West Basin Seed $$ Makes Yard Conversions More Affordable

By Rob McCarthy

The West Basin Municipal Water District made some noise last week with an announcement about its turf removal program. It raised the incentive by $1 for customers to plant yard-sized gardens that can thrive using less irrigation. Outdoor irrigation of lawns and flower beds account for half of the water used in the South Bay.

The average check from West Basin to owners who replace grass with drought-tolerant landscaping around their properties is $3,900, according to district spokeswoman DeAnne Blackmon. That's based on an average lot size of 1,300 square feet. The turf removal incentives are flexible and can include residential properties up to 5,000 square feet, she said. A property that size could be in line for a $15,000 check for outdoor improvements.

John Arney runs a landscape construction company in the South Bay and says any size check from West Basin will "get the ball rolling" on an outdoor renovation of the grounds. Expect to pay anywhere from $7,500 to $15,000 for a professionally designed and installed landscape, said the owner of Helix Landscape Construction. "If you're dissatisfied with your landscape as it is and someone is giving you four grand, those are two very good incentives," he said. Grass lawns are fine "for any other area other than the dry Southwest where we're in a desperate situation with water shortages."

West Basin is hosting classes for residents to learn how to remove turf and choose landscaping. The Metropolitan Water District is paying $2 of the incentive, and the local water supplier sweetened the offer by adding another dollar starting in July. The next landscape conversion class is at 5:30 p.m. on July 16 at Inglewood City Hall. Residential and commercial property owners are invited to enroll by calling (310) 371-7222.

Adding California-friendly, drought-tolerant plant varieties around a property can save 1,800 gallons of drinking water each month, according to West Basin. The water supplier is committed to securing a safe and reliable source of drinking water for its South Bay customers. It also hopes to increase the participation in the turf removal program, which is funded by the Metropolitan Water District and the local West Basin district.

The do-it-yourself approach won't work for everyone. There's the turf removal, which is physically demanding. The sod is heavy, Arney said, and it needs to be hauled away and disposed of properly. A property owner can expect to need to hire laborers and a dumpster for the demolition stage of the landscape remodel.

Arney recommends choosing plants in one-gallon buckets because they cost less and will fill in eventually. Going from a green carpet of grass in front and back to a new garden takes patience, but Arney said the right selection of California-friendly plants will fill in over time. "Plants need some room to grow into one another," he explained. And landscapes deserve trees, which have a cooling effect on the garden and the ground loses less water to evaporation, he added. The one-gallon buckets work best and come with advantages over the larger five-gallon sized plants that admittedly are more mature. "A one-gallon grows faster than a five-gallon," Arney said. "If you go with California natives, you save on installation costs on your planting budget."

Any qualifying project starts with a landscape plan. The design guides every step of the installation, including new irrigation, plants, trees, paved walkways and lighting, Arney noted.

The site plan depends on the look of a home, whether it's a World War II-era bungalow or a modern structure. Three popular types of landscapes fit the home architecture of the South Bay, he said. A modern landscape is one of them, and involves cast concrete pavers and a narrow selection of plant varieties throughout the garden. Arney said one to two types of drought-tolerant plants complement a modern home's outdoor features.

A Mediterranean landscape is another local favorite and features plant varieties for the South Bay's coastal climate with moderate temperatures and mostly sunny days. The English cottage landscape is popular here too.

In addition to the July 16 landscape conversion class in Inglewood, other sessions are planned for August, September and October. Program details are listed at www.westbasin.org/grass-replacement as well as the dates and times of the informational sessions for West Basin customers interested in converting to a grass-free exterior.

The loamy soil found in El Segundo, Hawthorne and Inglewood is easy to work with, unlike the heavy clay soils found along the Palos Verdes Peninsula. Those residents incur higher costs and more labor to excavate grassy front and back yards because the pieces weigh more and machinery is needed rather than hand tools, according to Arney.

Customers who want more curb appeal can change the exterior look of their home with landscaping. The money from West Basin goes almost halfway toward paying a landscape contractor or making it a DIY project. The rebates are available on a first-come basis, and renters may participate with written consent of their landlords.

The Art of Self-Defense: This Summer’s Karate Comedy Knockout

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

In 2014, writer/director Riley Stearns’ feature film debut, Faults, premiered at the SXSW film festival. The story of a cult intervention gone wrong prompted audiences to gravitate towards the conceptually innovative film for its dry humor set upon serious subject matter. In his sophomore feature, The Art of Self-Defense (in theaters Friday), Stearns once again proves he’s a talent to watch, bringing a unique voice to the black comedy genre with his universally appealing wit.

The Art of Self-Defense, which also premiered at this year’s SXSW, is a darkly quirky film (think Napoleon Dynamite meets The Lobster). After a random attack leaves buttoned-up introvert Casey (Jesse Eisenberg) bruised both physically and mentally, he’s left to examine his sad, victimized life he lives with his equally

Daisy Jones & The Six by Taylor Jenkins Reid

Reviewed by Desiree De La Cruz-Miller, Library Assistant

The book I have chosen to review, Daisy Jones & The Six by Taylor Jenkins Reid, arrived in our library back in March and has been hard to keep on the shelves. I know they say, “Don’t judge a book by its cover,” but this book’s cover appealed to my eye right away and made me wonder what was behind it all. The cover yields Daisy Jones with her brilliantly wild hair stroked across her face, looking at the reader out of the lower part of her eyes. She draws the reader in, inviting us to come and find out who she is. The cover grabbed my attention and got me to open up the book to see what was inside.

Taylor Jenkins Reid has easily become one of my favorite authors. Her writing technique is unique. She writes this novel in its entirety as an interview. By doing this, the reader is able to get differing perspectives as to the life of the band. Some occurrences are remembered with similarity. Other occurrences are remembered how the character wants to believe the events happened. I enjoyed that the author chose to write the story as an interview. It enables the reader to get the whole picture as the story unfolds through the different band members’ viewpoints.

The Six is a ‘70s rock band that is coming to fame. Their lead singer, Billy Dunne, finds out his girlfriend is pregnant and does not know how to deal with the news. Billy is not ready to have a family. He struggles with the thought of being a father. He loves his girlfriend and cannot imagine life without her, but his irrational nature leads him down a destructive path. While on tour he takes to drugs, booze and sex to put the thought of settling down out of his mind.

Daisy Jones is the life of the party. She could be found clubbing on the Sunset Strip, partying through the night. She is a carefree woman whose abuse of drugs and alcohol gets her into sticky situations. She will do anything that will allow her to let loose and feel numb. She has a voice that cannot be compared to anyone else. Singing is in the very nature of Daisy. The unrestrained rawness of her voice sets her apart from other female musicians of the time.

Both The Six and Daisy have something about them that makes them stand out, but what would make them even better? Putting the two together to create a super-power band, Daisy Jones & The Six. Dunne strongly opposes the idea of teaming up with her. He fights the insistence of his manager to get into the studio with her. Billy views Daisy as a pretentious brat and knows she’ll be impossible to work with. His band and manager know the benefits

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

FAKE IT TO SAVE SOME DOUGH

My youngest is getting married this coming October and the wedding planning has been in high gear ever since the day of engagement. Everything from dresses, to suits, to flowers, to event venues, to food tasting, to meeting with photographers, to sending out "safe the date" post cards, to buying flower girl shoes, to honeymoon planning, to deciding on cup cakes or traditional cake, to working with my sister on what songs or hymns they want sung. There sure is a lot of planning for one (hopefully little) event. I'm not that involved. The father of the bride just pays the bills. I'm not complaining. I could not be any happier for the two of them. The big day is scheduled for Saturday, October 12th. However, the date might change, I just received an email that could save me a few bucks. It turns out that to help them celebrate Oktoberfest, the Sierra Nevada Brewery in Chico, CA is offering one lucky couple a free venue and reception if they get married at the brewery on September 27th. Obviously, when I heard the "free" part, my ears opened up and my eyes widened to read the details. It turns out that the couple will be selected from entries of a one minute video on why the couple likes beer and why their passion for beer qualifies them to get married at the famous beer digs and have all of their guests partake of some or a lot of cold ones. The only suds in my beer that have to be cleared up is the fact that neither my daughter nor future son-in-law like cold ones. I told them to fake it. I told them to mention that their father has been advocating for cold ones for the past ten years. There is no one in the free world who has written about having a cold one more that yours truly. Every week I have told my countless, loyal readers to relax and have a cold one. I'm almost tempted to enter me and my ol' lady in this contest. We are celebrating 40 years of togetherness this year. I can't think of a better way to celebrate than to recite our vows over a cold one or two. What has kept us together all of these years? It might be scary for young people today to think of marriage as a life long commitment. But that is what God has intended it to be. By being united in Christ, Linda and I know that there is no backing out, no trading each other in for a newer model, no walking out the door and never coming back. We love each other because God loves us. We love each other knowing that we are both sinners and have failed and will fail each other in the future. We forgive and accept each other. If a couple can see each other as both failures who love each other despite their shortcomings, then they can enter into a marriage looking forward to the security of a life time of life together and all the joy it brings. Every day that we have partners who love us, is another day to celebrate, another day to have a cold one. Now, if I need for some of you loyal readers to verify my contest entry claims please help me if the brewery contacts you. Please affirm that I'm just an ordinary, run-of-the-mill, newspaper guy who tries to be stupid every week by talking about beer and God and how to have a happy marriage and how to solve all of your problems and how to relax and enjoy life knowing God loves you. I'll let you know if I win.

Schools, Federal Funding Are City Focuses in the Next Census Count

By Derrick Deane

It may still be 2019, but the City of Hawthorne is getting ready for the 2020 census that is scheduled to be next March. The Hawthorne City Council listened to a presentation from the U.S. Census Bureau at its meeting last Tuesday. The Council members were advised to create a community committee to execute the census and get as close to a 100 percent count as possible.

Councilman Alex Monteiro was a part of the committee that helped gather a population count in the city during the 2010 census, but said that the results from that year were less than desirable with only 58 percent of residents participating. "Last census I was part of a committee that was trying to count every person in the city of Hawthorne, but we failed because we didn't get to 100 percent count," Monteiro said. "The census count is very important because that's the way the federal government sends us money for programs like CDBG [Community Development and Building Grant], homeless funds, school funding. It's very important for us to count every person in Hawthorne."

Monteiro said that the schools in Hawthorne had already met and were looking to put in census centers in their schools so that parents and residents could go in and fill out their census forms online. The online component is one of the big changes from 2010. While paper forms will still be sent out to residents who need them, the big push to complete the census will be done via an online form.

"This census, the emphasis will be on an online response," Andrew Soto, Partner Specialist with the U.S. Census Bureau of the Los Angeles Regional Office said. "There will still be paper forms if requested. However for cost benefit, the focus here is that it will be a digital response. In areas that have a digital divide, we will be sending paper forms and there will also be an option to answer by form as well."

In addition to city funding and grants, the census also allows for redistricting within states for congressional and senate positions. "It provides data that will help redraw congressional maps as well as money," Soto said. "[The] $675 billion is distributed throughout the country every single year and per capita it is about $2,000 per year. So, it's tangible."

This means for every local resident who participates and completes their census form, the City of Hawthorne will see an estimated $2,000 in funding per year between 2021 and 2030. Hawthorne's population count in 2010 resulted in 84,293 people, or roughly $168 million annually, according to Soto's numbers. That money goes into providing services at public schools, special education programs, homeless programs, and community development programs, among many other expenses.

One of the biggest, most controversial parts of the upcoming census has been the question of citizenship, with President Donald Trump pushing for the question to be added to the form. Soto noted that regardless of where that question falls in the eyes of the judicial system (which is currently deciding whether to allow it or not), the Census Bureau does not share information and will keep the response confidential.

“This is a controversial issue -- however the emphasis here is that we’re delivering to the public that this data is confidential,” Soto said. “This upcoming census will be focusing on privacy. It will be encrypted and we do not share this information with other agencies and we abide by Title 13.” Title 13 states that the information collected is never published and is used only to produce statistics and never used against respondents. Violation of this U.S. Code can result in up to five years in federal prison and/or up to $250,000 in fines.

Soto added that the Census Bureau is currently in the community awareness stage and is in the process of opening up census centers and hiring workers. He asked the City Council to form another Complete Count Committee (CCC) to get the undercount from 2010 up. “In the previous census that we have done, they were critical in strategizing ideas in the hard-to-reach and hard-to-count population within the areas because you can form the committee with different members representing different sectors – the religious sector, school district, community-based organization and they could come together and form that committee to do the outreach to the population,” Monteiro said. “If we have those familiar voices within the community, it would be really helpful and benefit the community.”

Monteiro closed the presentation asking to see if there would be funding for the CCC this year, similar to what was received for the 2010 count. “For the Census Bureau this time around, we don’t have the stimulus that they did in 2010 -- but we do have the resources in providing technical assistance, training materials, and one-sheets with information about the census and why it is important,” he said.

For more information on the 2020 census, please visit <https://2020census.gov/en>, which also has information about jobs and other important information. The census will begin in March 2020 with a deadline to be completed by April 1, 2020. • fragile dachshund. Deciding to empower himself through self-protection, Casey forgoes purchasing a firearm (in a hilariously awkward scene) and instead enlists in a local karate class under the leadership of the confident (if slightly delusional) Sensei (Alessandro Nivola).

From here, the film further examines (again, in comically deadpan fashion) the concepts of masculinity: Casey learns from Sensei that to be tough – to be “a man” – one must listen to heavy metal, own large dogs and, essentially, be a jerk. Despite rising up the ranks through harsh training from both Sensei and Anna (Imogen Poots), the dojo’s most qualified student, the still emotionally-sensitive Casey, questions whether he’s able to transform himself in this newly adopted lifestyle.

A smaller film with modest ambitions, The Art of Self-Defense is one of the funniest movies I’ve seen this year. Eisenberg as Casey plays a version of his recognizably neurotic movie self, but adds many more intriguing layers here. As Sensei, Alessandro Nivola is unforgettable and wonderfully wacky in this supporting role.

Impressive stunts, exacted cinematography and a fun visual style all combine like a skilled karate combo to create a fun balance between comedy and suspense. An entertainingly off-kilter look at toxic masculinity in today’s world, The Art of Self-Defense is a striking knockout that should be sought out this summer movie season. •

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by CLAUDIA D. EDWARDS in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that CLAUDIA D. EDWARDS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act with limited authority. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 08/12/19 at 8:30AM in Dept. 99 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Notice To Potential Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale.
