St. Joseph’s Hosts Notre Dame

Hawthorne’s Saint Joseph’s School was proud to host the University of Notre Dame’s Los Angeles Alumni Club and the annual new student sendoff last week. City Council Approves Five-Year Plan to Address Homelessness

By Derrick Deane

The Hawthorne City Council approved a five-year plan to tackle homelessness in the community during another brief, hour-long meeting last Tuesday evening. In addition to addressing homelessness in general, the plan has a number of benefits including no fiscal impact to the general fund. It also starts off with $30,000 in Los Angeles County/Measure H grant funding. The plan will continue to be implemented as funding from Measure H becomes available.

Mayor Alex Vargas was quick to note that the initial start may be a positive step, but there is still a long way to go and asked that the community be compassionate. “The $30,000 grant that we got is just a very simple, humble small amount,” he said. “It’s not even enough to be able to really address the issue. If our City staff could look into getting more grants because the issue is growing. People can’t buy a house, let alone rent either. There are a lot of different factors and the involuntary homeless group is rising and we need to take action and be supportive.”

The City of Hawthorne was selected along with 46 other municipalities across L.A. County to be a part of the grant program created by the County and the United Way of Greater Los Angeles’ Home for Good Funders Collaborative to confront rising homelessness in their communities. The program launched earlier this month and each of the 46 cities received a planning grant ranging from $30,000 to $70,000 depending on the number of homeless families and individuals within their municipal boundaries.

“Some of you may be concerned with the homeless population we have here, but it’s happening all over L.A. County,” Vargas said. “There are people who voluntarily want to stay out and it’s unfortunate and we still have to do something for them. But there is another rising group -- those who are involuntarily homeless. Hawthorne is not the only place where the rent is increasing. Home prices are increasing astronomically. We’re not the only city. Every single city around us throughout L.A. County, it’s the same deal.”

The City of Hawthorne Five-Year Plan

outlines eight specific goals with short- and long-term actions. The first two look to reduce both the incidents of homelessness and periods of homelessness for individuals. The plan will also look to assist the homeless to return to self-sufficiency; improve access to services and housing; strive to make homelessness rare, brief and non-recurring; and help to expand an inventory of affordable housing in the region that is available for homeless populations.

“Maybe at some point in time, things are going to turn around for everyone,” Vargas

Campaign to Simplify Voting is Going Strong in the South Bay

By Rob McCarthy

If voting is such a privilege, why did so many registered residents skip the June primary? The absentee rate hovered near 75 percent in some South Bay communities.

El Segundo had a modest turnout -- 39 percent -- for a primary election with no local school bond issues to decide. Still, 61 percent of El Segundo citizens who were eligible to cast ballots remained silent about the finalists in the fall for Governor, the State Assembly and Senate, and the Congress.

In Inglewood, Hawthorne and Lawndale, citizens had school bond measures to decide that affect homeowners’ tax bills and the quality of public education. The turnout in those communities was 25 percent or less, despite the kind of pocketbook issues that drive interest and participation on Election Day.

So, why did so many people forgo their right to weigh in on these important questions? Knowing that property values are connected to school test scores, Hawthorne residents had money riding on the outcome on June 5. So did voters in Lawndale, where 42 took the time to vote. Inglewood decided a city charter amendment about local elections.

Los Angeles’ County officials have studied voter turnout for almost a decade and think they understand why the majority of eligible voters aren’t engaged in summer

Riveting I'll Be Gone in the Dark Traces Serial Murderer's Path

Reviewed by Jeff Huttinger, Library Assistant, El Segundo Public Library

You have to prepare yourself when reading true crime – a hardening of the heart, if you will. Somber tributes by victims' families, dripping with affection and loss, tug at the heartstrings so fiercely that you wince at the thought of turning another page. Many times, a lack of closure can frustrate as a still unknown killer remains at-large denying the reader a true ending -- and along with it, any sense of fairness in the world. Not to mention the violent imagery that keeps you up at night. There are grisly details so jarring that you have to turn away every few chapters.

Tragically, author Michelle McNamara's I'll Be Gone in the Dark, a book of obsessive determination and self-sacrifice, comes with an added layer of misfortune. McNamara died suddenly in early 2016, prior to the completion of the book, of an accidental overdose, but her life's work is not in vain. I'll Be Gone in the Dark is an incredibly well-written and easily accessible chronicling of the terror elicited on California from 1974 to 1986 by a serial murderer dubbed the Golden State Killer. This monster is ultimately responsible for at least 12 murders and more than 50 rapes.

Through meticulous research, McNamara takes the reader back in time, tracing a route from victim to victim while touring various locations in the present day. Dark is filled with eyewitness interviews, police procedure, forensic evidence and thoughtful speculation from dedicated amateur sleuths just as determined to solve the mystery as the author herself.

Make no mistake, however. It is McNamara's heart and dogged perseverance that truly elevates this material above traditional true crime. Nowhere in the book is it more absorbing (and more somber) than the pages dedicated to Michelle's wonderful family and the balancing act she endured daily juggling parental/spousal responsibility with a tenacious pursuit of justice. She spent countless hours poring over decades-old police reports and ghastly crime scene photos until the wee hours of the morning, all while her family slept peacefully nearby. But as McNamara described the elation of tiny details connecting together to form a bigger picture, one gets the sense that she wouldn't have had it any other way.

There have been several updates to the Golden State Killer case since the release of I'll Be Gone in the Dark, including a likely suspect. A true ending to this book may be imminent -- and with it, one less reason to deny yourself such an amazing read.

To check out I'll Be Gone in the Dark, also available in e-book and audiobook formats, or browse any of our other true crime titles, please visit the library to apply for your free library card. This book would also qualify for prizes in our Adult Summer Reading program, going on now through September 1. The program includes activities, raffles and fun events! Film Review

The Meaning of Love Is Explored in the Futuristic Drama, Zoe

By Morgan Rojas for www.cinemacy.com

Drake Doremus has done it again. The independent film director takes the familiar theme of love in modern relationships and adds an exciting new sci-fi element to his latest romantic drama, Zoe. Starring Ewan McGregor as an entrepreneur computer scientist and Léa Seydoux as his research assistant, Zoe is a beautiful and heartbreaking look at the complexities of love and the lengths one is willing to go to in order to hold onto it.

Set in an undisclosed time in the future, Cole (McGregor) is at the forefront of revolutionizing romantic relationships. He has developed technology that determines the compatibility and likelihood of long-term success for couples looking to take that next step in their relationship. Each person is put through an intense question and answer session, with the results being run through Cole's computer system and then compared to those of their significant other's. In addition to the computer system, Cole has also been working on creating an ideal physical partner for singletons unlucky in love. "Synthetics," as they're called, are programmed to be completely compatible with, and never betray, their partner -- qualities with which humans struggle.

While working closely with Cole on this new development, Zoe (Seydoux) becomes increasingly overwhelmed with romantic feelings for him. Although she knows she shouldn't, Zoe asks if she can personally undergo the Q&A -- which ends up revealing intimate memories and vulnerabilities. When no one is looking, she runs a compatibility test with Cole with shocking results that reflect a 0.00 percent chance success rate. Dumbfounded, Zoe can't help but be honest with Cole about her discovery. His explanation as to why their relationship could never work out, despite their mutual attraction, leaves Zoe questioning her entire existence.

Doremus keeps to his signature 50 shades of blue color palette to create a moody and fresh vibe, similar to 2017's Newness. Partnering up with composer Dan Romer and music supervisor Chris Douridas, the score two about how to portray an intangible thing like love as either the heaviest burden or the lightest, most effervescent feeling.

"What do you want your partner to see in you?" asks Cole in the very first line of the film. "I want them to see me for who I really am," answers Zoe. This sentiment, while universal and fundamentally positive, turns out to have deeper implications than Zoe could have ever imagined, and is the crux of the film's emotional despair. This philosophical questioning of love and authenticity is what makes Zoe so unforgettable among the sea of other festival films. As of this review, Zoe had been acquired by Amazon Prime for a summer release.

Zoe is rated R for some sexual material and drug content. 104 minutes. Now streaming on Amazon. •

Hawthorne Happenings

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

THE FILING PERIOD IS STILL OPEN

There have been several people pull papers for each of the open seats for the upcoming Hawthorne city election to be held this November but there is still time to file to run. The filing period will end on August 10th for all positions except for City Clerk which will end on August 15th at 5 p.m. Here is a list of people who have pulled papers so far: For City Council: L. David Patterson, Olivia Valentine, Angie Reyes English, Jason Gromski, Alex Monteiro, and Timothy Hagerty. For City Treasurer: L. David Patterson and Ryan Richard. For City Clerk: Dr. Paul Jimenez and John L. Jefferson. It's not too late to get involved and run for a city office.

CRUISE NIGHT AND HIGH SCHOOL REUNION

I hear that the HHS Cougar Cruise Night was well attended and was great time. I was up in Shelton, WA last Saturday attending my 45 high school reunion. It was nice to see some old friends. I remembered most of the basketball and football players since I hung out with most of the jocks back then. I was saddened to see that 29 of my classmates are no longer with us and several of my teammates are in declining health and could not attend. Our star football player who later played with the Seattle Seahawks died recently from complications related to head trauma. The NFL was doing testing to see if his condition was due to his playing days. Football is a violent sport these days and parents have to now decide whether they want their sons taking the risk of head injury. I did get a few people commenting that I looked the same as I looked back in high school. I guess teaching high school kids for 41 years has kept me youngish looking. Maybe all of those cold ones have something to do with it.

100TH BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

The address to send birthday cards to Frances Stiglich to wish her well on her 100th birthday is: 12316 Dormouse Road, San Diego, CA 92129. Frances always loved Hawthorne and we all loved her "tell it like it is" style whenever she spoke at a city council meeting.

HOT, DRY AND SMOKY

I'm writing this from Bend, OR where it's hot, dry and smoky due to the wildfires that are burning in Southern and Central Oregon. There were reports of over 160 fires burning that were ignited by lightening strikes. We stopped to visit relatives in this popular vacation and outdoors mecca. Many Californians have moved here and work out of their homes using the internet. They have escaped the Bay Area or LA and enjoy skiing in the winter and warm summer temps and a lot of outdoor opportunities. My ol' lady loves to shop up here since there is no sales tax in Oregon. The lakes and streams are full of fish. The campgrounds are full. There are many golf courses to enjoy. You just have to enjoy the colder temps during six to eight months of the year. Some good snow storms usually come through. And finally, like most hip and happening places, they have plenty of microbreweries and wineries. Seems like where ever I go, most everyone enjoys their cold ones. Like always, try to stay cool, have a cold one.

KEEP ME INFORMED

Drop me an email and let me know of what is happening in Hawthorne or any special event coming up. I depend on my 17 readers to keep me in the loop.

Equipment Warranties 101: What You Should Know

(BPT) - From smartphones to mattresses, almost everything you buy comes with some kind of warranty. How can you ensure you get the most benefit from a warranty, especially for a major investment that's also critical to the comfort of your home, like a new furnace?

"Warranties are meant to assure a homeowner that the furnace they're purchasing will do what it's supposed to, is free of defects and meets applicable government regulations or standards," says Chip Wade, HGTV expert. "However, warranties are often very specific about the circumstances under which the manufacturer will repair or replace the furnace if it doesn't work properly."

Because written warranties are legally binding documents, you may come across unfamiliar terms as you're reading yours, including:

Product warranty - This is the guarantee that comes from the company that manufactures the furnace. Contractors and installers may offer extended warranties that apply to their work, including the labor required to install the furnace. YORK(R) is one of the only manufacturers that manages their own extended warranties.

Warranty term - The length of time the coverage is offered is called the warranty term. These can vary significantly; however, YORK(R) heating and cooling offers a lifetime heat exchanger warranty on its YORK(R) Affinity(TM) gas furnaces. In addition, YORK(R) offers the Complete Assurance(TM) Warranty Pledge with this furnace. If the heat exchanger fails within 10 years of installation, YORK(R) provides optional furnace replacement in lieu of heat exchanger equipment.

Parts warranty - Most furnace warranties will cover replacement of specific parts if they malfunction within the warranty time frame and the problem is a result of a manufacturer's defect.

Non-transferable - When you have a new home comfort system installed, if the furnace warranty is non-transferable, the coverage will not transfer to the new owners if you sell the house before the end of the warranty term.

"No homeowner ever wants to hear their warranty has been voided by something they did or something they were supposed to do but didn't," Wade says. "That's why it's so important to read your detailed furnace warranty very carefully, so you know what the manufacturer and installer require in order to honor the warranty."

• Register the product purchase with the manufacturer. Most manufacturers require homeowners to register their furnace with the manufacturer within a specified window of time after the purchase and installation. A majority of YORK(R) contractors will register the warranty on behalf of the homeowner. For those that do not, homeowners are required to register within 90 days of installation. Visit www.york.com/warranty to learn more about the company's warranties.

• Work with a qualified YORK(R) contractor who can properly install the product. If a part doesn't work because it wasn't installed properly, the manufacturer will likely say the installer, and not the manufacturer, is liable for fixing the problem.

• Follow manufacturer's maintenance recommendations. In order for your furnace to operate as it should, it will need to be professionally serviced every year. Keep service records for reference, in case there is ever an issue that arises.

"A new furnace is a big investment, and it's one that's essential to preserve the comfort of your home," Wade says. "A good manufacturer's warranty can help you be sure you're getting a quality product that's backed by a company that will stand by its work." •

Archie

"Let me introduce myself. My name is Blanca and shortly before the 4th of July, I decided I needed to find a place to feel safe during the holiday. While I was scouting for comfy location, I got turned around and couldn't find my way home. That is how I ended up at an LA County shelter as a stray. I didn't have a collar, tags or micro-chip... so there was no way to contact my previous owner. Luckily, I had a potential adopter that was supposed to come for me. Sadly, they never did. The folks at MSFR just couldn't leave an adorable 5-year-old, female Miniature Schnauzer at the shelter, so they rescued me. They could tell that I have had numerous litters, so the first thing on the list was a little neutering procedure to put an end to that. Don't ask me how I managed to keep my figure and my weight -- a mere 12 pounds -- with all of those litters, but I have. I've also got a gorgeous light silver coat and huge, dark eyes. I'm very sweet and I enjoy socially interacting with other dogs, so I'd be the perfect addition to any family. Please visit me at our adoption fair and see what a special gal I am."

If you're interested in Blanca, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"If you are looking for a cute, little friendly guy with a comical personality, look no further. Just come to our adoption fair and ask for me -- Archie. On July 4,, my brother and I were running for our lives. There were bombs bursting in air, things popping and whistling and crackling all around us. We were so scared that we just kept on running and running... until we got lost and ended up at an LA area shelter the next day. My brother got adopted almost immediately, but they couldn't care for two of us and they left me behind. When the MSFR folks saw my shelter picture with one ear up, one ear down looking scruffily adorable, they had to rescue me. I'm a purebred Miniature Schnauzer that is only 2 years old, so I still have a lot of time to provide adventures and comic relief to my forever family. Now that I've been sort of groomed, I'm looking pretty dapper and we discovered that I have big, beautiful bat ears that stand at attention. Who knew? I'm a pretty happy little 15-pound guy who gets along great with other dogs and would love to be part of your family."

If you're interested in Archie, please email info@msfr.org for more information. •
