City Council Approves Billboard Replacement, Looks at Blight Fee

By Derrick Deane

Continuing to develop businesses and expanding on ideas on how to increase revenue was the main focus for the Hawthorne City Council in its first meeting of 2018. One of those revenue methods will consist of the replacement of the electronic billboard next to the 405 Freeway by South Bay Ford.

The new sign will be a double-sided billboard that will bring in $70,000 annually to the City of Hawthorne and adjust every five years in conjunction with the Consumer Price Index.

James said. "I don't know how many times we'll use the sign, if at all, so I don't really anticipate a conflict -- but we should be able to get an advertisement we want on there."

Vargas remained concerned with the time frame of advanced notice, especially in cases when an event is brought together under the 45-day period. "I understand the need of the businesses to market their product and that's the primary purpose of this, but if we had an event that comes up in three weeks, would we be able to talk to the owners and get look to those cities as examples in drafting rules for its own version of the fee.

The proposal already has an early supporter in Valentine, who said she didn't consider the blighted properties as part of the economic development and revitalization of the city. "I hadn't thought about that and I realized that we're trying to promote economic development and this is important," she said. "We want businesses to come in. We don't want them to be discouraged because they see a lot of blighted properties. I support that proposed

Hawthorne currently does not receive any revenue from the current sign there.

The new sign will be 7 feet taller than the current 90-foot tall sign that stands on the east side of the 405 and will feature automatic dimming at night. "It will be 3-foot candles above ambient light," Planning Director Brian James said. "A foot-candle is the amount of light a candle gives off from a foot away."

The new sign will only feature static advertisements that change every four to eight seconds. No flashing, blinking, or animation will be allowed. "We'll also have space available for public service announcements on a space-available basis as well as emergency notifications," James said.

The advertising of community events became a discussion item as Councilmembers Olivia Valentine and Angie Reyes English as well as Mayor Alex Vargas all addressed James about various aspects of getting events and services displayed on the billboard. "In the agreement, it says that we have to give [the sign owner] a request 45 days in advance," that scheduled for the billboard?" she asked. Interim City Manager Arnie Shadbehr explained that big events that brought a large number of people from outside the city saw planning begin six months in advance. He added that smaller events like Good Neighbors Day still require at least three months of planning. Additionally the representatives for the sign and South Bay Ford also agreed to work with the City if the need arises.

While the billboard will bring in a steady stream of revenue, it is just the beginning for what looks to be a very aggressive revenue seeking year for the City Council. Mayor Pro Tem Hadir Awad mentioned that in the early part of the year, he wants to draft up a fee for buildings that are non-operational or abandoned. "If I'm an investor and I come into a city and see a lot of blighted buildings, I'm not going to want to invest my money there," he said.

What has unofficially been called the "blight fee" has been put into practice in Berkeley and Long Beach. Hawthorne will blight fee whenever it comes up."

The abatement of blighted properties in the city coincides with the third annual Hawthorne Business Expo, which Valentine oversees. "I am so proud to be bringing the Hawthorne Business Expo back for the third time," she said. "This is a collaboration between the Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce and the Hawthorne City Council and it's all about growing and sustaining our businesses."

Valentine noted that almost 50 Hawthorne businesses applied and got accepted for the expo that will take place Jan. 24 from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Hawthorne Memorial Center. The event, which is free to the public, will feature networking opportunities, keynote speakers, and food sampling from Hawthorne restaurants. The event precedes English's annual Service Provider Fair, which occurs in April. "It is my hope that this year, we continue to be aggressive when it comes to economic revenue for our city," English said in her closing remarks. "I think it's a great start in January that we're doing that today." •

Golden Globe-Winner Oldman's Career Best as Winston Churchill

In a very powerful opening shot, dropping us into the world of 1941 British Parliament, it's clear that Joe Wright's latest film will not only be a showcase for the work of actor Gary Oldman, but also a reminder of the great cinematography of Bruno Delbonnel -- whose keen eye previously brought life to Inside Llewyn Davis and Amelie, among others. Like in his previous films, Wright doesn't miss any opportunity to let the camera do the storytelling and his collaboration with Delbonnel proves to be a great combination right from the get-go.

Darkest Hour is foremost a biography film about Winston Churchill, a leader who remains a political hero across all party lines. The film takes place in May 1941, with World War II and a German invasion imminent. Through peculiar circumstances, one man is at the helm of the island-based empire. Unconventional casting pays off immensely. Gary Oldman, who in real life looks or sounds nothing like Churchill, is given one of the most hard-earned scene-chewing roles in ages. The biography wisely focuses on a very critical period of his career and world history, and that helps the film itself remained focused.

Oldman is unrecognizable. It would take a more trained eye to tell what is makeup and what is weight gain. He completely disappears into Churchill as a fully formed character. It helps that he's a bit of a caricature, especially compared to the more ordinary supporting characters in the cast, but there is never a doubt of who we are watching on screen. It goes without saying that this is the type of performance that an awards season soaks up (case in point, last Sunday night's Golden Globe win) and I expect many to come Oldman's way. Interestingly, Ben Mendelsohn plays King George VI, a role that has already been immortalized on film by Colin Firth, yet Mendelsohn takes the opportunity to also make his mark in this role. British royalty and leadership are the Shakespearean characters of our time, worthy of numerous portrayals and character interpretations. In today's political climate, when American politicians are nearly all bought and sold by corporations, it's unfortunately hard to imagine a time when solutions to the great problems were black and white and great minds could disagree through discourse instead of stomping their feet. This highlights the great void between the many classic political films of yesteryear, which makes it difficult to apply the lessons of leaders like Churchill by today's standards. Regardless, there are lessons here we can apply to our daily lives. Never surrender in the face of adversity and reach out to the people around us for wisdom, even if they are your opponents. These are the qualities that make Winston Churchill, and all those who portray him, live on in the generations to come in the event that we must face our own darkest hour. •

Darkest Hour is rated PG-13 for some thematic material. 125 minutes. Now playing at most theaters, including ArcLight Beach Cities.

New Year Deals: Why Winter Is the Perfect Time to Buy a Boat

(BPT) - Winter may be frigid for many, but it's an ideal time to plan for warmer days ahead and make dreams of owning a boat a reality. Beginning in January, boat shows across the country offer some of the hottest post-holiday deals around, with special pricing and incentives on new boat models and marine accessories - a major draw for the 142 million Americans who take to the water each year, according to the National Marine Manufacturers Association. For those ready to plan their summer adventures on the water, boat shows are the best place to start.

Whether you fish or sail, enjoy cruising, riding personal watercraft or wakesurfing, boat shows provide the unique opportunity to browse and board hundreds, sometimes thousands, of boats while taking advantage of once-a-year pricing and boat show specials. Boat shows also provide an avenue to enjoy a taste of the boating lifestyle during the off-season, plus they offer educational opportunities and alternative ways to get on the water for novices looking to get their feet wet.

Whether you want to fulfill that New Year's resolution of spending more time on the water with family and friends, or are simply in the mood to escape the winter doldrums, Discover Boating, the national awareness program to help get people on the water, offers three tips to get started in boating at a 2018 boat show:

• Escape cabin fever for the year's best deals. Unlike auto shows, boat shows are the place to buy. Hundreds of new-year models are available to buy right on the show floor

• Test the waters. Boat shows are a great place to learn the ropes of boating and take advantage of onsite training, which is usually offered at little to no cost. Educational opportunities at boat shows include everything from knot-tying and DIY boat maintenance seminars, to sailing simulators and boating lessons. You can often find fun activities to entertain the family and get everyone into the outdoors, from practicing how to reel in a fish to learning to dock and more.

• Look for the seal of approval. When shopping for a boat at a show, online or at a dealership, always check to make sure it is certified by the National Marine Manufacturers Association. An "NMMA Certified" seal means a boat has met strict industry standards for safety, construction and federal regulations, enhancing an improved and safer boater experience. Look for the NMMA Certified sticker near the helm of a boat, and find a full list of certified boat manufacturers at DiscoverBoating.com.

Visit DiscoverBoating.com to find a boat show near you, a list of certified dealers and manufacturers, and unbiased advice for getting started in boating. •

The Ramona Neighborhood Association will meet this Thursday, January 11th at 7 p.m. at Ramona School. There is something neat that happens when community members come together to talk about their neighborhood and the issues that are important to them. Make an effort to get out and attend.

THE HAWTHORNE BUSINESS EXPO

Hawthorne council member Olivia Valentine cordially invites you to attend the 3rd Annual Hawthorne Business Expo to be held on Wednesday, January 24 from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Hawthorne Memorial Center. There will be keynote speakers, seminars and vendors there to assist local businesses prosper. This event has grown each year and we look forward to an even bigger event this year.

MAKE IT GREAT IN ONE EIGHT

I usually start the year out with some stupid poem or a list of my resolutions. Why might you ask do I continue to write this column? Why do I make a fool of myself by telling everyone to have a cold one because God loves you and Jesus died for your misdeeds? Why do I beat my head against the refrigerator trying to come up with something novel or funny to say in these weekly ramblings? (By the way, I looked up

"ramblings" and here is what the internet says: If you describe a speech or piece of writing as someone's ramblings, you are saying that it is meaningless because the person who said or wrote it was very confused or insane.) So, I guess take my column for what it is, weekly ramblings. After 40 and one and insane also. Any way you squeeze it, I look at my ramblings as a way to give back to my readers, a way to brighten their day, a way to get them to loosen up and laugh at themselves. We're all in this together, why not have fun along the freeways of life in the big city and stop to smell the exhaust fumes? The truth is, life is short, we only have one life to live here on earth, none of us are perfect, we all fall short, bad things happen, but there is life after death, those who recognize their shortcomings and their need for a savior have that new life already. When we put everything that happens here on earth into that "big picture" we start to look at things in a different light. We see that other people are just like us. We can accept one another for who we all are. So, I might be insane but you can accept me as a rambling idiot and love me for who I am. I love you regardless of how stupid you think my column is. Look at the world from the "big picture", have a cold one and breath the clean fresh air of January. Let's make one eight great!•

Rams Fold Under Playoff Pressure

By Adam Serrao

Coming into last Saturday night'S Wild Card NFL playoff game against the Atlanta Falcons at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, the Los Angeles Rams had everything going in their favor. Thirty-one-year-old rookie head coach Sean McVay was on the sidelines, second-year quarterback Jared Goff was under center and running back Todd Gurley had just completed an MVP-like season. What the Rams didn't have, though, was experience. A 26-13 loss to last year's Super Bowl runner-ups proved to be too much for a young Los Angeles team to handle. In what was perhaps the worst first-round matchup that the team could have possibly been faced with, the Rams wound up tumbling out of the playoffs almost before they had a chance to even begin at all.

Fans showed up in droves last Saturday night to pack the Coliseum for what was the first Rams playoff game at that location in 39 years. Dallas wound up blowing out the Rams 28-0 in that game. Although last week's matchup wasn't quite as lopsided, fans were forced to commute home with the same distinct feeling of loss that they felt almost four decades ago.

A crowd full of 74,300 people in the heart of Los Angeles – the biggest crowd all season long – was rendered silent throughout the first quarter of play as Gurley, Goff and the rest of the Rams continuously came up short on drives and eventually fell behind by a score of 13-0 in the second quarter. "They made one more play than we did," Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald said after the game. "We were trying to dig out of a hole, but we kept fighting. We just kept fighting. But we fell short."

One of the main reasons that the Rams were forced to attempt to dig out of a hole all game long was because of the play of Pro Bowl special teams player Pharoh Cooper. Cooper muffed a punt, bobbled a kickoff and insisted on attempting to return the ball every time he touched it. It seemed as if the Pro Bowler-to-be was drastically close to coughing up the ball every single time that he touched it. "I'm sure he'd like to have a couple of those plays back." McVay explained. "Any time you lose the turnover battle, you're going to make it very hard on yourself,"

The Rams' only touchdown of the game came in the second quarter of play when Goff hit rookie wide receiver Cooper Kupp in the back of the end zone. Los Angeles went into halftime down by a score of 13-10, which was the closest the Rams would get all night. One of the main reasons that the highest-scoring offense in the league this season was unable to get off of the ground was because of Atlanta's amped-up defense. That same defense sacked Goff twice in his team's first two possessions to set the tone. They were also all over the wide receivers in the secondary and found it rather easy to bottle up Gurley, at least early on in the game.

Los Angeles was able to gain just 44 yards in the first 24 minutes of play. They were held to their first scoreless first quarter in 13 weeks of play. The Rams were also shut out in the third quarter and only managed one field goal in the fourth. "We wanted to come out here and we didn't want this to end at all," Goff solemnly explained postgame. "We've got such a special group of dudes in there, and coaches and everybody. It's such a special group, and you don't want it to end this early by any means. So it's tough right now."

After an incredible resurgent year that proved all who said he would be a rookie bust wrong, Goff finished his first playoff game ever by completing 24 of 45 passes for 259 yards and one touchdown. Gurley, on the other hand, may have seemed like he was bottled up all night, but still managed to finish the game with over 100 yards rushing on just 14 carries. Though Robert Woods enjoyed an incredible game, going for 142 yards on nine catches, the normally spectacular Rams offense was clearly not itself due to the incredible defensive effort brought to the table by the Falcons.

Despite this year's early postseason exit, any Rams fan would be lying if they told you that they expected to be in playoff position following the team's 4-12 record of one season ago. An explosive offense and an elite defense turned those expectations around for the Rams and their fans this year. Los Angeles has now become a team that has improved mightily and progressed drastically, all within a one-year period. Not only did this year's Rams return to the postseason for the first time since 2004, but they were also good enough to host a playoff game in Southern California for the first time since Jan. 4, 1986. Fans can now expect all of that improvement and progression built this season to keep moving in the right direction for years to come. • - Aserrao6@yahoo.com

One Man's Opinion Wolff No Stranger to Controversy

By Cristian Vasquez

Thanks the never-ending news cycle we've become accustomed to as media consumers, there is always a new controversy to talk about -- and this week it's Michael Wolff's "Fire and Fury." To the staunch Trump supporters, Wolff's book is no more than a libeling piece against the president to sell books. For people looking for the president's impeachment, Wolff's book serves as an insider testimony to accomplish said goal. Regardless of the man in office, these types of allegations against a sitting president, much like their actions, should always be examined. Yet Wolff is no stranger to controversy and has been in this position before. However, one person's reaction to the book gives reason to believe its content: Steve Bannon. Let's begin with Wolff, a New Jersey native, who has written seven books and has worked as a columnist for The Hollywood Reporter, USA Today, New York Magazine and Vanity Fair. His writing style has been described as one that gives his audience a behind-the-scenes look at the beat he's covering. Naturally, he has garnered critics and admirers along the way. In some instances the critics have been the very people he is covering, much like with President Trump today. However questionable Wolff's reputation is, Bannon's reaction to the book leads me to believe that the author is not lying.

the White House, Bannon declared that he would go after any GOP member who wouldn't condemn attacks on President Trump. In short, the former editor confirmed his continued support of the president. That explains why Bannon would come out and take back the comments made about Donald Trump, Jr. Bannon is trying to save face and claim that he made the comments about Paul Manafort. Bannon isn't the poster child for truth and accuracy and his statement is no more than an attempt to keep the Trump Riddle me this: Day after day the liberals inundate us with rants about protecting the rights of, and shelling out our Benjamins to, those who snuck into America illegally--while they pay scant attention to American war heroes who are down on their luck, and who, from most reports, have been given the shaft back home when returning from their tour of duty.

DACA this, DACA that, scream the resistors and their media mouthpieces. Maybe I missed something, but when did the scales mantra, Trump has vowed to use the bully pulpit to place those needs of those who bravely served our country ahead of the need and the greed of the Beltway-type entrenched bureaucrats who have risen to power by gaming the system to their benefit, at the expense of dispensing caring treatment to those veterans who return to America with physical and emotional ailments as they try to assimilate back into America.

Meanwhile, the drumbeat continues on the left that we must allow the Dreamers to stay in America, as if somehow illegals have the

It's no secret that Bannon and President Trump had some sort of falling out. Yet let's not forget that despite his exit from movement alive.

Unfortunately, it doesn't really matter how true, how embellished or if these stories are flat-out false. Wolff already won. Tell-all books are meant as sensationalized pieces of writing meant to pique the interest of friend and foe alike. Ironically, a possible piece of "fake news" will likely make significant sales now that the president's propaganda specialist Stephen Miller is on his PR tour dismissing the book as a hit job. To President Trump's credit, there is no easy way of dealing with this situation and he definitely has every reason and right to defend himself against the publication. However, any reaction to the book puts the title and author back in the spotlight, which increases the likelihood that sales will increase.

Regardless of the outcome, Wolff will have accomplished his goal: notoriety. Whether the cease and desist order holds up or not, the author will make the rounds and talk about the book until the next controversy steals the spotlight. • of justice tip so far to the left that the illegals have more rights than our veterans who have protected our butts from threats like the ISIS dirt bags, or the bellicose, corpulent midget in NoKo who continues to threaten stateside nuclear carnage, matching bitter volleys with President Trump about the respective sizes of their "buttons?"

California has proudly become a sanctuary state, with the lock-step pols and courts bending over...backwards...to allow illegals and their chain-migration loser brethren to overrun our state, and paying little heed to American veterans who risked life and limb to protect us from evil.

Trump, consistently under fire from the resistors, has grandiose plans to overhaul the bureaucratic mess that the Veteran's Administration has devolved into, by canning corrupt and incompetent VA higher-ups who continue to award themselves obscene bonuses while backlogging veteran care. He has vowed to cut red tape and the excessive wait times that consistently plague our veteran heroes.

As part of his "drain the swamp mantra" right to populate our enclaves and freeload our greenbacks and social services. And that, with chain migration, their relatives currently residing outside the friendly confines of America should also be allowed to move to the front of the line and cross our sacrosanct borders illegally.

LA Mayor Eric Garcetti, who is pondering a longshot campaign to nab the Democratic presidential nomination in 2020, has kowtowed to the Dreamers, saying that the 800,000 or so who came to this country illegally should be allowed to stay because sending them packing would be "cruel," and that giving the illegals the boot, quoting from the standard Liberal playbook when it comes to immigration, "threatens to tear families apart,"--a familiar whine that has no basis in fact. Thundered Garcetti: "They belong here...and we will fight for them to stay."

Here is a novel thought: How about we fight a little harder for the care and solicitude of the men and women who risked their lives for the freedoms we take so much for granted, and resist a little less the championing of lawbreakers here illegally? •

for planetary defense work because of its unique capabilities," said Dr. Joan Schmelz, director at Universities Space Research Association (USRA) and deputy director of Arecibo Observatory. "We have been working diligently to get it back up and running since Hurricane Maria devastated Puerto Rico."

The Arecibo Observatory has the most powerful astronomical radar system on Earth. The telescope suffered minor structural damage from the category 4 hurricane, the strongest to hit the island since 1928. Some days after the storm, the telescope resumed radio astronomy observations, while planetary radar observations, which require high power and diesel fuel for generators at the site, resumed operations in early December after commercial power returned to the observatory.

Asteroid Phaethon was discovered on Oct.

11, 1983, by NASA's Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS). Observations of Phaethon were conducted at Arecibo from Dec. 15 through 19, 2017, using the NASA-funded planetary radar system. At time of closest approach on Dec. 16 at 3 p.m. PST (6 p.m. EST, 11 p.m. UTC) the asteroid was about six million miles (10 million kilometers) away, or about 26.8 times the distance from Earth to the Moon. The encounter is the closest the object will come to Earth until 2093.

Radar has been used to observe hundreds of asteroids. When these small, natural remnants of the formation of our solar system pass relatively close to Earth, deep space radar is a powerful technique for studying their sizes, shapes, rotation, surface features, and roughness, and for more precise determination of their orbital path. •

These radar images of near-Earth asteroid 3200 Phaethon were generated by astronomers at the National Science Foundation's Arecibo Observatory on Dec. 17, 2017. Observations of Phaethon were conducted at Arecibo from Dec. 15 through 19, 2017. At time of closest approach on Dec. 16 at 3 p.m. PST (6 p.m. EST, 11 p.m. UTC) the asteroid was about 6.4 million miles (10.3 million kilometers) away, or about 27 times the distance from Earth to the Moon. ## Press Release from NASA, Provided by Bob Eklund

After several months of downtime in the aftermath of Hurricane Maria, the Arecibo Observatory Planetary Radar returned to normal operation, providing the best images to date of near-Earth asteroid 3200 Phaethon, which is thought to be the parent body for the Geminid meteor shower. The radar images, which are subtle at available resolution, reveal the asteroid is spheroidal in shape and has a large concavity at least several hundred meters in extent near the leading edge and a conspicuous dark, circular feature near one of the poles. Arecibo's radar images of Phaethon have resolutions as fine as about 250 feet (75 meters) per pixel.

"These new observations of Phaethon show it may be similar in shape to asteroid Bennu, the target of NASA's OSIRIS-REx spacecraft, but 10 times larger," noted Dr. Patrick Taylor, Group Lead for Planetary Radar for Arecibo Observatory. "The dark feature could be a crater or some other topographic depression that did not reflect the radar beam back at us."

Radar images obtained at Arecibo indicate Phaethon has a diameter of about 3.6 miles (six kilometers) -- roughly 0.6 mile (one kilometer) larger than previous estimates. Phaethon is the second largest near-Earth asteroid classified as "potentially hazardous." Near-Earth objects are classified as potentially hazardous asteroids (PHAs), based on their size and how closely their orbits approach Earth.

"Arecibo is an important global asset, crucial

Finance House Hunting and Credit: What You Need to Know

(BPT) - By now it is something of a cliche to call homeownership the American dream. But even if sitting on your own deck, looking over your picket fence and sipping lemonade doesn't move you, homeownership is still one of the best ways to build wealth.

For many, owning a home is cheaper than renting and, in the long run, the biggest investment they will ever make. It is also a practical financial move thanks to the fact that you're likely building equity while getting a mortgage interest tax break.

So although it is perfectly fine to dream about backyard barbecues and the smell of fresh-cut grass, the path to owning your own home should also involve taking the time to do some financial sightseeing.

As a leader in creating credit scoring models, VantageScore Solutions has made it a priority to educate consumers on the important role a good credit history plays in buying a home.

A huge part of taking out a loan involves your credit history and credit score. Basically, you must prove to lenders that you can be a responsible borrower and can be trusted with a mortgage of many thousands of dollars. A strong credit score may provide proof of this trustworthiness.

Different types of loans have different credit requirements. Some loans require you to have a credit score of at least 620, although it is possible (with some difficulty) to be approved for a loan with a credit score as low as 580. But getting loan approval is only part of the story.

Home loans come in all shapes and sizes. Some are fixed interest mortgages, some have adjustable rates or longer terms and the list of variables goes on. Just like anything else, some loans are better for you than others. To get the loan that has the lowest interest rate, which right now is around 4 percent, usually requires a higher credit score. Rates can be considerably higher when you have a lower credit score, and the result is paying significantly more monthly over the life of the loan.

The reason is that a higher credit score demonstrates that you are skilled at managing debt and have a history of responsibly paying back many types of loans. Therefore, the lender is taking on less risk when lending you money. The less risk for them, the better the interest rate for you.

While there are, of course, more nuances to the process, your credit score plays an instrumental role in determining the type of loan you may qualify for. Therefore, before you go to your first open house, check your credit score to better understand the factors that typically impact your scores. Many websites provide free access to your VantageScore, which is a perfectly fine barometer to use to directionally gauge your creditworthiness. Mortgage lenders use FICO scores in their underwriting.

Knowing your credit history and understanding the factors that could impact your credit score will help you plan, budget and come up with a realistic wish list for your house. •

Rocky

We are looking for volunteers to help with our pet adoption fairs which are held every Saturday at the Petco located at 537 N. Pacific Coast Highway Redondo Beach 90277, from noon-3: 30 p.m. If you are interested in volunteering and can commit to at least one Saturday a month, please contact us at info@msfr.org. You can also visit all of our Miniature Schnauzers & Friends rescues at the adoption fair or check out our website, www.msfr.org. If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability, you can email us at info@msfr.org. Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one.

"They call me Rocky and it's the perfect name because I'm certainly determined and a little fighter. Life has been pretty 'rocky' for my sister, Adrian, and myself. On Oct. 8, 2017, my mom Mamacita was found wandering the streets and pregnant. Luckily for us, animal control took her to an LA County shelter where later that night she had a litter of four puppies. Sadly, only two of us survived. The MSFR volunteers rescued my mom--who is a tiny, 8.5-pound Shih Tzu-Terrier mix-along with my sister and myself. They have given all of us the best care possible. Now it's time for us to find our forever families. Curiously, I don't resemble my mom and I don't know my dad...so my pedigree is a bit of a mystery. I look more like a tiny black and tan Doxie mix who weighed in at a whopping 3.5 pounds when I was 11 weeks old. Don't forget that it's not the size of the dog in the fight. It's the size of the fight in the dog. Even though I've proven I can hold my own when the chips are down, I'm really more of a lover than a fighter. I'm also a very fun-loving, playful guy with my friends." If you're interested in Rocky, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"Please allow me to introduce myself. My name is Adrian and I'm a diminutive, threemonth-old gal of questionable lineage. I was born in an LA County shelter on Oct. 8, 2017 after my mom, who was obviously pregnant, was taken to the shelter by animal control. Later that night she gave birth to a litter of four puppies but sadly, Rocky and I are the only survivors. I don't look like my brother

Billie

Rocky, nor do I resemble our mom. Clearly, since Dad is no longer in the picture, I don't know if I look like him. I can tell you that I look like a Papillion mix--with one ear up and one ear down! I'm a dainty, petite miss who, at 11 weeks of age, weighed only 2.5-pounds and don't have high hopes of becoming what one would call a big dog. I love to play, I'm very sweet and I know that I could be the perfect addition to any family. I'm becoming desperate to find my family so I won't have to hear 'Yo Adrian, it's me, Rocky' anymore. Remember that good things come in small packages and I would be the best thing ever to come into your life." If you're interested in Adrian, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"Hi there! I am Billie, a two-year-old, male Miniature Schnauzer mix who was homeless and living on the streets of Tijuana. How did I get to Tijuana? My companion Holiday and I decided to take a trip with friends and ventured south of the border for a weekend of fun. Unfortunately, we missed our ride home and without any place to stay, ended up living on the street. Luckily I'm pretty resourceful and Holiday had quite a voice, so we made our living as street entertainers. Finally, a rescue group rounded us up and returned us to the USA where they contacted MSFR. The MSFR folks were kind enough to take us in and helped my friend find her forever home, but I'm still searching for mine. It has been decided that my mix could very well be Doxie because I have a longer, trim, 14-pound body with legs that are very sturdy but a bit short. Being a youngster, I'm still very playful and have retained my puppyish charm that endears me to people and other dogs. I guess that's why I get along well with everyone and make friends easily." If you're interested in Billie, please email info@msfr. org for more information. •

Congratulations to Pilgrim and his new his loving temperament. He won them over family. We knew this guy was going to be immediately and is now living in Manhattan

Adrian

Congratulations to Pilgrim and his new family

something special to the right family and he sure is. His new family was heartbroken when they lost their 13-year-old "Schnoodle" to cancer several months ago. They decided they needed another dog to help heal their hearts and so they began their search. When they met Pilgrim, it was love at first sight. The little ham was irresistible with all of his pawing for attention, his facial expressions and Beach. Pilgrim, now named Atlas, has a 16-year-old human brother and a mom who works from home most of the time. When he went to his new home, this little guy just walked right in and sat down on their furniture as if he knew this is where he was supposed to be. Wishing them many happy years together and we hope they continue to come visit us at adoptions. •
