City Council Approves Two Hawthorne Airport Noise Code Amendments

By Derrick Deane

On Tuesday, noise at the Hawthorne Airport once again led the discussion at the City Council meeting. This time the topic centered on a couple of amendments to the Hawthorne Municipal Code – Resolution 7972, which would add policies that address noise-sensitive uses near the airport and direct a regular update of the Airport Noise Compatibility Study; and Ordinance 2157, which would amend the zoning map to establish boundaries of the Airport Overlay Zone.

The Airport Overlay Zone is divided into two sections, with the larger portion (Airport Overlay Zone 2) enclosed by 120th Street to Birch Avenue and then down to Jack Northrop Avenue. Airport Overlay Zone 1 is immediately across the street from the airport.

“When the planes take off -- especially those wonderful jets -- they fly over [Ramona Avenue], so there is a lot of noise,” said resident Alex Monteiro, who had a small plane crash in one of his townhomes. “When they did the presentation last meeting, they only talked about the landing area. But on taking off, they’re supposed to make a turn on Hawthorne Boulevard...but they are taking off over us.”

City Manager Arnie Shadbehr said that the Noise Compatibility Program was a result of the noise study that the City did for all of Hawthorne and agreed that “95 percent of the take-offs are to the west.” Shadbehr added that he is aware that there are many pilots who violate noise abatement protocol. “We are going to publish it one more time and distribute it among pilots. The problem with it is that we don’t have enforcement power. So we can distribute the information and tell the tower manager to announce it for all pilots to be aware that when they reach Hawthorne Boulevard, they make a 210-degree turn south toward the ocean.”

In addition to pointing out that some pilots disregard the rules, Shadbehr noted there are other factors that sometimes come into play including air temperature, wind velocity, mechanical issues, and air traffic that may delay the protocol. “We are working to promote this and will continue to promote this, but unfortunately the FAA does not give airports any enforcement power,” he said. “They don’t get involved with this themselves because of safety issues. If they made the turn mandatory and something happens like there is a crash, then the FAA is directly liable.”

Shadbehr explained that having the airport in the city also means that there are some things that residents will just have to come to terms with as part of living here. “Unfortunately, it is what it is,” he said. “We cannot have the perfect situation where we have an airport and the surrounding neighborhood doesn’t hear anything. I live close to an airport myself. Some people get bothered by it, some don’t.”

The two amendments approved by the City Council, minus Nilo Michelin who was excused absent, pertained to new development and construction. Any new construction, which would include remodeling or reconstruction or additions on residential properties, must provide sound insulation to meet an interior noise level of 45 decibels. “It doesn’t apply to a garage and it doesn’t mean you have to retrofit your home,” Planning Director Brian James said. “It’s only if you’re doing an addition or an expansion or you’re rebuilding your home.”

The amendment also requires that if a residential property is sold, the seller must disclose that the airport is nearby and would also prohibit the introduction of new noise-sensitive land uses. “That means the introduction of anything that doesn’t exist there now,” James said. “It wouldn’t apply to the reconstruction or redevelopment of a land use that is already there -- so if someone wanted to come in and build a hospital in an area and a hospital does not exist, it would not be allowed, but you could rebuild or expand your home.”

On a lighter note, Councilmember Angie Reyes English took time to thank citizens and her colleagues for another successful Service Provider Fair last weekend. It was the ninth year that English had organized the fair that connects citizens with various service providers and departments in the city. “I want to thank all of those who took part in the Service Provider Fair,” English said. “It was a great showing. It is something that is very dear to me.”

In addition to informing residents about various services available in town, the event also gave away food, shoes and bikes. “Approximately 800 pairs of shoes were given out last Saturday and we gave out shoes and food to a total of 1,405 people,” John L. Jefferson, senior pastor at Del Aire Baptist Church, said.

“I can’t say enough for all of the support -- especially the donations that came in to ensure that we had everybody fed,” English added. “It’s because of the service that we provide to our community that it keeps growing and growing. It’s not about me. It’s about what we’re offering to our community.” •

Juniper Lemon’s Happiness Index Wryly Wrestles with Woe

Reviewed by Tommy Vinh Bui, MLIS, Associate Librarian, Inglewood Public Library

This was a thoroughly enjoyable and poignant tale of a young girl navigating the trials and tribulations of adolescence. It also strives to go beyond the mere tropes of high school dramedy by trying to tackle a variety of emotionally-laden subjects such as grief, loss and soul-sapping depression. It offers up some pretty weighty and sensitive societal issues to the audience, but manages to do so with an appropriate degree of tact and social responsibility.

The quick pitch: Juniper Lemon is pitched into a world of sorrow and bereavement when she survives a car crash that tragically takes her older sister’s life. Her parents are hobbled with grief and she herself is racked with unspeakable guilt over the whole ordeal. She eventually uncovers a mysterious letter written by her sister before the accident -- a letter undelivered to a secret recipient. Hamstrung with remorse, she undergoes a by-any-means mission to convey the letter to this unknown party. This redemptive act becomes the last meaningful link she has to her dearly departed sibling.

The narrative paces along at a manageable momentum and endeavors to keep the audience’s attention rapt throughout. The protagonist Juniper is endearingly vulnerable, but manages to muster enough spunkiness to overcome seemingly the whole weight of the world on her shoulders. This is an indomitable character many should be able to identify with quickly and feel knee-jerk compassion as the story unfolds. She’s being dragged through the emotional wringer. But she comes out the other side stronger and a fully-realized character for it.

The side characters also all contribute meaningfully to the story. Juniper undertakes an epic internal journey that hauls her through an array of emotional peaks and valleys. She recruits an eclectic motley of sidekicks to help her find the way. Each and every one is just as richly-textured and complex as the primary protagonist. It’s a riveting cortege of characters and inextinguishable friendship quickly becomes another enduring theme by book’s end.

Juniper Lemon’s Happiness Index can be likened to Mean Girls meets Extremely Loud & Incredibly Close. The shifting from teen rom-com to intense character profile of pain and melancholy is seamless and no easy course to slalom. But the author manages it well here. The writerly acumen for shrewd storytelling is superb. Julie Israel does a fine job of articulating these authentic characters. The dialogue strikes a correct chord of verisimilitude. You can practically hear the voice quiver and reticence of the title character Juniper as she braves the slings and arrows of her tragic adversity. The writer really wrangles a heartrending response from the reader. You just want to offer Juniper a kind word and the comfort of hearing, “Everything’s going to be okay.”

All in all, this showcases by-the-books Young Adult genre machinations and is perfect for a multitude of demographics. •

Bloodlight and Bami Shows Grace Jones Like Never Seen Before

By Morgan Rojas for www.cinemacy.com

In 2015, Grace Jones released a memoir called I’ll Never Write My Memoirs. In it, along with proving that she is not one to be labeled “predictable,” Jones made the divisive claim that Beyonce, Miley Cyrus, Lady Gaga and other pop stars are guilty of copying her style. This, of course, caused a social media firestorm among the generation that was too young to know who this Grace Jones person was – how dare she insult Queen Bey! In the long-awaited and (apparently) much-needed reintroduction, director Sophie Fiennes gives audiences a rare look at this controversial, multi-hyphenated artist in the documentary-meets-art house film, Grace Jones: Bloodlight and Bami. The result is a product that may make millennials think twice before discrediting Jones as a self-proclaimed “original.”

Filmed over a 10-year span and throughout various countries, Fiennes has created a with call girls as backup dancers) and follows an “art over money” philosophy that is inspiring to anyone pursuing creative dreams.

Much like Jones herself, Fiennes’ filmmaking style is a reflection of her innovation. This type of filmmaking includes using film that looks dated, including glitches and lags. It switches between more intimate, fly-on-the-wall moments and energetic live performances.

For as inclusionary as the film’s content tries to be, it seems like if one is not already a Grace Jones super fan or particularly interested in the ‘80s music scene, Bloodlight and Bami can feel exclusionary. No scene is particularly set up, leaving the audience to find themselves dropped into the middle of a moment without prior context, which can feel confusing and exacerbating during long takes. The takeaway is to go in without expecting this to be a straightforward documentary, as Bloodlight and Bami is not trying to be the next Amy. Approach this quintessential profile piece with Bloodlight and Bami that explores Grace Jones far beyond her controversial statements and tabloid headlines. Through hotel room conversations, intimate family dinners and private recording studio sessions, audiences see Jones as a mother, a churchgoer and a daughter, among other personal monikers. Most of the film takes place in Jamaica, Jones’ birthplace, and audiences are thrust into the center of her family dynamic. Perhaps the most revelatory fact is Jones’ admission of an abusive relationship with her stepfather, and the lasting effect it had on her. Yet she also credits the man, whom she calls Mas P, for inspiring her extremely masculine and “scary” onstage persona.

Watching Grace’s creative process from early studio sessions to her live performances of “Slave to the Rhythm” and “Pull Up to the Bumper” are perhaps among the film’s most fascinating scenes. Like a true artist, she performs without inhibition (except when she thinks she looks like a lady pimp film with an open mind and prepare for it to get blown away by the wildly wonderful Grace Jones.

Grace Jones: Bloodlight and Bami is not rated. 115 minutes. Now playing at the Nuart Theatre in Los Angeles. •

QUALIFICATIONS

For the past nine years I've been asked, "What in the heck does a City Clerk actually do?". Now that I'm retiring I'm being asked,

"What are the qualifications for being City Clerk?" Those are both interesting questions. The ability to read might be one of the city clerk's qualifications. Did you know that the position of city clerk is the second oldest profession in the world, second only to ladies of the night. To be honest, that profession sounds more exciting than sitting through long meetings, listening to long-winded politicians who think they are the experts on everything from smoking weed to sewer infrastructure. Throughout our lives we are asked to qualify. I didn't speak until I was four years of age so I qualified for the special kindergarten speech programs which seems to have worked since now I enjoy talking and rambling on. As I got older, qualifying for the sports teams in high school and college were big life changers for me. I'm not sure what qualifications my old lady saw in me 38 and ½ years ago that led her to vow to love and cherish me til death do us part. What qualified me to be a father, my ability to make three babies? By convincing enough voters in 2009 to vote me in, I was suddenly qualified to be city clerk. The best things in life we don't have to qualify for. Being a friend simply requires us to care about someone other than ourselves. Having a marriage that lasts simply means we can love and forgive each other even when we don't want to. Being a Christian simply means that we acknowledge that we are sinners, and that we put our trust in God. Caring for our community qualifies us as engaged, worthwhile citizens. When it's all said and done, I want people to know that they are qualified. If you care, you are qualified. After a long day or week or career of caring, you all deserve a cold one or two. It's all worth it. You too can make it like me to your great heavenly man or woman cave to kick off your shoes and enjoy life. I'm ready, how about you?

NASA'S Juno Mission Provides Infrared Tour of Jupiter's North Pole

Based on a Press Release from JPL/NASA, Provided by Bob Eklund

Scientists working on NASA's Juno mission to Jupiter shared a 3-D infrared movie depicting densely packed cyclones and anticyclones that permeate the planet's polar regions; and the first detailed view of a dynamo, or engine, powering the magnetic field for any planet beyond Earth.

Juno mission scientists have taken data collected by the spacecraft's Jovian InfraRed Auroral Mapper (JIRAM) instrument and generated the 3-D fly-around of the Jovian world's north pole. Imaging in the infrared part of the spectrum, JIRAM captures light emerging from deep inside Jupiter equally well, night or day. The instrument probes the weather layer down to 30 to 45 miles below Jupiter's cloud tops. The imagery will help the team understand the forces at work in the animation -- a north pole dominated by a central cyclone surrounded by eight circumpolar cyclones with diameters ranging from 2,500 to 2,900 miles.

"Before Juno, we could only guess what Jupiter's poles would look like," said Alberto Adriani, Juno co-investigator from the Institute for Space Astrophysics and Planetology, Rome. "Now, with Juno flying over the poles at a close distance, it permits the collection of infrared imagery on Jupiter's polar weather patterns and its massive cyclones in unprecedented spatial resolution."

Another Juno investigation was the team's latest pursuit of the interior composition of the gas giant. "Prior to Juno, we could not distinguish between extreme models of Jupiter's interior rotation, which all fitted the data collected by Earth-based observations and other deep space missions," said Tristan Guillot, a Juno co-investigator from the Université Côte d'Azur, Nice, France. "But Juno is different. It orbits the planet from pole to pole and gets closer to Jupiter than any spacecraft ever before. Thanks to the amazing increase in accuracy brought by Juno's gravity data, we have essentially solved the issue of how Jupiter's interior rotates: The zones and belts that we see in the atmosphere rotating at different speeds extend to about 1,900 miles. At this point, hydrogen becomes conductive enough to be dragged into near-uniform rotation by the planet's powerful magnetic field."

The same data used to analyze Jupiter's rotation contain information on the planet's interior structure and composition. Not knowing the interior rotation was severely limiting the ability to probe the deep interior. "Now our work can really begin in earnest -- determining the interior composition of the solar system's largest planet," said Guillot.

Juno is only about one-third of the way through its planned mapping mission and already we are beginning to discover hints on how Jupiter's interior dynamo works. Juno has logged nearly 122 million miles to complete 11 science passes since entering Jupiter's orbit on July 4, 2016. Juno's 12th science pass will be on May 24.

Science Fiction Or Fact? New Treatments For Diseases Like Cancer

(BPT) - If bioelectronic medicine sounds futuristic, it’s because many of its applications operate like something out of a science fiction movie. But at its core, bioelectronic medicine is simply the use of technology to treat disease and injury.

Some applications include tools that you’re probably already familiar with, like cochlear implants and cardiac pacemakers. When these technologies were first introduced, they were considered revolutionary. While still important advancements, they are now commonplace instruments in a doctor’s toolbox.

Bioelectronic medicine can involve implanting a device that impacts neural signals which could impact a variety of inflammatory diseases from rheumatoid arthritis to Crohn’s disease, Parkinson’s disease, Alzheimer’s disease and more. There is ongoing research into whether such stimulation could potentially impact paralysis as well. It can also be used as a way to assess and track diseases like diabetes.

As the field continues to evolve, newer applications in bioelectronic medicine continue to be approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Take, for example, Tumor Treating Fields, a therapy that utilizes the natural electrical properties of dividing cancer cells to treat cancer without many of the life-altering side effects associated with other traditional treatments.

Patients wear a device that creates electric fields tuned to specific frequencies to disrupt cell division, inhibiting tumor growth and causing affected cancer cells to die. The therapy, which you can learn more about on Novocure.com, received its first approval by the FDA for a specific type of aggressive brain cancer in 2011.

Clinical research on Tumor Treating Fields has continued, and the treatment shows promise in multiple solid tumor types - including some of the most aggressive forms of cancer. The therapy has been shown to have minimal side effects, with mild to moderate skin irritation being the most common side effect.

Bioelectronic treatments not only have the benefit of typically causing fewer side effects, but there is also room to improve the treatment through engineering.

“One of the benefits of having a device over a drug is we can continue to develop and improve the technology over time,” explained Eilon Kirson, Chief Science Officer and Head of Research and Development at Novocure. “We’re not locked into a chemical formula. The platform can continue to evolve.”

The field of bioelectronic medicine itself continues to progress, having only come into being in the late 20th century. With so much advancement made in such a short time, the promise of what may come in the future feels pulled straight from the big screen. •

5 Important Qualities To Look For When Purchasing Paper

Which copy paper is best?

(BPT) - Buying paper and office supplies can seem routine, however, these simple choices matter. Choosing the right paper can help save time and money, as well as ensure the quality of documents.

So, what exactly should you look for in copy paper?

“There are many different performance attributes and categories of paper,” said Sarah Yedlick, Boise Paper office expert. “It’s important to consider all factors of your paper before making a purchase to avoid unwanted paper jams, reprints, ink smears and just downright low-quality.”

Here are the five qualities to look for in paper before deciding what is right for you.

1. Brightness - The brighter the paper, the greater the contrast between the printed image and the paper. Most office papers are between 92 and 98 on the brightness scale. Using a paper with a higher brightness makes colors more vibrant and appealing - giving graphics and images the appearance of “popping” off the page. Choose a higher brightness level for important presentations or documents with color graphics.

2. Thickness - Also known as caliper, the thickness is an important characteristic to consider when choosing paper because it determines the sturdiness of the sheet. The majority of everyday printer paper has a 20

lb. weight. Heavier weights, such as 24 lb. and 28 lb., provide more durability, stiffness and opacity for printed material. Choose a higher thickness for resumes or other important documents, or if you want to do a lot of double-sided printing.

3. Jam-free guarantee - Nothing is more annoying than a jammed printer. Look for a paper that offers a jam-free guarantee when making a paper purchase. Without this, you risk running into issues at the printer when you least expect it.

4. Run-ability - The way paper prints and copies doesn’t just have to do with the machine, it also has to do with the paper itself. Look for a paper that has consistent performance and excellent run-ability to make the most of your printer and inks.

5. Made in the U.S.A. - Papers that are made in the U.S.A., like Boise Paper, keep jobs and dollars in local communities and also adhere to rigorous quality and manufacturing standards.

“If these paper qualities are confusing, there is a simple shopping solution,” said Yedlick. “Choose Boise X-9 or Boise ASPEN - America’s Top Selling Brand - to receive paper with quality you can trust.”

age, she has grown in leaps and bounds and loves to play. Lilo is a busy girl. She pretty much is always on the go. She is attached to her human foster mom and enjoys taking hour-long naps on Mom's chest when she can. Lilo is a great hunter. She loves to carry her toys around and even likes to play fetch! She will bring her toys to you when she's ready to play. She needs to be in a home where she gets plenty of human

Bella

Carrie is a torbie, which is a mix between a tortoiseshell and a tabby coat pattern. Carrie has personality plus! Playful, friendly

Oliver is a very sweet young cat. He is a calm cat, yet he does also like to play with toys. Sometimes he will come over and meow when he wants attention. His “special need” is actually a very minor thing -- he needs over-the-counter eyedrops in his left eye several times per week. That’s it! He’s a handsome orange muffin who would love to meet you.

Like her namesake, Zula is a thief who will steal your affection. She wants it all and when she gets it, she wiggles with happiness. She's smart, curious and loving. Zula was a

Bella is a gentle, older feline (15 years) who is generally very quiet, yet seems to enjoy human company. She has spent her whole life in the same house and is accustomed to having other felines around. Bella is still healthy, but perhaps not as active as other younger cats. She loves to have her long fur brushed or petted. This beautiful little lady will become your close friend if you indulge her with that. She has an agreeable personality and is waiting to be part of your family.
