right-wing politician President Jair Bolsonaro puts their land, their homes, and their livelihood at risk of complete collapse. Deforestation at the hands of non-Native Brazilians, who equally feel as if they have a right to claim the land for their own endeavors, is proving to have environmentally and politically devastating results.

The Territory is an urgent call to action and the least we can do to raise awareness about this ongoing, deadly conflict is to talk about it, recommend it, and watch it. The future of the Uru-eu-wau-wau community, and the natural world, depends on it.

Rated PG for thematic material, some smoking, brief nudity and language.

After Yang (96 min.)

Adapted from a short story by Alexander Weinstein, the future-set After Yang tells the story of a family and their adopted technosapien, Yang (Justin H. Min).

The performances throughout the film are all emotionally felt. Each of the actors' scenes, including Colin Farrell, Jodie Turner-Smith, Justin H. Min, and Haley Lu Richardson, all resonate deeply in their tender honesty. They convey a tranquil serenity to director Kogonada's gorgeously created world, while also expressing such deeply felt feelings like grief, loss, and the fear of life's finiteness.

While you'll have to slow yourself down to its patient, slow-burning pace, it left my heart swelling, eyes tearing, and soul transcending. After Yang is a deeply beautiful, profound, and amazing achievement from Kogonada that will make you look at your world and life with a little more wonder after.

Rated PG for some thematic elements and language •

The campus where the dogs are trained is in Sylmar. Puppy trainers are needed, and here in the South Bay, there is a dedicated group involved with puppy training, so it is unnecessary to travel to Sylmar. If you would like to learn more about this and GDA opportunities, a great contact is Judy Reilly (herself a dedicated volunteer). Judy's email is JAReilly@GuideDogsOfAmerica.org.

Note that for a dog to become a guide or service dog, the initial training involves eight to eighteen months of socialization and basic obedience. At that point, the dog returns to the Sylmar "headquarters" for more formal training, with decisions made over time about the dog's suitability. It is not easy to "graduate"; the dogs may all be terrific, but qualifying as a guide or service dog is rigorous. Decisions also are to be made for whom the dog is most suited, including what is the right or best match. Some persons walk well, some not so well, if at all. Some are tall, and some are short. Decisions are very carefully made.

Keep in mind the training even includes when the dog may urinate, such that the dog may do so without lifting its leg. Further, the dogs are trained to ignore distractions and not heed a command that would endanger their owner.

Dogs are so popular today, and many families treat them as family members. The pet industry is booming, by all accounts. Here is an organization with South Bay volunteers who embraces these four-legged descendants from the wolf and helps them to become enormously helpful to persons in need.

I dare say the dogs may be angels, but so too are the persons who do the work to make them so. •

'You Have a Desmoid Tumor': The Diagnosis I Never Expected

(BPT) - Anne, now 52, and Tom were high school sweethearts. Things were going well for the couple who were going on six years of marriage and happily raising two small children when Anne started experiencing numbness in her legs and toes that began affecting her ability to walk. Anne, who was leading an active life and was otherwise healthy, knew something was wrong. After several doctor appointments, Anne was given a devastating diagnosis of a desmoid tumor, which changed her and her family forever.

Desmoid tumors are rare, locally aggressive tumors found in tissues that connect, support, and surround other body parts. These tumors can have "tendrill-like" growths that wrap around nerves and can cause debilitating pain, limited range of motion, and impaired mobility. In rare cases when vital organs are impacted, desmoid tumors can even be life-threatening.

As Anne sought answers as to why her legs and toes were going numb, her doctor ordered an MRI scan. An abnormal mass on the scan initially led doctors to tell Anne that she may have cancer. A biopsy later confirmed that while Anne did not have a metastatic cancer, she did have a desmoid tumor.

It is estimated that there are approximately 1,000 to 1,650 new cases of desmoid tumors diagnosed each year in the United States, but because they are rare, they are often initially misdiagnosed as different cancer types or other noncancerous growths. Women are two to three times more likely than men to have a desmoid tumor, and most patients are diagnosed between 20 and 44 years of age.

With limited treatment options available at the time, and at the advice of her doctor,

Tips To Help Teens Master Their Money

(BPT) - For most teens, high school is an exciting time, one that offers the opportunity to set their own path and make some of their own decisions. However, with this added independence comes additional responsibility, especially regarding money.

Today teens are spending $260 billion a year in the U.S., yet only 17 states require completion of at least one financial literacy course for high school graduation.

"So many teens don't realize how important saving is," says Angel Carter, an Atlanta teen who was selected by Boys & Girls Clubs of America to serve as national ambassador for its financial education program called Money Matters: Make it Count, created in collaboration with Charles Schwab Foundation. "They don't understand the importance of saving for their future needs and tracking or prioritizing their purchases."

Taking part in this program had a profound impact on Carter, along with more than 725,000 other Club teens who have

Coconut Curry Lentil Soup

Provided by Campbells Soup Corp.

This creamy Coconut Curry Lentil Soup has all the hallmarks of being the ultimate comfort food- which is why it's such a surprise to discover that it's vegan! This lentil soup recipe starts with rich tomato and creamy coconut milk seasoned with garlic, onion, and traditional Indian spices, making a flavorful foundation for simmering hearty lentils in this soup-ified version of a curry. Even better, this vegan Coconut Curry Lentil Soup is a one-pot recipe, so you can make it almost as quickly as you'll polish it off. Now that's satisfying.

Ingredients

- 1 teaspoon canola oil
- 1 medium onion, diced (about 1/2 cup)
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) Campbell's® Condensed Tomato Soup
- 1 1/4 cups water
- 1 1/4 cups cooked lentils (from about 1/2 cup dry)
- 1/2 cup unsweetened coconut milk

Directions

- Step 1: Heat the oil in a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat. Add the onion, garlic and curry powder and cook and stir for 2 minutes.

she decided to move forward with a 13-hour surgery to remove the tumor. But the recovery was difficult; Anne required 24-hour care following her surgery and was unable to take care of herself, let alone her two small kids.

For nearly a year after her surgery, Anne battled several open wounds, infections, and other complications, including not being able to walk. After months of physical therapy, Anne was finally able to regain her mobility and resume her life as a stay-at-home mom.

A few years later, Anne started to notice changes in the color of her leg, which she says started to appear gray due to poor blood circulation. After raising these concerns to her doctor, two new desmoid tumors were discovered in Anne's leg - one in the same place as the original one, right behind her knee, and another in her calf.

Anne met with an oncologist who specialized in limb salvation. He said to Anne, "You may very well end up with an amputation."

In total, Anne had ten surgeries attempting to remove her desmoid tumors, but they kept growing back. She shares that looking back, she would not have chosen to undergo so many surgeries, but at that time, even her doctors did not know that desmoid tumors have a very high rate of recurrence following surgery. As medical research on desmoid tumors has advanced, it's now understood that up to 77% of people who have their desmoid tumor surgically removed have their tumor grow back, sometimes even more aggressively than the initial tumor. Whether or not a desmoid tumor patient may experience recurrence of a tumor after surgery is dependent on factors such as tumor location, tumor size, and one's age.

There is a significant unmet medical need for people with desmoid tumors since there are currently no treatments approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. A helpful resource is the Desmoid Tumor Research Foundation, a patient advocacy organization, offering desmoid tumor patients education, awareness, and support. completed Money Matters. And because April is Financial Literacy Month, now is the perfect time for Carter to offer a few tips she learned to help others manage their money.

- There's no such thing as "too young" or "too much." Because of the way compound interest works, the earlier you begin to save, the less of a burden it is.

- Recognize needs vs. wants. Being smart about money doesn't mean you can't enjoy life, or do fun things with your hard-earned cash; but it does mean you need to plan for them. An easy rule of thumb is to figure out how much you need to set aside in order to meet your expenses, including savings, every month.

- Know where your money goes. It may not be particularly fun, but tracking where and how you spend money is just one of those healthy habits that's good for you, like eating spinach and exercising.

- Credit is like social media. Good credit is to your future purchasing what a clean social media history is to job applications: it takes time and commitment to build, and only moments to lose. A good credit score and a history of responsible spending give you options, which is priceless when you want to buy or lease a car, or apply for an apartment or even buy a house later on.

- Keep it real. In today's economy, managing money responsibly is a tall order, but it is possible, especially if you take control! One good way to be astute about finances is to look for a financial education program geared for teens, one that covers budgeting, goal setting, and planning for the future. Some programs, like Money Matters, even offer virtual reality games to practice for the real world without real-life risk.

These tips are just a few Carter learned through the Money Matters program at her local Boys & Girls Club. A new component of the program, the digital game $ky, is now available to all teens. The game challenges teens to navigate financial decisions in a fresh, fun way that will keep them thinking prudently about their finances not only in April but in the months and years ahead. •

Purrrfect Companions

Kitten Rescue rescues cats and kittens from a variety of situations. Most live in our volunteers' homes and those volunteers foster them until we can find permanent homes for them. Young or old, tabby or calico, we care for orphaned and abandoned kittens that need to be bottle-fed around the clock, moms with litters, cats that need socialization, and sick or injured animals. When they are finally ready for their forever home, we will help match you with the purr-fect one. When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Orzo is a sweet, friendly, engaging little guy who purrs to the touch and loves to be cuddled by his favorite people. He can be on the vocal side and will let you know if he would like pets or a hug when he comes to visit. He is curious and well-socialized with people, and appreciates a comfy bed to curl up in. If you've been wanting a kitty who loves to snuggle and spend quality time with you, Orzo is your best bet. He is a non-dominant friendly kitty who makes new friends easily. Since he is young and playful, he will need to be adopted with a buddy or into a home with a playful companion. His friends are Casarecce, Ravioli, Ditalini, Noho Hank, and Minnie.

Jill, recently orphaned after her owner passed away, is a very sweet and mellow cat. Although initially somewhat skittish and favoring napping under the covers until she gets to know you, she warms up quickly. As Jill gets to know you, she will become a big talker who loves to follow you around the house, curl up next to you on the couch, or, at night, sleep in bed at your feet. She has lived with her sibling for the past five years and with a dog. It is assumed she would be fine with both in a new environment although she would probably prefer a quieter environment with fewer animals.

Casarecce

This would allow Jill's sweet, friendly, and reserved personality to shine.

Casarecce is a playful and engaging little sweetheart who purrs to the touch and has a great balance between active and cuddly. Curious and smart, she will find all the good hangout spots and favorite toys in any room, getting her fill of exercise with her buddies, and then settle in her favorite spot for a nap. She is well-socialized and has an easy time getting to know new people. If you're looking for an active little friend who is always on the go, Casarecce is a great choice. At her young, playful age, she will need to be adopted with a buddy or into a home with a playful companion. Her siblings are Ravioli, Ditalini, Orzo and Noho Hank.

Brianna is a lovely soul. She's gentle, sweet, patient, good-natured, and just an exemplary being inside a cat body. She has the most beautiful tail, which she holds straight up in the air and twitches with excitement when she is happy. This will be every time she sees you because she loves attention. Brianna is a very good girl. She has impeccable litter-box habits and eats well in a very polite manner. Brianna is a little coy and not at all pushy. She loves it when you pet her and show her love. She does not understand being held yet, due to her rocky start (she was found wandering the streets with her two kittens). However, she does not resist being held and just asks to be let down fairly quickly. We suspect she will soon learn to like it since she loves everything else about human contact. Brianna is extremely low shedding, for people who want that in a cat. You would be very lucky to have this sweet-tempered, loving kitty grace your home.

Hunter appears mellow on first impression, but his personality shines when he is playing with toys or with fellow cat or dog friends. He is not a vocal kitty, however he is firm about what he likes and does not like. Hunter is fearless when playing with a big German Shepherd or with a boisterous puppy. Feathers and bells will quickly win his affection during playtime, and he would love to go to a home with other friendly, rowdy companions or be adopted with any of his other five siblings.

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations.
