Davis and DeRosa Physical Therapy Expands Their Presence on Main Street

By Nancy Peters

Davis and DeRosa Physical Therapy, Inc., moved into their current 325 Main Street location in 2005, doubling their square footage to 2,000 square feet. A few months ago, the practice once again expanded when they took over the adjacent space, previously occupied by Touch Institute. The addition more than doubled their space again.

Troy Davis and Chris DeRosa moved to El Segundo in 2003 when they occupied an office in the 300 block of Richmond Street Chris DeRosa, a native New Yorker, born and raised in the borough of Queens, holds a degree in exercise physiology from Adelphi University. Initially not sure of a career goal, he took basic courses. Then, he saw the film Regarding Henry, starring Harrison Ford, following the long recovery of Ford's character, a victim of a gunshot wound to the brain who undergoes extensive physical therapies to relearn all the basics of walking, feeding himself, brushing his teeth and hair, etc. "That film really inspired me to go into After graduation in Scotland, their PT careers started in NYC at Faxton Hospital, each gaining experience in both inpatient and outpatient physical therapy. Both of them returned to California following acceptance into the Credentialed Advance Manual Therapy Residency Program at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center, which only accepts two therapists per year. The PT in which they both specialize relies on the manual therapies, with skills honed to exact a better treatment for the patient with hands-on therapies, not with their introductory practice of physical therapy. Until Davis and DeRosa Physical Therapy, Inc., there had not been an office dedicated solely to physical therapy (PT).

"Back in 2003 we were just so happy to be in El Segundo," said DeRosa, "and then we moved to Main Street in 2005. We saw an increase in patients as our visibility made people more aware of our practice."

As Chris said during a previous interview, "Moving to Main Street was like moving up to the 'big kids' table!" Both Davis and DeRosa live in town and Chris can often be seen walking the practice's "watchdog," Jackson, down Main Street. (The practice's previous popular "watchdog," Caffrey, passed away six and a half years ago.)

The PT partnership began after each of them left two separate private PT companies, seeing the need for a practice right here in El Segundo. At the time they opened their practice, the timing was right -- personally, professionally, and economically -- for downtown El Segundo. physical science. I saw how that meant I could work with people, but not in a job that was business-based. I began to volunteer as a PT aide at Jamaica Hospital in Queens, and that was it. I immediately knew my career choice!" recalled DeRosa.

After college, Chris worked in various PT clinics in New York, gaining experience until he was accepted into a PT program at Robert Gordon University in Aberdeen, Scotland, a program accredited by the American Physical Therapy Association, the governing body of all licensed physical therapists in the United States.

Meanwhile, Troy Davis, raised in Long Beach, California, graduated from California State University at Long Beach where he majored in PT. Davis' mom is a nurse, and he was always interested in how the human body works, how it is capable of restoring itself, how muscles function. PT seemed a natural choice for him. Davis enrolled in the PT program at Robert Gordon University in Aberdeen, Scotland. just relying on ultrasound and sonic waves for treatment.

Since occupying the larger office and with this new expansion, the staff at Davis and DeRosa has grown to 18, with seven therapists, including Chris and Troy, who each carry a full patient load, and 11 support staff. Their highly trained PT staff gains experience each day, most holding a degree in Kinesiology or Pre-Physical Therapy, until being accepted into PT school. In addition to the manual therapies, all PTs are certified in the Graston Technique, a unique specialized form of soft tissue manipulation.

"Physical Therapy improves the way one moves and we are all trained in Movement Science. Our staff has also been trained in the techniques of Pilates. Our practice is unique on several levels," said DeRosa. "Our patients stay with the same therapist for their treatment cycles, or at least that is the goal. We treat our patients on a 45-minute appointment cycle, and between the seven therapists we See Davis and DeRosa, page 8

Film Review Shaun the Sheep Movie Rivals Inside Out for 2015's Best Animated Feature (Thus Far)

By Jared Anderson for CINEMACY

It's August. If summer was just a weekend, this month would obviously be Sunday-everybody was working for the weekend, but now they're scrambling back for the weekdays. The cinema's release slate is merely a reaction to this; the freshness of the summer movie season is becoming stale, and fall awards season that follows is hotly anticipated. August is the in-between that sometimes produces modest hits but also a lot of releases that are forgotten since audiences are preoccupied with societal transitions such as a new school year. While much of the film discussion this past week has been pointing and laughing and opining at what went wrong with Fantastic Four, a worthy film has fallen through the cracks at the U.S. box office despite for compelling solo stories, but not the case with Shaun. He's dastardly, fun, and above all lovable in the vein of Bugs Bunny or Rocky & Bullwinkle. The rest of the flock doesn't really have the same level of personality, except for the adorable youngling.

The new film is a short but sweet delight, and the key to its charm is its absolute simplicity. That's not to say the film is minimalist, per se; Aardman's signature stop-motion animation has never looked better or more detailed. But one example of the skillful straightforwardness is the taciturn sound design, in which the characters only speak gibberish. A bizarre creative choice that somehow works - demonstrating how unnecessary words are in such a medium as inherently visual and ornate as the animated

From City Clerk Norb Huber

HISTORIC TOUR OF

Its campaign season when candidates run for either city council or mayor. This year we have seven citizens vying for the two council seats and four citizens running for mayor. You already see some of the signs and banners going up around town. In years past, every vacant building or chain link fence was plastered with campaign signs. It is almost a contest to see who can put up the most signs. The rational being the person who puts the most up wins. The question comes up, where do these people get the money to pay for signs, mailers, and telephone calls? Who is financing their campaigns? Are developers donating to a candidate so that they can get affirmative vote on their pet project? Hopefully, this is not happening. All registered voters should take an interest in local government and get to know the candidates. The city council makes decisions that affects the people of Hawthorne much more so than the president or congress. The councilmembers really do set the city in a direction that they feel is best. Between now and November, I urge you to be an informed voter and do some work to know the issues and know where the candidates stand on the local issues. Find out whether a certain candidate can be trusted to run our city. (My name was inadvertently listed as one of the candidates by the Daily Breeze. That was a misprint. I am not running for higher office. I love being city clerk and writing my little column each week to keep you all informed.)

The event will be held Friday August 28th, 2015, at 12:00 p.m. Registration starts at 11:00 a.m. at the Hawthorne Memorial Center, 3901 W. El Segundo Boulevard".

RAMONA NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATION PICNIC – THIS SATURDAY

My neighbors living in the Ramona Tract are especially invited and encouraged to attend the annual Ramona Picnic to be held this Saturday at Ramona Park from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will be food, music and fun for the entire family. Last year's event was well attended and a good time was had by all. See you there. Come out and enjoy a "cold soda or water" with the City Clerk on a hot Saturday afternoon. When you see me, mention that you read my column and I may actually get a water for you. I need to keep my readers alive and healthy or else I would be writing all of this stuff to myself.

a wide release. It's a treat from the UK, who are seriously on a roll when it comes to family films recently between this and Paddington.

Shaun the Sheep Movie reminds me of a film school application, namely the one at the establishment I studied at. In it, an applicant must contain a short film that adequately conveys him or her, but without any words whatsoever. Sounds hard, but every student application I saw just made it look easy. So does the cartoon in question, which exists in the absence of any formal spoken language. The plot involves the titular character and his flock planning a great escape from their farm lifestyle - one they actually enjoy, but nonetheless grow fatigued of. However, while their escape is ultimately successful, it comes as a catch-22: their farmer... and just go with this... is accidentally flung into town, develops amnesia, and becomes a hipster barber. The flock of sheep then adapt to urban life while attempting to recover their old master - all while evading the vicious animal control specialist. Shaun himself is a classic cartoon character. He originally appeared in the 1995 Wallace and Gromit short A Close Shave, but the film is actually more directly related to the TV series of the same name. The danger of a spinoff is that certain characters sometimes don't make feature. Furthermore, the humor and jokes are quick and ruthlessly funny - but always good-natured. It's about as hilarious as Trainwreck is, but without resorting to the ribald. It's refreshing to laugh so hearty. So much of what works in Shaun the Sheep could adequately be regressed to "less is more," but that wouldn't do justice to how clever the gags are here. Also, a special mention goes to Tim Wheeler of the band Ash. His original song "Feels Like Summer" is a much better song than most that get nominated for Globes and Oscars. Not like it will help its chances, but it's an irresistible power pop tune that serves a sweetly diegetic purpose within the story. Just wait until you hear it performed by "The Baa Baa Shop Quintet." This is a welcome return to form for Aardman Studios, even if the creative visionaries behind the studio's greatest achievements, Peter Lord and Nick Park, are only executive producer here. Co-directors Richard Starzak and Mark Burton have crafted a vivid ride that holds its own against the company's best animated features, Chicken Run and The Curse of the Were Rabbit. Just like with Pixar, Aardman made 2015 a time to put themselves back on the map and make their best contribution to the world in years. Shaun the Sheep Movie is now playing in theaters. •

Millennials Say They Want To Save For Retirement, But A Third Aren't Doing It

(BPT) - Nearly one in three millennials have no money saved for retirement, and a quarter of millennials - people between the ages of 18 and 34 - report owing more money than they have currently saved, according to a survey released by the Indexed Annuity Leadership Council (IALC).

"This year, millennials finally surpassed all other generations and now make up the largest share of our workforce, which makes it so concerning that such a large portion of these young people are astoundingly unprepared for retirement," says IALC executive director Jim Poolman.

Still, out of all generations, millennials are also the most open to retirement savings options that protect against stock market fluctuations and offer the opportunity for growth. According to the survey, 52 percent of millennials showed interest in products like fixed indexed annuities that provide guaranteed lifetime income while ensuring the principal investment is never lost.

"It's no surprise that millennials, who entered the workforce after the tumultuous 2008 economic recession, are showing the most interest in products that can provide certainty against the unpredictability of the stock market," Poolman says. "This certainty becomes even more important as our retirement landscape continues shifting to a more pay-for-yourself era."

So, how can millennials with nothing saved for retirement get started? Poolman has some basic tips:

1. Remember, Every Penny Counts

When you're young, you have time on your side, so put as much money aside as you can. This might mean skipping a night or two on the town or packing your lunch more often. While this doesn't seem like much, making one or two small changes can add up to considerable savings.

2. Take Free Money

Consider contributing to your company's 401(k) plan or any employer-sponsored available plan. Think of any plan your employer is willing to match as "free money."

3. Balance Your Portfolio

As a young professional, you have the luxury to put some of your money into high-risk investments since your retirement is seemingly far away. However, for the safety of your future, it's important to also consider adding more conservative savings products like health savings accounts or fixed indexed annuities that can provide muchneeded balance to your retirement portfolio. 4. Start Now

Don't wait. It's crucial to start saving for retirement as early as you can. The earlier you start saving, the more likely you are to meet your retirement goals. Even if you can only contribute 1 percent of your salary, anything is better than nothing, and it can add up quickly.

The IALC offers online calculators that can help you see how much you should be saving (taking into account your age and your retirement goal) and whether your current retirement savings will be sufficient. •

Looking Up Is There Life in the Alpha Centauri System?

Based on press releases from The University of Hawaii and Texas State University, provided by Bob Eklund

A team led by scientists from the University of Hawaii has developed a new approach to searching for life on other planets. The team has measured various biological photosynthetic pigments in the laboratory. They absorb almost all solar light of specific colors in the visible and convert it into chemical bonds to store energy. For example, chlorophyll pigments absorb blue to red light and reflect a small part of green in the visible, as seen in green plants.

All infrared light is reflected, and this is employed in agriculture to monitor water content in crops. Such biopigments are contained in plants, algae, bacteria, and even in human skin (carotenoids) and eyes (rhodopsin), creating the colored beauty of our world. They can also help find life on the surfaces of other planets.

The scientists have found that the part of visible light reflected by various plants with vibrant colors oscillates in certain directions, while incident light oscillates in all directions. Thanks to this peculiarity, this reflected light can be detected remotely by using polarizing filters (similar to Polaroid sunglasses or 3D movie goggles) when viewed at specific angles, even if the star is millions of times brighter than the planet. The team found that each biopigment has its own colored footprint in such polarized light. This technique could be instrumental in searching for life in the planetary system nearest to the Sun, Alpha Centauri, with existing telescopes. There are three stars in this system. While scientists are interested in finding life around all these stars, Alpha Centauri B, only 4.37 light-years from Earth, seems optimal for life searches with current telescopes. In 2014, a small planet was discovered around Alpha Centauri B. Unfortunately, this exoplanet is ten times closer to the star than Mercury is to the Sun, so its surface is melting under the stellar heat, and it probably has no atmosphere. At a distance where planets like Earth with liquid water on their surface could exist (the "habitable zone"), no planets have been found as yet, but scientists are continuing to search for one. If such a planet is found, or even

ASTRONOMERS SOLVE VJ DAY PICTURE MYSTERY.

Friday, August 14th, was the 70th anniversary of VJ Day, which marked the end of World War II. That afternoon, as news spread and crowds filled the streets. LIFE magazine photographer Alfred Eisenstaedt snapped one of the iconic photographs of the 20th century: The Kiss, an image of a sailor in New York's Times Square grabbing and kissing a woman in a white.

In the August issue of Sky & Telescope magazine, astronomy-history sleuth Don Olson and colleagues have definitively solved a key mystery surrounding the photo: when was it taken? Their astronomical analysis of a shadow cast by the Sun settles it: the time was 5:51 p.m., ruling out a set of longstanding claims about who the sailor and the woman might actually be. Sky & Telescope has made public a PDF of its article-a successful mystery tale full of timely history. It's at: http://skypub.com/VJDay •

Ginny looking gorgeous

Please help Ginny! Ginny is a Zaguate (Costa Rican Street Dog) looking for a forever home. She is approximately 18 months old, and weighs about 25 lbs. Her owners handed her over to us to foster her, because they no longer wanted her. She was tied up outside with a wire collar that became embedded in her neck while suffering in the hot Costa Rican sun with no food or water. She was very sick when we got her 9 months ago, but now with proper vet care, vaccinations and lots of love she has thrived.

Ginny is completely house broken, extremely smart, a quick learner. and is not a chewer. She loves to go to the beach, on car rides, walks or hikes. She is great off the leash! She swims in the ocean, so I'm sure she'd love the pool too. Ginny is very loyal, she loves dogs, cats and kids! Shy at first, but warms up quickly. She is not a

SCOTT GETS DISMISSED AT INGLEWOOD

Tony Scott, who was Inglewood High's head girls' basketball coach for the past 11 seasons, was dismissed by the school's administration for the misappropriation of funds.

According to sources, Scott claimed that the issue was around so-called "spirit packs" in which most prep sports programs sell to parents for players to use over the course of the season. The packs include uniforms, hoodies, shirts and other apparel.

Scott had several successful seasons with the Lady Sentinels that included a CIF-Southern Section Division IIIA championship in 2011. Scott claimed that his team had several fund raising projects but former Inglewood principal Jose Gallegos said that it had a negative balance of $8,000.

After Inglewood advanced to the Southern Section Division IIIAA finals where it lost to Santa Margarita in the 2013-14 season, the Sentinels, faced with rebuilding from scratch, moved into the Bay League and ended up tied with cross town rival Morningside for fifth place at 1-9 in league and 4-14 overall. The Inglewood High administration, headed by current principal Kyle Douglas, hopes to hire a new head coach soon.

Both the Sentinels and Morningside will have first year head coaches as Burrell Leo, who was recently head coach at Woodland Hills Taft High and former boys' coach at Bellflower St. John Bosco, takes the reins with the Lady Monarchs, who once were a dynasty from the 1980's to the mid 2000's decade, most of those under now retired Frank Scott.

CIF-SS FOOTBALL PLAYOFF CHANGES PROPOSED

The CIF-Southern Section Executive committee approved a proposal that the CIF-Southern Section football playoffs will be based by individual teams, instead of leagues, that would start as early as the 2016 season.

It would be a bit like what it already has in boys' and girls' basketball but based on how competitive the teams are, instead of enrollment and talent. The prestigious CIF-Southern Section PAC Five Division, for instance, will include the top 16 overall squads, and it could be changed to the "Open or Super Division" which is similar to the Open Division it already has for its top 16 overall boys' and girls' basketball teams.

There would still be 13 divisions. Like now, the top three teams, at least from most leagues, would enter the playoffs with a few top at-large squads. A meeting will be held at the Southern Section office in Los Alamitos on October 6 with voting due in January.

see approximately 60 to 75 patients a day. "With the changes and challenges in medical reimbursement and medical coverage, since we opened our practice, as well as the open policy that exists now, we see a trend of self-referral, instead of PT being recommended by a medical doctor. People are taking control of their own preventative care. Insurance does not require a physician referral, so our patient base has grown. We needed a larger space.

"We encourage our patients to communicate what is going on and we work very closely, physical therapist to patient, to determine together the best course of treatment. People are not used to having that direct access, although it is becoming more the norm now that people are relating to the changes in health care," continued DeRosa.

"We work with our patients on a financial level. Some insurance companies now have a higher co-payment and less reimbursement for PT, but some others are treating PT just like any other treatment and reimbursements are fair. It all balances out, but we want to focus on the patient and their treatment, first.

"Our success is based on our customer service and our fantastic team of employees. Our Physical Therapists are highly trained and personable, but most of all, compassionate. We want to make every patient feel comfortable from the minute they are greeted by an amazing Front Desk staff until they leave after a quality treatment. Everyone who seeks treatment at Davis and DeRosa can be assured that when their treatment is completed they will be moving correctly and their constraints will be lessened because we want the patient to get better, quickly."

When Davis and DeRosa moved to the Main Street location, they added lots of equipment, including treadmills and upper and lower body bikes. Also used is a progress tracking system, "HUR," whereby measurements and treatment history is recorded, treatment progress is tracked, noting whether increasing or decreasing or not changing treatment is needed, until the PT has been completed.

"Since we opened in 2003, we have been so blessed to have the community support we get," DeRosa remarked. "In turn, we support El Segundo wherever we can. The Run for Education, the Wellness Fair, Little League, AYSO Soccer, Volleyball, Football, just about anywhere we can help out, we will. We have a program where high school students who are interested in PT can come in and work as interns, observing our therapists and get a pretty good handle on PT and how a PT clinic works.

"We have plans to have a Group Fitness, Balance, and Pilates program within the next year. Our goal is to continue to be the neighborhood PT place here on Main Street, in El Segundo, where everyone who enters knows this is a happy place to come, and get great results for your ailment," concluded Chris DeRosa.

Visit their website, Davisandderosa.com for additional information. Appointments are available Monday through Friday beginning at 8 a.m., until the last appointment at 7 p.m. "We are so happy to serve the people of this community," Troy Davis stated. "With the diverse population in town, from residents to those who work in El Segundo every day, we never doubted finding success. We plan on being the cornerstone of physical therapy in El Segundo for a long time." •
