From Down the Wrong Path to The Highest Pulpit

By Ron Sokol

For many of us, if not all, there is an event or circumstance that has a particularly major impact. This may have persuaded you to make an important choice or led to a path you have since followed.

Perhaps it is when you met that special someone, or a decision you made that, looking back, has been of truly paramount significance to who you are or where you are going. But I think that typically would not include someone trying to cut your throat.

"It was 1990. I grew up in Chicago. Dad passed when I was 10. Sorry to say he drank too much. Mom, thankfully, is still with us. She is a retired nurse. I had three brothers and one sister. Two of my brothers were murdered. As for me, through high school, I had good grades, played sports, and had plenty of promise. Unfortunately, I went the wrong way. I spent time in confinement in Illinois and then here in California. Actually, I moved to California to get a better life, but that was not happening, not right away. It still took a while. One incident made it very clear to me: Woody, you must change. You have absolutely hit rock bottom."

"One incident set you on course for the Ministry?"

"Well, my life flashed before my eyes, that's what I can say. It was a bad transaction, ok, and the other guy was trying to cut my throat... I realized that my life had got to be turned around. I have got to get on the right path. It took some years: Teen Challenge, Bible School, then an internship, classes, education, Certification, and finally Ordination. I had to save myself, so I might in time be able to help and hopefully save others."

Today, this fine gentleman, Woody V. Robinson, is an ordained Minister. For the past year, he has been Pastor of the South Bay Celebration, Assembly of God Church, located at 3841 West 130th Street in Hawthorne. For 20 years prior, he was Pastor of the Lynwood Worship Center. In fact, he was giving thought to slowing down a bit when a good friend mentioned he was thinking of retiring and asked if Woody would take his place. Pastor Woody took over the Assembly of God Church this past year with, of all things, the Pandemic in full force.

God works in mysterious ways, right?

At present Pastor Woody puts in about 60 hours per week.

"We're like the fire department... We polish the truck until the bell starts ringing, and then we go to work!" The work includes helping others, visiting people in the hospital, praying, meeting with couples, weddings, funerals, communion, baptizing, and leading the Sunday worship (at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m.). After the 11 a.m. Sunday service, free breakfast is served. The Assembly of God Church is like a microcosm of Hawthorne itself, with great diversity among the faithful.

"It is going to take time and resources to pursue our many goals: After-school programs to help kids with their studies, ways to support seniors and single parents, to strengthen

The Thing About Marseille

Article and photos by Ben & Glinda Shipley

There's just no sugarcoating Marseille. Ever since its founding by the Greeks in 600 BC, the city and its rowdy citizens, the Marsellais, have been nothing but trouble for any regime that attempted to control them. Hugely profitable trouble, of course, given the city's pre-eminence as a trading entrepôt between the Mediterranean, the Far East (through the Suez Canal), and central Europe. But successive rulers of Burgundy, Aragon, and France have alternated between sacking, garrisoning, imprisoning, and quarantining the city, while defending it against all manner of invaders.

The worst of those invaders, the Bubonic Plague, entered Europe here in the 14th century, then returned in 1720, thanks to one Jean-Baptiste Chataud and his ship le Grand-Saint-Antoine. Chataud was carrying a cargo of cotton and silk, too profitable for the penny-wise-pound-foolish city traders to exclude, but a perfect vector for the bacteria Yersinia pestis and the fleas that carried it. Over the next two years, the last of many European plagues nearly wiped out Marseille and the surrounding towns of Provence.

In the 1930s, when organized crime was at its height in America and Europe, the colorful Corsicans François Spirito and Paul Carbone (the "Emperor of Marseille") turned this picturesque port into the hub and refining center for the Indochinese-Turkish-American heroin trade later

Petite Maman is an Intimate, Empathetic Tale of a Child's Grief

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy.com

Where to watch: 'Petite Maman' is now playing at select theaters, including the Landmark in West LA and Laemmle Theaters.

Director Céline Sciamma (Portrait of a Lady on Fire) returns to the big screen with an intimate portrait of a girl in mourning in Petite Maman. Scaled back in both story and scope in comparison to Sciamma's last feature, Petite Maman packs a plethora of emotional catharsis and full circle sweetness into its 72-minute runtime.

Petite Maman courtesy Cinemacy.com.

A beautiful gliding one-shot establishes the environment our 8-year-old protagonist, Nelly (Joséphine Sanz), finds herself in: a nursing home on a dreary afternoon in the French countryside. She goes room to room, politely saying "Au revoir" to the elderly women that inhabit the home, and we quickly learn that Nelly's grandmother was a resident there until recently. Packing up the grandmother's humble belongings is Nelly's mother (Nina Meurisse), whose vacant eyes express her inability to accept this new reality.

Upon returning to the family home, which Nelly's mother and father (Stéphane Varupenne) are tasked with clearing out, Nelly is free to roam throughout the untamed wilderness behind the house. Stumbling upon the fort that her mother constructed as a kid, Nelly meets another girl her age, Marion (Gabrielle Sanz). The two girls connect quickly, similar upbringings and temperaments make them fast friends but a few too many coincidences lead Nelly to question who Marion really is and soon learns that Marion's presence can offer her a sense of closure in a very unconventional.

Is Marion real? A figment of Nelly's imagination? Or something more? Sciamma plays with these ideas early on but does a fantastic job of staying rooted in reality. Instead of leaning into the abstract sci-fi realm, she expands on the whimsicalness of childhood imagination and optimism (although the comparison to Netflix's Dark can be made wholeheartedly). Sciamma's signature themes of female companionship and emotional intimacy contribute to the film's most memorable moments, fitting nicely into her canon of highly impactful and poignant work.

Petite Maman is a beautiful story about a child's navigation through grief, told with a tenderness that quietly radiates with femininity and compassion. •

Sea of Tranquility by Emily St. John Mandel

By Max Stahl, Teen Review, El Segundo Public Library

Sea of Tranquility, by Emily St. John Mandel, is a book that I read recently, and one of my favorite books that I've read so far this year. A time travel story that is less than 300 pages long, the book is a pretty quick read, but at no point did the plot feel rushed to me. The story follows a few different people throughout different time periods (1912, 2020, and 2203) who are all connected by a single event. Each of these people experienced a time anomaly, a glitch in reality that temporarily transported them to another place and time in history. In the year 2401, Gaspary Roberts works as a detective for the Time Institute and is sent on a mission to verify the reality of this anomaly and possibly determine the cause of it. To do so, he must travel through time, interviewing witnesses of the event and discovering for himself what it all actually means.

I loved Sea of Tranquility so much. Although it took a little while for me to get super invested in the story and characters, I hit a point about halfway through where I was unable to put the book down and I finished it in a single afternoon. I loved the time travel mechanics in the story and the depth of description given to help explain away possible plot holes or paradoxes caused by time travel. I highly recommend this book to any science fiction or fantasy fans (and even just normal fiction fans). Sea of Tranquility is a very quick, but very good read, and absolutely worth your time. Read this book, I promise you won't regret it.

4 Steps To Reach Your Saving Goals

(BPT) - Whether you're planning for a short-term goal (e.g., emergency fund, home project) or a long-term goal (e.g., retirement), planning can help you succeed.

"It's never too late to start making savings a priority. We want to help our members meet their short- and long-term goals, and there are several ways they can get started," said Jaspreet Chawla, Senior Vice President of Savings Products at Navy Federal Credit Union.

Make Smart Goals

A SMART goal can help you make a plan you can achieve. It can help you focus on what it will take to reach your goal and make a plan that's doable. SMART stands for Specific, Measurable, Attainable, Relevant and Timely. So, whether you're saving for a new phone or a down payment on a house, make your goal specific, set a deadline, decide what it will take to reach it and then make sure it's realistic.

Find Ways to Make Small Changes

The next step in your plan should be to look at how much you can afford to save and if there are expenses you might be able to cut.

For example, are there subscriptions or streaming services you don't use? Can you ask insurers, or services like internet or phone providers, for a discount on your plan? If you make small changes gradually, you'll be more likely to stick to your plan.

Keep in mind, cutting back on certain expenses doesn't have to be forever - you can choose some for a temporary break.

Separate and Automate Your Savings

It can be easier to see your progress if you set up two accounts: a checking account for regular bills like rent, student loans and car payments and another account for everything else.

Once you've decided what you can afford to save, consider setting up an automatic transfer. You'll only have to do it once and then your savings will grow automatically.

"This is a guaranteed way to boost your savings," explained Chawla. "If you have direct deposit, consider sending a set amount into your savings each pay cycle. This way you'll be consistently saving without even thinking about it."

Earn More on Your Money

If you're looking at short-term savings goals (e.g., a dream vacation), you might want to consider putting your money into a certificate account. In general, certificates typically earn higher dividends than regular savings accounts, so you may reach your goal even sooner than you expected.

"By making small, habitual changes over time, you will set yourself up for success - it's never too late to start," added Chawla.

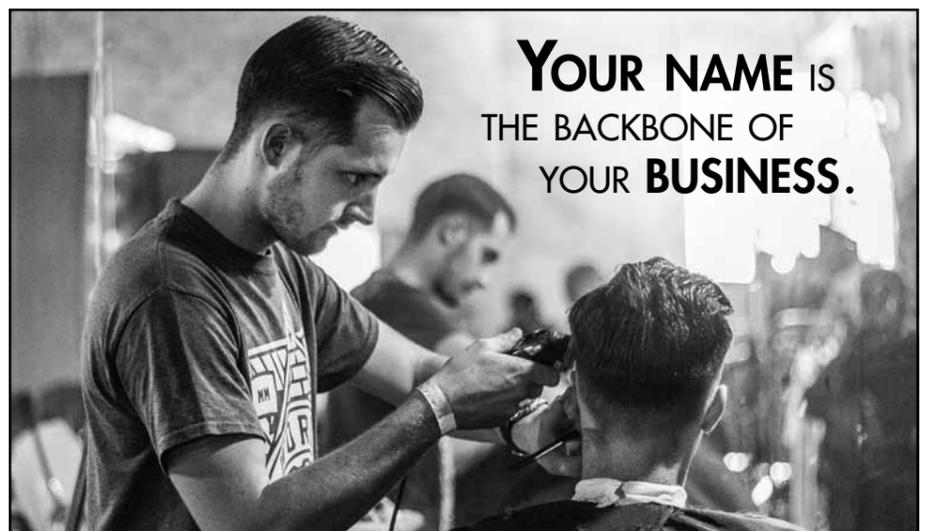

The best time to start building your future is now. Making SMART goals can help make saving more doable.

the relationship between the community and law enforcement, to fill up our Choir, and to reach-out to youth so I can tell them from the heart not to do what I did, don't go where I went, get on the good path and stay there."

Pastor Woody is 60 years young. His wife Claudia helps him at the Church, and together they have raised both a wonderful daughter and son. However, it seems to me that the good Pastor has two families – his own and the South Bay community.

"God has not run me crazy yet," Pastor

Woody laughs, but then gets into that inspiring place, where he has a dynamic presence that is impossible to put into words: "We may be different, but we don't need to be divided!"

At a time when anxiety runs rampant – the economy, Covid, anger in our country, and a terrible war overseas -- Pastor Woody wants to lend both hands, 24/7. Far be it from me to say, but I think God has quite a few more tasks in mind for the good Pastor.

Did someone say "Amen"? I think I heard about fifty Amens just now. •

PETSPETS Pets PETS PETS PETS Purrrfect Companions

Kira and Mira

Twice as nice and double the fun when you adopt one of these playful pairs. Only looking for one? Check out their friends at www.kittenrescue.org. When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Teo and Sansa were rescued by their foster parent when they were found living in a small, concrete outdoor space between bungalow apartments. Within just a few days, they warmed up more and more to being held and petted. This sister/brother pair are now a confident, playful, and cuddly duo. Teo is truly a big sweetheart and while shy at first, he has come out of his shell in his foster home. He enjoys playing with toys of all kinds, plays hide and seek with his sister, or wrestles with the resident rescue kitten of the same age. Teo can be adventurous, but is generally quiet and enjoys affection, including being cradled from time to time. Sansa is a bit more confident than Teo in her demeanor and actively seeks human interaction for pets and cuddles. She is loving indoor life and always has an appetite, with excited meows and squeaks at mealtimes.

Jupiter and Luna

She has daily spurts of teen kitten energy and engages in play with toys and her brother. Since they have not met many humans, they may be timid at first. However, once trust and safety are established, Teo and Sansa are sure to be sweet, loving additions to your family.

These sisters are double the fun! Kira and Mira run and pounce on each other as they play. Then they look for their people and take turns vying for attention with gentle head nudges and purrs. Kira and Mira love to be cradled in your arms or held next to your heart and are incredibly loving. Kira has the diamond widow's peak that creates a more pronounced "M" on her forehead while Mira has a crooked line of white on her forehead. These twins do everything together. They are very bonded and will need to find their forever home together. Come meet them at our Adoption Center!

Dressed to impress, these two adorable kitten sisters Kelly and Jess are ready find their new family. So sweet and loving, they will be such a fantastic addition to any home. They will fall asleep on your lap and purr-nuzzle you as they show their love. Kelly and Jess are also tons of entertainment as they play wrestle and practice their sneak attacks on each other. The sisters are quite bonded and will only be available as a pair. They would love to meet you along with their kitten friends at our Adoption Center.

Luna and Jupiter are adorable, bonded siblings with their own unique little personalities.

Luna is the more adventurous, confident sibling and Jupiter follows his sister's lead. These cuties will provide fun entertainment as they play and wrestle together. They are adorable as they lovingly hug and groom one another before they drift off to sleep. Although they may be a little shy meeting new people, both are total love bugs once you take the time to earn their trust. Luna and Jupiter are bonded and must be adopted into a home together. Please schedule a meet and greet with these sweet siblings and see if they are your purrrfect match.

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org.

SUMMARY OF THE CITIZEN PARTICIPATION PLAN

The City of Inglewood receives an annual allocation of Community Development and Planning funds from HUD, for the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and the HOME Investment Partnerships (HOME) Programs. Le Château d'If:

The most famous resident of this island prison just outside Marseille harbor never spent a night there—or anywhere for that matter. The fictional Count of Monte Cristo—invented by Alexandre Dumas (père) in 1844—served fourteen years before escaping to fabulous wealth and a revenge tour worthy of his Marsellais pedigree. Like Alcatraz in San Francisco harbor, this fortress was billed as escape-proof—only, unlike Alcatraz, it actually was. From the boat on our approach, the three-story Château looks like a quaint, gorgeous relic, until you descend into the damp, dark dungeons where generations of prisoners simply melted out of history.

Pastis:

When absinthe was outlawed in France and the United States (some say for its aphrodisiacal properties), Paul Carbone switched from prostitution to smuggling in enough Pernod to keep the Marsellais deliriously happy. Later on, the Marsellais firm of Paul Ricard took over the market with a locally

Bouillabaisse:

In 1980, eleven Marseille restaurants signed up to la Charte de la Bouillabaisse, a contract that committed them to preserving the integrity of this complicated and thoroughly local dish.

Colorful hideaway in la Calanque de Sormiou.

Even today, the northern quarters of Marseille remain outside the reach of French officialdom. Immigrants, primarily from the Middle East and northern Africa, inhabit and control some of the worst slums of Europe. We drive through every time we visit the city—and that's as often as we can—but have never given a thought to stopping there.

Calanques can only be reached with diving gear. In summers, with the threat of brush fires, outsiders are excluded altogether.

Le Vieux Port:

The heart of old Marseille and the perfect, stone-paved promenade for an evening stroll after dinner. The twin, sand-colored forts at the seaward end were originally built with their canons trained not on the sea, but on the rebellious population within. Today they make for life-affirming harbor breezes and spectacular Mediterranean sunsets. Our favorite activity in the port involves jostling with the crowds who gather when the fishing boats come in to offload and sell their catches.

Le Panier:

On the northern side of le Vieux Port, this steep neighborhood once housed a large Corsican population that incubated its criminal underworld into the dreaded Union Corse, France's occasionally stylish answer to the Italian Mafia. Today, you can find a thorough introduction to the island's cuisine in the Scorpion fish, skate, mullet, conger eel, John Dory, and Cigale (a type of lobster from the Calanques). Saffron, fennel, tomatoes, rouille (a sauce made with the distinctive local garlic and olive oil), and a healthy dash of pastis. Presentations vary, but our favorite haunt is the hyper-expensive le Miramar at the inland end of le Vieux Port.

The Thing...

In all its bustle and history, Marseille is a tale of multiple worlds wedged up against each other with as little in common as East and West Beirut along the infamous Green Line. Nevertheless, when dealing with outsiders, the Marsellais tend to band together, because they all speak the same language—and that language expresses a sense that this is a city apart, not quite French and not quite foreign, not quite lost and not quite respectable. The only way to describe this hyperactive, sometimes seedy, but always fascinating beehive is to use its name. Marseille will always be with us, whether we love it or not. And as it happens, we do. •
