Lennox Athletics Win the Tournament of Champions

The Lennox Athletics won the Carl Magee, Jr. Memorial District 37 Senior Little League Baseball Tournament of Champions with a 10-4 win over their rival Titans Saturday at Jim Thorpe Park in Hawthorne.

Residents Support College-Bound Seniors

By Derrick Deane

As the smell of fluffy pancakes, hearty eggs and sausage and aromatic grits wafted through the courtyard at Olivet Lutheran Church last Saturday morning, residents from Hawthorne and surrounding neighborhoods came out to support the annual pancake breakfast fundraiser.

Headed up by the Holly Park Home Owner’s Association, the fundraiser raises money for an annual scholarship that is awarded to graduating high school seniors in the Holly Park community to help pay for college.

“The great thing about this scholarship is that whoever wins it will often come back after college and help out the community,” Katrina Manning, president of the Holly Park Home Owner’s Association and organizer of the event said. “It’s a revolving cycle to get from the community and then to give back to the community.”

Council members turned out for the event along with Mayor Chris Brown and they all donated to the cause from their stipend.

“We won’t know the actual total until later this month because the council members donate from their stipends which they get at the start of each fiscal cycle,” Manning said. The next fiscal cycle begins around July 1st.

The scholarship winners will be announced at the upcoming Day in the Park event on July 11 and the winners will also be on hand at a city council and Home Owners Association general meetings around that same time.

“We want the community to know what we’re doing,” Manning said of the multiple presentations. “The buy-in is once the community sees what we’re doing they have the opportunity to contribute and to support our efforts.”

The number of scholarships that can be given out varies on how much is donated at the breakfast and there was good indication that the turnout was very good this year.

“We often raise about $1,000 to $2,000 each year,” Manning said. “Even though tickets are five dollars per person, a lot of people will buy a bunch of tickets to the event because they’re donating to the cause. We’ve been doing this for several years now, so people also come out to support

“once the community sees what we’re doing they have the opportunity to contribute and to support our efforts”

the community.”

This year, the goals were set even higher with the hopes of awarding more students with scholarships.

“Our goal this year was high,” Manning said. “We’re always trying to bring in more people, trying to raise more money because the more money we raise, the more scholarships we can give. Generally, we give out two, but we’d like to give out three. It really just depends on how much money we raise.”

While the donation goals are set high, the group also has to factor in operating costs that can take a bite out of the funds that have been raised.

“We have to make sure that we stick to a certain budget,” Manning said. “We would love to give out more than a couple of scholarships, especially in these economic times when kids are bogged down in debt. Our scholarship will at least allow them to pay for their books.”

While the fundraising is a key component to the event, it wouldn’t be successful without good food, and in particular good pancakes. For the past five years, Manning has taken on the responsibility of cooking up her “fluffy” pancakes for attendees. This year, with so much to oversee, she passed on the important duty to her husband, Ron.

“I have to say my favorite pancakes are mine, because I consider myself the pancake queen, so something was a little off with the pancakes this year. They weren’t as fluffy as they normally are,” Manning joked while laughing.

All Ron could do to defend his cooking skills was say that the mix for this year’s pancakes wasn’t for the fluffy kind. Manning is quick to point out though that her husband makes the best omelets and that they rival those found in fancy restaurants.

Regardless of how the pancakes turned out, the event was deemed a success after raising more than $700 with much of the food was gone by the noon clean-up time.

At the moment, Manning said it is likely that one scholarship will be given out since the number of applicants is low. Students who are interested in applying for the scholarship may do so by downloading the application from the Holly Park Home Owners Association website at hollyparkhomes.org. The deadline for applications is July 6.

Winners will be presented with a giant novelty check along with, of course, the actual money from the scholarship and will make an appearance at a July city council meeting to be congratulated by the city.

“Last year, we didn’t let the winners keep the giant check because there were so many events and we didn’t want them to lose it so we held on to it,” Manning said.

Of course, if winners want to hold on to their novelty check as a keepsake, they’re certainly welcome.

“I guess, afterwards, if they want it as a souvenir, they can have it, but really they just want the real check,” Manning added with a laugh. •

Use Less Water, Save More Money

(BPT) - Severe drought and water restrictions in California may be making headlines and history, but the Golden State is far from the only region in the U.S. facing a drier summer. With the Environmental Protection Agency reporting that 40 out of 50 state water managers predict shortages in their states within the next 10 years, conserving water is no longer just the fashionable thing for homeowners to do - it's essential.

American households use an average of 100 gallons of water per person, per day, according to the EPA. High water usage doesn't solely impact the environment either. It also directly affects homeowners' wallets; the average household spends up to $500 a year for water and sewer, the EPA says. Conservation methods like choosing low-consumption bathroom fixtures and practicing smart watering habits outdoors can reduce the amount of water homeowners use and pay for.

Californians are facing some painful conservation measures, but consuming less water doesn't have to be onerous. This summer, you can use less water and lower your water bills by focusing on a few key areas:

In The Bathroom

Americans use more water in the bathroom

than in any other room of the house or anywhere outside it. In fact, according to the EPA, more than 43 percent of total household water consumption is due to toilets and faucets. If your bathroom fixtures are older, they're likely less water efficient than newer models, and your household could be using even more water.

Switching to WaterSense labeled products can significantly decrease water consumption. Replacing an older toilet with a WaterSense labeled one, like TOTO's new Carlyle II 1G Toilet, can help your family realize a 71-percent water savings when replacing a 3.5 gallons per flush (gpf) unit. When replacing a 1.6 gpf model, you will gain a 38-percent savings and a 22-percent savings when replacing a 1.28 gpf toilet.

Attractively styled, the Carlyle II 1G also features a SanaGloss coating that makes it easier to clean, meaning you'll use less water and fewer harsh detergents to clean it, which is better for the planet.

Faucets account for nearly 16 percent of total household water use, with the standard faucet using 2.2 gallons of water per minute. Switching to a WaterSense faucet uses less and can increase your faucet's water efficiency by 30 percent or more. The Oberon faucet by TOTO reduces flow to just 1.5 gallons per minute without sacrificing performance or style. To learn more about TOTO products, visit www.totousa.com.

In addition to replacing less efficient fixtures, you can also reduce bathroom water consumption by switching from baths (70 gallons of water) to 5-minute showers (10 to 25 gallons), and turning off the faucet while brushing your teeth (4 gallons), according to the EPA.

Smarter Washing

The washing machine accounts for nearly 22 percent of household water use, the EPA reports. Washing dishes in an older-model dishwasher consumes up to 15 gallons of water per load, and 3 to 5 gallons in an Energy Star rated machine, according to the National Resources Defense Council. Washing by hand uses 8 to 27 gallons. Many appliances have made leaps in water and energy efficiency in just the past few years. Replacing old appliances with newer, Energy Star rated or WaterSense labeled appliances can reduce your home's water and energy consumption.

Even if your appliances are older, there are still ways to conserve energy and water. Never run the dishwasher for less than a full load, and don't rinse dishes before loading them. Just scrape them thoroughly to remove food particles. When washing clothes, do full loads and separate lighter-weight items from heavier ones and use cold water rather than hot; most modern laundry detergents do the job just fine in cold water.

Conserving Outdoors

Outdoor water use consumes 9 billion gallons of water per day, the EPA says. To reduce water consumption outdoors, start by choosing plants that are native to your region - they'll be much better habituated to the environment and need less water than non-native species. Not sure what's native to your area? PlantNative.org offers a searchable database of plants for states across the country.

If you have an irrigation system, be sure it's in good working order. Leaking irrigation systems can waste huge amounts of water. Before you water, check soil moisture in the lawn and planting beds. If you can easily insert a 6-inch screwdriver into the soil, you can probably wait to water. Water at night, when the hot sun and wind won't evaporate the water before it can soak into the ground. Mulch around the base of trees can also help to retain moisture near the roots. •

The Beatles' Longtime Secretary Revisits Life With the Fab Four in Good Ol' Freda

By Morgan Rojas for CINEMACY

Freda Kelly was your average teenage girl in 1961; she went to school, was shy around boys, and enjoyed hanging out with friends and discovering the "latest" musical talent at local clubs. One night, she happened to see a band that changed her life forever.

That band was The Beatles, at the time just a couple of local Liverpoolian boys hoping for their big break. Smitten with the group,

Freda literally jumped on the bandwagon and became their official secretary. As history reflects, the Beatles stayed together as a group for ten years, although Freda was onboard for eleven. In the documentary Good Ol' Freda, director Ryan White explores the untold stories of Beatlemania, and Freda shares her personal and intimate experience working with the legendary band for the first time in over 50 years.

The transition from small town band to worldwide success is documented through Freda's stories. She recalls working for Brian Epstein and how devastating it was to deal with his death. Her stories about Paul, John, George and Ringo are so engaging and funny; she does a great job of humanizing these icons and proving that they really were just "average" boys. The archival footage paired with original recordings and songs from the group is always an exciting treat, as any Beatles fan would agree.

Some of the documentary's best moments come from Freda's days at the Beatles Headquarters as she recalls outlandish requests from fans. A fan once sent her a stick of gum for one of the boys to chew on and send it back, which she did. From cutting pieces of material from their clothes to collecting their hair after a haircut, Freda did everything she could to satisfy the frenzy of Beatles fans.

"Genuine" is the best word to describe both Freda and this film because, up until now, Freda has kept this past life a sort of mystery to her friends and even family. She didn't want her past to overshadow who she is today, which is why she kept all of her Beatles memorabilia (worth over thousands of dollars) neatly tucked away in her attic. The only reason why she even agreed to make the film, she explains, is to show her grandson one day so he knows what a full life she had "before the memory box goes completely."

If you're a fan of The Beatles, then Good Ol' Freda is a must see; it's a fantastic story, equally heartfelt and quirky. It highlights the evolution of the group through the eyes of the one who was there through it all; the challenges, the tours, the iconic breakthroughs and the momentum of success from the greatest band in history. Good Ol' Freda is available to stream on Netflix now. •

Hawthorne's Budget Fraud

The word incompetence does not even begin to describe the latest debacle at Hawthorne City Hall. Finance Director, Ricky Manbahal out and out lied and deceived the city by inventing revenue, or as acting City Manager , Arne Shadbehr called it , "imaginary money," in presenting the budget to the city leaders and residents. This imaginary money was in the form of eliminating the city attorney's office, money from the yet to be re- opened mall and other phony resources. This farce, perpetrated by former City Manager , Mike Goodson, along with Mr. Manbahal, conspired to pull almost six million dollars from city reserve funds and not let the city council know where the money came from since obviously the imaginary money does not exist. For months now the financial reports have had glaring red flags in the area of disappearing reserves. The only people who seemed to notice and take this seriously were Councilpersons Vargas and Michelin. Mayor Brown kept the charade going and still is trying to pretend and lie to the residents about it. Following right along with him is Councilwoman Angie English. Ms. English loves to criticize her colleagues by calling them shameful and disrespectful. Well, those words are now directed at her and Mayor Brown. As far as Ms. Valentine goes, it is hard to say. She has supported this fraud until last Thursday's special meeting.

Now it seems she is having a change of heart. Why? Is it because she is up for reelection or has she really seen the light? Her gullibility puts her in question as to her ability to make sound decisions. The only light in this dark tunnel is Mr. Shadbehr who has the knowledge, intelligence, experience and integrity to provide an accurate picture of what our budget truly is. He has to clean up this mess and make some painful decisions that will further impact the already damaged quality of life for the residents of Hawthorne. The horrible lack of leadership and downright fraud should cost jobs. The first people to go should be all those who were "added" last year when we did not and still do not have the money to fund their positions. This includes the mayor's campaign manager, Mr. Garfinkle, who is now our Public Information Officer, his staff and others. Mr. Brown and Mr. Manbahal should have the dignity to resign now before any more damage is done. Their actions are the ultimate insult to the good, hardworking residents of Hawthorne who once again have to live through another crisis of deceitful and power abusing officials. It will be a miracle if anyone ever takes anything coming out of City Hall seriously.

A's Pull Away from Titans for Senior Baseball Crown

The Carl Magee, Jr. Senior Little League Baseball Tournament of Champions champion Lennox Athletics and runner-up Lennox Titans pose together after the A's downed the Titans 10-4 for the title Saturday at Jim Thorpe Park in Hawthorne.

The Lennox Little League proved dominant in the Senior Little League (ages 15-16) as both teams involved in Saturday's Carl Magee, Jr. District 37 Tournament of Champions was from that same league. In the end it was the Athletics that won the crown with a 10-4 win over their rival Titans at Jim Thorpe Park in Hawthorne.

The A's showed their depth in their title victory as manager Celso Castro, Jr. pointed out the total team effort in their victory. They had strong pitcher from starting and winning pitcher Michael Zambrano and reliever Victor Valdez in allowing four runs on six hits.

The A's surged out to a 5-1 second inning lead but the Titans, behind a solo home run by Luis Garcia and a run scoring double from Jesus Sanchez cut the A's lead to 6-4 by the top of the fourth. That's when the A's added four runs to put the game away and Valdez hurled three innings of shutout ball.

"It was a total team effort," Castro said. "Everyone contributed."

The Titans attempted to get back into the game behind two solo homers and an RBI (run batted in) single for three RBIs. Other team members from the A's included Adrian Orozco, Marco Cervantes, Salvador Mercado, Eduardo Flores, Manuel Bernardino, Julian Diaz, Isaac Munoz, Kealohi Noguchi, Johnny Pacheco, Victor Valdez, Devin Garza and Diego Alarcon.

WISEBURN CAPTURES 50-70 CHAMPIONSHIP

The Wiseburn 50-70 (ages 11-13) team from Hawthorne won the Carl Magee District 37 Tournament of Champions crown by rolling over Lawndale 14-4 on June 7 at Jim Thorpe Park. In a tournament that featured just three Little Leagues, Wiseburn began with a 5-2 win over Lawndale on May 31.

Lawndale opened the tournament with a 7-0 shutout of Tri Park. After falling to Wiseburn, Lawndale moved its way to the final with a 17-3 rout of Tri Park on June 1.

WESTCHESTER ROUTS HOLLY PARK

The Holly Park Minor (ages 9-10) Little League Reds entered last Sunday's first round of the Carl Magee, Jr. District 37 Tournament of Champions championship series with an unbeaten record but it came crashing down with a five-inning 13-3 mercy rule loss to the host Westchester Nationals at Carl Neilsen Youth Sports Complex.

Holly Park entered the series with high hopes after a 9-6 victory over the Westchester Rockies on June 7 at the same place but had a rough time with the Nationals' explosive offense.

The Nationals balanced team had run-scoring doubles by Cooper Dolan, Kenny Ruiz and Anthony Temesbury for the onslaught. Pitchers Connor King (starter) and reliever Casey Richardson combined for a four-hitter and allowed just one earned run.

For the Reds, they had two home runs from Joshua Johnson, one of those in their win over the Rockies, in their four games of the tournament. The Reds had fine pitching from Jamal Dean, who picked up the win against the Rockies and he was expected to start against the Nationals in last Tuesday's deciding championship game.

The Reds were unbeaten as the Nationals came out of the loser's bracket with their loss to their rival Rockies. Molique Blue started and was the losing pitcher for the Reds in their loss to the Nationals. In the game, the Blues topped the Reds 6-3.

HINES STEPS DOWN AT HAWTHORNE

After 23 seasons as head coach for Hawthorne High's baseball team, Jeff Hines decided to call it quits. Prior to last Friday's 47th Annual South Bay All-Star Classic at El Segundo Recreation Park's Stevenson Field, Hines, who co-coached the Red team with Mira Costa head mentor Cassidy Olson, announced that he would resign as the head coach for the Cougars due to wanting to spend more time with his family. Hines, however, will continue to teach at Hawthorne.

Under Hines, Hawthorne made the CIF-Southern Section playoffs during most of the seasons but was eliminated in early rounds throughout most of the years. This year, the Cougars were mostly young and inexperienced at 9-14-1 overall and in last place in the highly competitive Ocean League at 1-8. Hawthorne, however, closed league with a 4-3 win at Centinela Valley High School District rival Lawndale on April 12. The Cardinals, five days earlier, came off a 1-0 upset win over league co-champion (with Santa Monica) El Segundo, behind junior pitcher Tyler Bonskey. That win knocked the Cardinals out of Southern Section Division III playoff contention. Hawthorne and Lawndale, which finished league at 2-7, had their season finale on April 14 at Hawthorne rained out and with the end of the season and neither team expected to make the playoffs, the game was canceled altogether.

Hines, who graduated from Culver City High in 1980 and stood out as a pitcher on the Centaurs' baseball team, began his stint with Hawthorne in 1992. His best seasons came in the 2001, 2002 and 2003 seasons when the Cougars, behind eventual Atlanta Braves draftee Larry Williams, had second place finishes in the Ocean League. In 2002 and 2003 seasons, Hawthorne reached the second round of the Southern Section Division I playoffs. •

Bright Spots Shine in Newest Dawn Ceres Images

Based on press release from JPL, provided by Bob Eklund

New images of dwarf planet Ceres, taken by NASA's Dawn spacecraft, show the cratered surface of this mysterious world in sharper detail than ever before. These are among the first snapshots from Dawn's second mapping orbit, which is 2,700 miles above Ceres. The images, with a resolution of 1,400 feet per pixel, are available at: <http://www.jpl.nasa.gov/news/news.php?release=2015-198>

The region with the brightest spots is in a crater about 55 miles across. The spots consist of many individual bright points of differing sizes, with a central cluster. So far, scientists have found no obvious explanation for their observed locations or brightness levels.

"The bright spots in this configuration make Ceres unique from anything we've seen before in the solar system," said Chris Russell, principal investigator for the Dawn mission based at UCLA. "The science team is working to understand their source. Reflection from ice is the leading candidate in my mind, but the team continues to consider alternate possibilities, such as salt. With closer views from the new orbit and multiple view angles, we soon will be better able to determine the nature of this enigmatic phenomenon."

Numerous other features on Ceres intrigue scientists, as they contrast this world with others—including protoplanet Vesta, which Dawn visited for 14 months in 2011 and 2012. Craters abound on both bodies, but Ceres appears to have had more activity on its surface, with evidence of flows, landslides and collapsed structures.

NASA's Dawn spacecraft photographed these craters in the northern hemisphere of Ceres, at resolution 1,400 feet per pixel, as it orbited the dwarf planet at 2,700 miles' altitude. Photo credit: NASA/JPL-Caltech/UCLA/MPS/DLR/IDA.

Additionally, new images from Dawn's visible and infrared mapping spectrometer (VIR) show a portion of Ceres' cratered northern hemisphere, taken on May 16, including a true-color view and a temperature image. The temperature image is derived from data in the infrared light range. This instrument is also important in determining the nature of the bright spots.

Having arrived in its current orbit on June 3, Dawn will observe the dwarf planet from 2,700 miles above its surface until June 28. In orbits of about three days each, the spacecraft will conduct intensive observations of Ceres. It will then move toward its next orbit of altitude 900 miles, arriving in early August.

The Dawn mission has achieved several important "firsts" in space exploration. It is the only spacecraft ever to orbit two destinations beyond Earth and the only to orbit an object in the main asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. The giant protoplanet Vesta was confirmed to be a fascinating world more closely related to the terrestrial planets (including Earth) than to typical asteroids. Dwarf planet Ceres, larger yet less dense, is believed to have a large amount of ice and may even have subsurface liquid water. Ceres was the first dwarf planet discovered and Dawn is now studying it in detail.

Dawn's mission is managed by JPL for NASA's Science Mission Directorate in Washington. Dawn is a project of the directorate's Discovery Program, managed by NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Alabama. UCLA is responsible for overall Dawn mission science. Orbital ATK Inc., in Dulles, Virginia, designed and built the spacecraft. The German Aerospace Center, Max Planck Institute for Solar System Research, Italian Space Agency and Italian National Astrophysical Institute are international partners on the mission team. More information about Dawn is available at the following sites: <http://dawn.jpl.nasa.gov> and <http://www.nasa.gov/dawn> •

How Men And Women Experience Retirement Differently

(BPT) - What’s retirement like? The answer may depend upon whether you’re a man or a woman.

Women report more positive experiences in retirement than men, yet also say they are more likely to experience negative emotions, especially stress, according to a study conducted by MassMutual. The study’s findings have implications for retirement planning, both financially and emotionally.

“Women often experience high levels of stress before retirement as they juggle both professional and family responsibilities,” says Elaine Sarsynski, executive vice president of MassMutual Retirement Services. “We are learning that the stress women feel often carries over into retirement, but we’re also hearing that women often make more of their retirement opportunities and experiences than men.”

The study surveyed 905 retirees within 15 years after retirement and 912 pre-retirees within 15 years before retirement. The responses for both groups were evenly split between men and women and respondents had a minimum of $50,000 in retirement savings.

One in five women (20 percent) is at least moderately stressed in retirement compared to 15 percent of men, the study finds. Women also are more likely to feel frustrated, sad, lonely and nervous.

Before retirement, women are much more likely than men to report being stressed. The study finds that 49 percent of women pre-retirees say they are at least moderately stressed compared to 38 percent of men pre-retirees.

Though whether you are a man or a woman, saving for retirement contributes to positive emotions and experiences in retirement. Those who have a 401(k) or other retirement savings plan were more likely to report experiencing positive emotions as compared to those who did not. Of the retirement plan participants, 74 percent say they are “extremely” or “quite a bit” happy compared to 68 percent who did not participate in a retirement plan and 70 percent of retirement plan participants say they are “extremely” or “quite a bit” relaxed compared to 61 percent who did not have a plan.

“Overall, positive emotions for both men and women tend to increase and negative emotions tend to decrease in retirement,” says Mathew Greenwald, president of Greenwald & Associates, whose firm conducted the study on behalf of MassMutual. “People also tend to exaggerate expectations for retirement, especially women, partly because it’s difficult for many people to envision what life in retirement will actually be like.”

In the years before retirement, women have markedly higher expectations than men for enjoying the social aspects of retirement and somewhat lower expectations for their financial fortunes. During retirement, women report having less free time than men and yet are more likely to have new experiences, find more time for friends, and enjoy more opportunities. Men’s expectations tend to be more in line with their eventual experiences, which are typically less fulfilling than women, according to the study.

Sarsynski recommends that pre-retirees take steps to help themselves gain a more concrete understanding of what their lives may be like once they retire.

“Spend time with retirees to gain insights and better prepare both financially and emotionally for retirement,” Sarsynski says. “We also suggest that pre-retirees track all of their purchases, especially when on vacation or participating in activities they enjoy. That will help them better understand how costly, and therefore how feasible, the lifestyle they envision will actually be.” •
