Local Aerospace Industry On a Comeback Trajectory

By Rob McCarthy

The Southern California aerospace industry is more diversified than ever thanks to the private-sector companies SpaceX in Hawthorne and Virgin Galactic in Long Beach, and employment in the aviation sector is expected to grow by thousands of jobs in the next decade.

Recent events and media reports signal a rebound for the aerospace industry, which reached its height of employment in 1990 when 270,000 people designed, tested and built airplanes and provided technical support for U.S. government-funded space missions. No one expects the local air and space industries - now employing 92,000 people - to reach the dizzying heights of the Cold War 1980s, but observers say the industry is healthier because of newcomers like Elon Musk’s SpaceX, Richard Branson’s Virgin Galactic, and the unmanned drone sector here.

“It’s not as big as it was 50 years ago, but there’s still a substantial,” author Peter Westwick told the Los Angeles Times in a recent article about the prospects for the region’s aerospace.

Westwick, who wrote “Blue Sky Metropolis” and teaches history at the University of Southern California, pointed out that aerospace has always been cyclical, with hiring ups and downs tied to federal contracts for military aircraft and missile-defense weaponry and systems.

Private space-launch services have re-energized the waning aerospace economy, creating jobs in Hawthorne and Long Beach for engineers, flight specialists, technicians and support staff. Current job listings for SpaceX in Hawthorne cover the gamut, from avionics guidance to supply-chain positions. SpaceX rockets do a brisk business lifting satellites into orbit, though the company says its core mission is someday to enable humans to live on other planets.

SpaceX, which was founded in 2002, has more than 4,000 employees in California, Florida, Texas, Virginia and Washington, D.C., according to its web site. Musk’s rocket-development and space-delivery service maintains its headquarters in Hawthorne, and Vandenberg Air Force Base in Lompoc is one of two launch facilities. The other launch site is at Cape Canaveral.

The company had 215 open positions at the start of August, according to SpaceX’s website. The job categories included avionics guidance, navigation and control; avionics hardware design and systems integration; launch engineering; materials engineering; mission management, manufacturing and production; propulsion and rocket launch, and software development.

SpaceX also needs specialists in information technology, manufacturing and quality assurance, space operations, supply-chain management; structural engineering, design and analysis, according to the company. A sizable number of jobs are unfilled for manufacturing and production technicians and skilled trades, and for business and administrative operations.

SpaceX is developing the Falcon Heavy rocket, which Popular Science magazine called “the mightiest rocket in the world ... only NASA’s Saturn V, which sent Americans to the moon, has ever generated more power.” The two-stage rocket is due to launch later this year, and will carry a tremendous weight - equivalent to a fully loaded 737 passenger jet - into low orbit. The engines at liftoff will produce enough thrust to power 18 separate 747s at once, according to the company. There’s a lot riding on SpaceX’s next-generation rocket, as Popular Science noted.

“The rocket’s success is critical for both SpaceX and the U.S. space program,” the magazine said. SpaceX itself acknowledges that the first planned mission to send satellites aloft for the Air Force is a first step toward a more futuristic mission. “Falcon Heavy was designed from the outset to carry humans into space and restores the possibility of flying missions with crew to the Moon or Mars,” the Hawthorne-based space service says.

The Falcon Heavy rocket is capable of carrying the company’s Dragon spacecraft, which was used in 2012 to shuttle cargo to the International Space Station. The U.S. Air Force and Saudi Arabian government have signed contracts for Falcon Heavy missions to launch their satellites.

Elon Musk isn’t the only billionaire with skin in the Southern California high-stakes gamble on space tourism and exploration. Virgin Galactic’s founder Branson and Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen’s Vulcan Aerospace “have their founders’ deep pockets and personal commitments to fuel ambitious plans, such as missions to Mars or sending tourists into space,” the Times wrote.

The workforce at Virgin Galactic, which maintains operations in Long Beach and the Mojave Desert, is on just such a mission. Its 200 employees, including rocket scientists, engineers and designers, are focusing to create “something new and lasting: the world’s first commercial spaceline” that can fly astronauts and average Joes alike to explore new frontiers.

A check of Virgin Galactic’s job openings on Aug. 1 found listings for engineers in avionics, launch, mechanical, manufacturing, production composites, propulsion and software development. Non-engineering positions were being offered in aircraft systems, contracts administration, environmental health and safety, and technicians for development, launch and propulsion Virgin Galactic’s operations include sites in Las Cruces, N.M., and Washington, D.C.

As many as 700 “future astronauts” paid deposits to ride aboard Virgin Galactic’s SpaceShipTwo, the company said. The would-be space travelers hail from more than 50 different countries, and range from 10 to 90 years old. The SpaceShipTwo was designed to carry six passengers and two pilots with enough room to “enough space “to allow for an out-of-seat zero gravity experience as well as plenty of large windows for the amazing views back to Earth,” the company said in 2005, fully expecting to begin space flights in 2015.

The fourth powered flight on Oct. 31, 2014, killed the copilot and injured the pilot when the SpaceShipTwo broke apart during re-entry. An investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board determined the accident was caused by the vehicle’s re-entry system deploying too early. The next version of SpaceShipTwo, which

“Don’t Think Twice” Finds Both Heart and Humor in the Creative Struggle

By Ryan Rojas and Jasper Bernbaum for www.cinemacy.com

Mike Birbiglia’s first feature, 2012’s “Sleepwalk With Me,” was one of the more interesting and promising directorial debuts of the former half of the decade. Birbiglia, who also starred in the film, buoyed the adaptation of his own stand-up routine with rare honesty and awkward charisma that made for one of the better examinations of comedy and the creative process of recent filmography. Relentlessly charming, but perhaps too slight for its own good, “Sleepwalk With Me” cemented Birbiglia as a triple threat to watch. His newest film, “Don’t Think Twice,” finds him diving deeper into the comedy world with a wider appeal, but with the same wonderful perspective of life on the outskirts from stardom intact.

Birbiglia stars as Miles, a longtime Improv confidence. While “Don’t Think Twice” does not call for anything fancy itself, there is an understated beauty and softness to the cinematography that enhances its tonal tenderness. Birbiglia, as it seems, is less concerned with cinematics and more concerned with chemistry, and the characters’ said chemistry sure does pop. While the film isn’t as particularly laugh-out-loud funny as may be expected, the dialogue is extremely punchy and in perfect tempo. Much of the humor comes not from jokes, but from very authentic, marvelously played situations. Again, Birbiglia proves he has a very keen knack for finding both heart and humor in the creative struggle. He and his cast have a rare understanding of the comedy in strife that always steers the poignant beats away from any puddle of schmaltz. For a comedian, a professional more often expressing their melodramatic feelings in words, Birbiglia

101 teacher and ringleader of his mildly popular NYC improv troupe, The Commune, including the spunky Samantha (Gillian Jacobs), who has to confront the professional drive of her TV-minded boyfriend Jack (Keegan-Michael Key); the gawky Bill (Chris Gethard) who is dealing with his elder father’s waning health; Lindsay (Tami Sagher), a thirty-something stoner still living with her wealthy parents, and the quiet Allison (Kate Micucci) who is struggling to complete a graphic novel she has been working on for the better part of a decade. The Commune is both their getaway and the anchor in their anxious lives. But, after Jack gets a regular role on “Weekend Live” (an uncanny satire of “SNL”), each individual in the troupe begins to rethink their life’s trajectories and the meanings within their friend circle.

One of few disappointments of Birbiglia’s “Sleepwalk With Me” was his lack of visual and his actors create drama through the emotions his characters hold in—a technique that pays off immensely in later beats.

At its surface, “Don’t Think Twice” may be about comedy, but just below the surface, one will find it is really a snapshot of a very familiar period in the lives of not only creatives, but all types of people confronting a certain kind of adulthood and responsibility. It is refreshing to find a movie that looks at showbiz—a smaller corner of showbiz, at that—and doesn’t try to satirize itself too much (which can often feel alienating to the audience). In “Don’t Think Twice,” the Improv world is the glue that holds the characters together, but it is Birbiglia’s characters and their hopes and anxieties that are the glitter that makes the film sparkle.

“Don’t Think Twice” is rated R for language and some drug use. 92 minutes. Now playing at the Landmark Theatre. •

Hawthorne Happenings Police Reports

From City Clerk Norb Huber POSITIVE EVENTS

This past week I was involved with a couple of real positive events right here in Hawthorne. Can anything really positive happen in Hawthorne? Sure they can. Last Saturday the Ramona Neighborhood Association held their annual picnic. The weather cooperated, the attendance was a record, the food went fast, the wading pool full of kids was great, the music was a little low and was drowned out by the noise of kids and adults having fun. The RNA board and chairman Bill Meyers need to be commended for organizing, promoting and running such a good, neighbor-building event. The volunteer students from Hawthorne Math and Science Academy were very helpful to me as I supplied the tables and chairs for the event. As a Ramona homeowner for the past 37 years, I have to say that it's been a great place to raise my kids and now my grandkids.

The second great event was held on Tuesday night over at the civic center. The HPD community affairs department and Chris Cognac were responsible for the organization of the annual gathering of residents to celebrate our safe city. Some of the citizens of Hawthorne who knew about the event came out to say thank you to our men and women in blue. The police know that a overwhelming percentage of our neighbors here support them, but it's good for them to hear that in person from a real live person. I tend to think that our law enforcement people need more support, more respect, more backing from our elected officials from Washington DC down to Eucalyptus Avenue where my family resides. The question I ask when voting is who is best at keeping my family safe. I just want a peaceful place to relax at and have a nice cold one after a long day of work and volunteering. I don't need much more than that.

THE POPE AND YOUTH

I'm a Lutheran. Yes, that means I'm a Christian/Lutheran. We don't worship or follow Martin Luther, we follow Christ. 2017 will mark the 500th anniversary of the Reformation. It has been that long ago that the young monk Martin wishing to reform the Roman Catholic Church nailed a list of 95 debate points on a church door that he wanted the church's leaders to discuss. When the Pope and the church's hierarchy refused, the Protestant movement rolled on and the Christian church worldwide was never to been the same. With that said, the Pope still today commands a large audience. He speaks for the largest church body in the world. Recently, Pope Francis spoke to a large gathering of youth at the World Youth Day event. His message really hit me as being timely and important. Stop being "couch potatoes". Get out there and make a difference in your world. He shared this message: "Remain steadfast in the journey of faith, with firm hope in the Lord. This is the secret of our journey! He gives us the courage to swim against the tide," Francis told the youth to "pay attention," because while going against the current is good for the heart, "we need courage to swim against the tide. Jesus gives us this courage!" "With Jesus "we can do great things," he said, and encouraged the youth to commit themselves to great and important ideals. "We Christians were not chosen by the Lord for little things; push onwards toward the highest principles. Stake your lives on noble ideals,". During my 39 years of teaching mostly high school students, I see that today's youth needs encouragement and direction. We are losing so many our children to low expectations, "do as little as possible to get by" and the government will take care of me mentality. They simply are living in a "cell phone" world. The last "instant message" is all that matters. We all need to be encouraged. We all need to commit to great and important ideals. We are only here on earth just a short few years. There are things we can do every day to make life better for others. Instead of only thinking of our own gratification, we can use our talents and time to help build up our neighborhoods, our city and our country. I only wish I could convince my students in my classroom to turn off their cell phones and learn these important truths.

SUMMER VACATION

There are only about three more weeks left before the kiddos start heading back to the schoolyard. That means I better get away while I can. But where is it cool and safe to travel these days? With our recent heat, it sure sounds nice to travel north. The Olympics in Rio sounds kind of scary. Europe is not as appealing of a travel destination right now. My wife, aka, "my old lady" has set foot in 49 of our 50 states, so, Alaska here we come. I'm sure it will be a "cold one". Stay cool my friends. •

Do You Suffer From A Longevity Disconnect?

(BPT) - They say that age is just a number. For the 10,000 who reach retirement age every day, however, that number may come with a multitude of questions about whether they have done enough to prepare for retirement.

The good news is that Americans today are living longer than previous generations. But too many of us don't realize that this boost in lifespan means we need to fund a retirement that could last for 20 or 30 years. This is what's known as the longevity disconnect.

Calculating how much you need to save for retirement is even more difficult if you don't realize how long retirement can be.

What Concerns Americans The Most?

One of the biggest worries Americans have when it comes to retirement is outliving their money, according to a plan participant survey by Prudential Retirement. A substantial 71 percent of survey respondents fear they may not have sufficient income for their retirement years. Only one in five are highly confident they will have enough to last a lifetime.

"Today we have more financial information, education and planning tools available to us than ever before," says Christine Marcks, president of Prudential Retirement. "But despite the steady drumbeat of headlines about retirement planning, we're still not getting it right."

Why are people having a hard time saving for retirement? Why are they actually saving less when they need to save more?

Blame Our Brains

The answer to those questions may surprise you. Research shows the reason could lie in how our brains are wired to respond to the environment. Humans are conditioned to focus on survival in the here and now. Yet, our contemporary life demands that we plan for multiple scenarios and contingencies, often with effects that could shape our lives far into the future.

Behavioral researchers have found that people actually perceive their future selves as strangers, and many find it difficult to understand the financial needs that "stranger" will have in his or her lifetime. That's one reason why saving for many years ahead is difficult for us. This and further research from Prudential shows us there are five inherent behavioral biases that make us our own worst enemies when it comes to saving for retirement.

Not being aware of increasing life spans (longevity disconnect)Putting off difficult or time-consuming tasks (procrastination)Thinking that bad things only happen to other people (optimism bias)Making decisions based on what other people are doing (herd mentality) Putting today's wants ahead of tomorrow's needs (instant gratification)Smart planning

For older Americans approaching retirement, the greatest advice comes from the people who know best: those already in retirement.

Many retirees agree that, if they had to do it again, they would take advantage of everything available through their employers. Other advice includes maximizing contributions to your workplace-based retirement plan or IRA, and taking advantage of IRS-allowed catch-up contributions if you're 50 or older. Retirees also suggest that those approaching retirement assess all the ways they spend money today, and avoid impulse purchases or peer pressure. Careful planning now can help you to achieve your goals of a secure and fulfilling retirement and make it last a lifetime. •

Valenzuela Keeps Busy Coaching Two Teams

Article and Photos by Joe Snyder

Patrick Valenzuela is coaching two teams in the Lawndale Parks and Recreation Summer Basketball Leagues. He had the task of coaching in two consecutive games last Saturday at the Diane Bolinger Gymnasium, located on the campus of Will Rogers Middle School. He split those two contests. In the first game with the 11-12-year-old division Green Ballers, he and his kids were victorious in a thrilling 33-32 contest over the Cavaliers. His next, though, was with the Polar Bears in the 13-and-14-year-old division but they were faced with the task of taking on the unbeaten Thunder. The Thunder proved overwhelming to the Polar Bears as his squad was soundly defeated 56-28.

His Green Ballers had control of most of the contest. They once led 27-12, midway in the third quarter before the Cavaliers woke up. They went on a 20-4 run to lead 32-31 when Jaelin Brown rebounded a missed free throw and tossed up a basket with eight seconds left in the game. Six seconds later, Trene Jimmeson was fouled. He converted on both ends of a one-and-one free throw to give the Green Ballers back the lead. They were able to shut down the Cavaliers from there holding on for the victory. They improved to 2-1, while the Cavaliers fell to 1-2 in Lawndale Summer League play.

Patrick Valenzuela coaches the 11-12 Green Ballers and the 13-14 Polar Bears with the Lawndale Parks and Recreation Basketball Summer Leagues. His squads split

Nacir Patrick of the Lakers attempts basket in Saturday's Lawndale Parks and Recreation age 11-12 basketball game against the Celtics. The Lakers rolled over the Celtics 49-29 in the Summer League opener.

Shortly after that 11-12 game was over, he returned with the 13-14 Polar Bears as they were pitted against the outstanding Thunder. The Polar Bears started out playing with them, at first, but by the second quarter, the Thunder just proved overwhelming. They took a 24-12 halftime lead before extending it to 42-22 by halftime and continued to stretch its lead from there. Issac Berdesquez, who will enter his freshman year at Leuzinger High and was playing with the Olympians' frosh-soph boys' basketball team over the summer, continued to dominate with a game-high 21 points, that included some three-point baskets and fast break lay-ups. Jesse Uirias added 12 points, followed by Holden Douglas with 10. "I think both of my teams played well,"

Valenzuela said of his Green Ballers and Polar Bears. "The (13-14) game just got away from us. They (the Thunder) were a very good team. We have another shot at them." Valenzuela is currently a student at El Camino College. He graduated from El Camino High School in Oceanside in 2013. In another 13-14-year-old contest, it was the Clippers who breezed past the Kings 45-25. The Clippers had command throughout the whole contest. They led 10-5 after the first quarter, 25-9 at halftime, 33-19 after the third period before pulling away for the 20-point victory. Raymond Meza led the Clippers with 16 points which included four three-pointers. Dylan Andelin, the son of head coach Rick Andelin, added 11 points, including three three-pointers. "We had a good showing," commented Rick Andelin. "We play that Blue team (the Thunder) next. We lost to them badly the first time but we didn't have three of our starters. They are expected back and so we hope to give them a run next time. It will be interesting." "We had a hard day," Kings coach Jason Hawks said. "Our youngsters are learning." With the victory, the Clippers improved to 2-1. The Kings fell to 1-2. In eight-to-10-year-old games, the Polar Bears stifled the Lakers 11-6 and Team Ryan topped Team Saul 14-11.

Local Stars Seek MLB

A pair of former local high school baseball players are doing well in their Minor League Baseball teams and hope to get called up to the Major Leagues soon. Ex-Hawthorne Holly Park Little Leaguer Dominic Smith is moving up the latter with the New York Mets organization with Binghamton of the Eastern League. As of mid July, he was batting .293 with 11 home runs and 65 RBIs. Smith also played in a Futures All-Star game in early July at Petco Park in San Diego, site of the Major League Baseball All-Star game that saw the American League defeat the National League 4-2 on July 12. Smith is 21-years-old. Just over three years ago, he keyed Serra High from Gardena to its first ever CIF-Southern Section title, winning the Division III crown with an 8-1 victory over Manhattan Beach Mira Costa at Dodger Stadium. He also pitched most of the contest and was the winning pitcher. The Mets, though, picked him in the first round and was the 11th overall pick in the MLB draft. They liked his hitting. Amir Garrett, a former basketball and baseball standout at Leuzinger High but moved to Las Vegas, Nevada where he finished at Findlay Prep in nearby Henderson, is now a Triple A player on the Cincinnati Reds' club in Louisville, Kentucky. During this year with AA Pensacola, Florida and Louisville, the left-handed pitcher holds a 7-4 record with a 1.86 earned run average. Five years ago, he was taken in the 22nd round by the Reds. •

If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Accrued interest and additional advances, if any, will increase this figure prior to sale. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postpone-ments be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call, 866-826-1670 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this Internet Web site, <https://www.hudsonandmarshall.com/>, for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, TS# 9646-0054. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. Looking Up

Ancient Eye in the Sky

By Bob Eklund

Light from a distant galaxy can be strongly bent by the gravitational influence of a foreground galaxy. That effect is called strong gravitational lensing. Normally a single galaxy is lensed at a time. The same foreground galaxy can—in theory—simultaneously lens multiple background galaxies. Although extremely rare, such a lens system offers a unique opportunity to probe the fundamental physics of galaxies and add to our understanding of cosmology. One such lens system has recently been discovered—and the discovery was made not in an astronomer’s office, but in a classroom. The lens system has been dubbed The Eye of Horus, and this ancient eye in the sky will help us understand the history of the universe.

Classroom Research Pays Off

Subaru Telescope organizes a school for undergraduate students each year. One such session was held in September 2015 at the National Astronomical Observatory of Japan (NAOJ) headquarters in Mitaka, Tokyo.

Subaru is currently undertaking a massive survey to image a large area of the sky at an unprecedented depth with the Hyper Suprime-Cam (HSC) as part of the Subaru Strategic Program. A group of astronomers and young students were analyzing some of that HSC data at the school, when they found this unique lens system. It was a classic case of a serendipitous discovery.

“When I was looking at HSC images with the students, we came across a ring-like galaxy and we immediately recognized it as a strong-lensing signature,” said Masayuki Tanaka, lead author of a science paper on the system’s discovery. “The discovery would not have been possible without the large survey data to find such a rare object, as well as the deep, high quality images to detect light

Enlarged image to the right show two arcs with different colors. The inner arc has a reddish hue, while the outer arc has a blue tint. These arcs are lensed images of the two background galaxies. Photo credit: NAOJ.

Arsha Dezuka, a student who was working on the data, was astonished at the find. “It was my first time to look at the astronomical images taken with Hyper Suprime-Cam and I had no idea what the ring-like galaxy is,” she said. “It was a great surprise for me to learn that it is such a rare, unique system!”

What They Saw

A close inspection of the images revealed two distinct arcs/rings of light with different colors. This strongly suggested that two distinct background galaxies were being lensed by the foreground galaxy. The lensing galaxy is seven billion light-years away. Follow-up spectroscopic observations of the lensed objects using the infrared-sensitive FIRE spectrometer on the Magellan Telescope confirmed that there are two galaxies behind the lens, lying at 9 and 10.5 billion light-years away.

“The spectroscopic data reveal some very interesting things about the background sources,” said Kenneth Wong from NAOJ, the second author of the scientific paper describing the system. “Not only do they confirm that there are two sources at different distances from us, but the more distant source seems to consist of two distinct clumps, which could indicate an interacting pair of galaxies. Also, one of the multiple images of that source is itself being split into two images, which could be due to a satellite galaxy that is too faint for us to see.”

The distinct features for the system (several bright knots, an arc, a complete Einstein ring) arise from the nice alignment of the central lens galaxy and both sources, creating an eye-like structure. The astronomers dubbed it “Eye of Horus,” for the sacred eye of an ancient Egyptian goddess, since the system has an uncanny resemblance to it. •

Chevy appeared in our front yard, several days after we heard him crying. He must have been on his own for many days. When caught, he was terrified, very thin, and covered with fleas. It was decided that he's probably Audi's brother, as he was found close by. He's a calm, quiet and affectionate little guy who loves to play gently. His fuzzy coat will be handsome when he's grown. Chevy loves to sleep on his foster mama's neck with Audi. Chevy is also accustomed to adult cats, kittens, and small dogs.

The redesigned space vehicle has tested safely, though some of the original “future astronauts” reportedly backed out because of the long delay and the 2014 in-air malfunction that investigators blamed on pilot error, not the vehicle’s design or integrity. The Federal Aviation Administration’s Office of Commercial Space Transportation on Aug. 1 issued Virgin Galactic an operator license for SpaceShipTwo, moving the spaceliner closer to its maiden voyage.

“Check back soon for more details about the flight test program and what to expect on the ground and in the skies,” it reads.

The price for a ride on the six-seater spacecraft was $200,000 in the beginning, which the company bumped up to $250,000, a space-industry journal Space.com reported. Branson reportedly said the price would remain at $250,000 until the first 1,000 people had taken suborbital flights in space. Virgin Galactic hopes eventually to lower the price below $200,000 to make spaceflight available to more people, Branson told Space.com. in a 2013 interview.

SpaceX, Virgin Galactic and the Los Angeles-based launch company Rocket Lab have filled their satellite-launch manifests with government and commercial contracts, the Times reported last month. Microsoft co-founder Allen and his company Vulcan Aerospace are building a plane in the Mojave that will have the largest wingspan ever to launch satellites into orbit.

Tim Buzza, a former Northrop engineer who is vice president of the satellite-launching division for Virgin Galactica, like many people interviewed by the Times thinks the Southern California air and space industry is stabilizing with smaller companies poised to grow, after the region lost the giant defense contractors Lockheed and Northrop Grumman who moved out to Washington, D.C.

The current industry is much smaller, yet a high-ranking strategy consultant with PriceWaterhouseCooper told the Times, "the aerospace and defense sector in Southern California is far from dead." •
