Citizen of the Year Jayne Pimlott with Chamber President Lily Craig.

School District Facilities Committee, and director of finance for the United Methodist Church. In 2008, she received PTA's highest honor—the "Golden Oak."

Comments on the various nomination forms submitted on Pimlott's behalf referred to her tireless devotion to schools, her moral character, and willingness to take on the most difficult jobs. One person described her as "the most caring, intelligent, level-headed person I know. She is a trusted advisor to every organization she is involved in and always willing to step up when asked."

A college graduate and CPA from Princeville, Illinois, Pimlott moved to El Segundo in 1988 and raised three children here. She expressed surprise and delight at being honored as Citizen of the Year. "What a privilege to join the ranks of previous winners such as Chris Powell, Carl Jacobson, Barbara Briney, Michele Rogers, and so forth," she said. "These are people I respect and admire for their service to our community over the years. I love our small town, although being from a small mid-western town of 1,500, I've always thought of El Segundo as quite a large city. Being honored and getting to be the Grand Marshall of the Holiday Parade is quintessentially small town Americana. I love it."

Meanwhile, the Community Betterment Award went to Community Alliance to Support & Empower, otherwise known as C.A.S.E. Founded in 1992 by a small group of concerned residents looking to make a difference, the El Segundo-based non-profit organization focuses its efforts on helping local people who have fallen on hard times. Operated solely by volunteers, C.A.S.E.'s goal is to make sure persons who are already El Segundo residents don't become part of the country's homeless statistics. While it has served many families over the years, the organization typically provided food and assistance to 12 families at a time. But in light of today's especially challenging economy, C.A.S.E. recently doubled its workload to help 25 El Segundo families in need.

In making the award presentation to C.A.S.E. (which was represented by Cheryl Landreth and Polly Price), Chamber Treasurer and Industrial Lock & Security owner Elyse Beardsley reminded those in attendance that the organization operates solely on monetary donations from large corporations, small businesses, civic organizations, churches and community-minded individuals.

Those same people are counted upon to organize food drives in order to stock the C.A.S.E. food pantry. Yet the same economy that has put the hurt on so many local residents has also created challenges for the volunteers. "As with all non-profit organizations, C.A.S.E. too is seeing a downturn in donations when their client base is expanding," Beardsley said.

Chamber Executive Director Marsha Hansen applauded both winners, stating that their recognition was long overdue. "Jayne Pimlott has been a pillar of strength and a tremendous role model—our schools and this community are fortunate to have someone so dedicated working on their behalf," Hansen said.

"As for C.A.S.E., we are blessed to have such selfless volunteers looking out for El Segundo families that are struggling to make ends meet. Now more than ever, C.A.S.E. needs our support so it may continue to provide assistance to those trying to weather the economic storm. This organization without question makes El Segundo a better community."
