Visionary Gets the Green Light to Transform Automotive Industry

By Rob McCarthy

A dirty little secret about hybrids and electric cars is they're only better for the environment once they leave the car assembly plant. They're harder to create than conventional automobiles, and forging aluminum instead of steel to make cars lighter requires more energy and creates more pollution. It's not a win-win situation...yet.

That's what makes the research and development work going on at Divergent 3D in Torrance so interesting. This 2014 technology startup says it has come up with the blueprint for how carmakers can make the manufacturing process as clean as the cleaner-running, high-mileage people movers rolling off Detroit assembly lines.

Remaking the automotive-manufacturing industry starts with 3D printers using strong carbon-fiber materials instead of forged stainless steel. Divergent's Chief Executive Officer Kevin Czinger and his team of engineers and designers are putting together an end-to-end system to build car chassis that can be assembled in minutes, according to the company. "The Divergent system allows automakers and technology companies to innovate at a much faster rate—scaling up volume production at only a fraction of the cost while also alleviating environmental damage," Czinger said last month.

Automotive experts say that the manufacturing process accounts for up to 20 percent of a vehicle's lifetime greenhouse gas emissions. There is considerable interest in the car plant technology coming from China, where an investor group has pumped $65 million into Divergent's ongoing research and development in Torrance.

The Chinese involvement with Divergent makes sense because that nation's car market is the biggest in the world and it's growing. The government is attempting to reduce pollution and modernize the local auto industry, according to writer Tycho Deijter, who covers the Asian car market and contributes to Forbes magazine.

Divergent, which recently won a Petersen Automotive Museum Award for Leadership & Innovation, describes itself as a technology development and licensing company. Licensing opportunities abound in China, where there are 130 passenger car brands. The majority of car brands are made locally in China, Deijter noted. "The number of brands is staggering," he wrote in a May 2016 piece for Forbes, and "new brands keep popping up."

Divergent will use the $65 million to further develop and commercialize the eco-friendly car technology, it said. With the latest round of funding, CEO Czinger says his venture is fully funded to complete "our reference factory." The company sees the emerging Chinese electric car market as a primary customer for its technology.

The industrial 3D printers create interlinking parts of the car's frame using a process known as additive manufacturing. The printers keep adding layers of material—in this case, carbon fiber—guided by computer software. Additive manufacturing has the potential to create new body parts and organs from living tissue.

A 3D printer works much like a home or office laser printer. Open a file, hit print and wait for the copy. The difference is that 3D printing jets build three-dimensional prototypes and parts using 100 different kinds of materials, from plastic to metal to nylon. The process is so unique that people in the fields of manufacturing, medicine and consumer products predict it's the next industrial revolution.

The other difference between the printer-copier and a 3D printer is how a digital file is reproduced. The 3D printer creates an image from a digital file, starting at the bottom and working its way up.

The process has been likened to a layer cake, where the baker lays down each layer one at a time until the entire cake is formed. There are videos on the Internet about 3D printing, and the unbelievable things that really smart people have designed, like a fully functioning jet engine.

These car factories of the future could be cheaper to open, according to Czinger. He says that an auto plant could be built at one-tenth of the half-billion cost to erect and equip. With 3D printers running on computer-assisted design programs, a big box warehouse could be easily outfitted into an auto assembly plant, Divergent's founder says.

Divergent 3D has made a promise to its investor that it can build a production line for 20,000 cars a year, equipped with industrial-sized 3-D metal printers, laser cutters and assembly robots, for close to $50 million. That would allow carmakers to shave $6,700 off their production costs per vehicle, the company estimates.

Divergent 3D expects to build prototypes for customers next year and then open a small-production factory in 2019 in the Los Angeles area, according to published reports. The company is fully funded for the research and development work ahead, its founder says. This technology has put Detroit and Japanese carmakers on notice.

"Divergent will continue its strong momentum in leading the adoption of an economically and environmentally transformative manufacturing solution—building safer, stronger and more profitable eco-friendly vehicles at mass volumes," said Czinger, who worked as a Wall Street banker before launching his manufacturing venture.

Software-guided manufacturing—at the heart of the car manufacturing revolutionaries at Divergent—also has applications for South Bay's aerospace industry. Printers can make single aircraft parts from metal or plastic, saving time and keeping the manufacturing on site.

Former Tonight Show host Jay Leno drove a prototype car made by Divergent for an episode of Jay Leno's Garage. The show is posted on YouTube at www.youtube.com/watch?v=vPv7PwS500E.

Hydrocarbon Haze Keeps Dwarf Planet Colder than Expected

Based on a Press Release from UC Santa Cruz, Provided by Bob Eklund

New analysis of Pluto's atmosphere explains why New Horizons spacecraft measured temperatures much colder than predicted.

The gas composition of a planet's atmosphere generally determines how much heat gets trapped in the atmosphere. For the dwarf planet Pluto, however, the predicted temperature based on the composition of its atmosphere was much higher than actual measurements taken by NASA's New Horizons spacecraft in 2015.

A new study published November 16 in Nature proposes a novel cooling mechanism controlled by haze particles to account for Pluto's frigid atmosphere.

"It's been a mystery since we first got the temperature data from New Horizons," said first author Xi Zhang, assistant professor of Earth and planetary sciences at UC Santa Cruz. "Pluto is the first planetary body we know of where the atmospheric energy budget is dominated by solid-phase haze particles instead of by gases."

The cooling mechanism involves the absorption of heat by the haze particles, which then emit infrared radiation, cooling the atmosphere by radiating energy into space.

Pluto's haze layer is blue in this image taken by the New Horizons Ralph/Multispectral Visible Imaging Camera and computer generated to replicate true color. Haze is produced by sunlight-initiated chemical reactions of nitrogen and methane, leading to small particles that grow and settle toward the surface. (Image credit: NASA/JHUAPL/SwRI)

The result is an atmospheric temperature of about 70 Kelvin (minus 203 degrees Celsius, or minus 333 degrees Fahrenheit), instead of the predicted 100 Kelvin (minus 173 Celsius, or minus 280 degrees Fahrenheit).

According to Zhang, the excess infrared radiation from haze particles in Pluto's atmosphere should be detectable by the James Webb Space Telescope, allowing confirmation of his team's hypothesis after the telescope's planned launch in 2019.

Extensive layers of atmospheric haze can be seen in images of Pluto taken by New Horizons. The haze results from chemical reactions in the upper atmosphere, where ultraviolet radiation from the Sun ionizes nitrogen and methane, which react to form tiny hydrocarbon particles tens of nanometers in diameter. As these tiny particles sink down through the atmosphere, they stick together to form aggregates that grow larger as they descend, eventually settling onto the surface.

"We believe these hydrocarbon particles are related to the reddish and brownish stuff seen in images of Pluto's surface," Zhang said.

The researchers are interested in studying the effects of haze particles on the atmospheric energy balance of other planetary bodies, such as Neptune's moon Triton and Saturn's moon Titan. Their findings may also be relevant to investigations of exoplanets with hazy atmospheres.

New Horizons passed within 7,800 miles of Pluto, with this closest approach on July 14, 2015. New Horizons had a relative velocity of 30,800 mph at its closest approach, and came as close as 17,900 miles to Charon. Starting 3.2 days before the closest approach, long-range imaging included the mapping of Pluto and Charon to 25 miles resolution. Because of Pluto's tilt, portions of the northern hemisphere were in shadow at all times.

Meanwhile, instruments on board New Horizons studied the atmosphere, both by emissions of atmospheric molecules (airglow), and by dimming of background stars as they pass behind Pluto (occultation). During and after closest approach, other instruments sampled the planet's high atmosphere and its effects on the solar wind. They also searched for dust. A communications dish on Earth measured the disappearance and reappearance of the radio signal as the probe flew by behind Pluto. The results resolved Pluto's diameter (by their timing) and atmospheric density and composition (by their weakening and strengthening pattern). •

WHAT DO YOU WANT FOR CHRISTMAS?

I ask my ol' lady about this time of the year what she would like for a gift knowing full well that her standard reply will be "nothing". Most of us Americans are so blessed with material things that we really truly "need nothing". All of our basic needs are taken care of. We have food and cold ones in both refrigerators, one in the kitchen and one in our man caves. We have closets full of golf shirts, tee shirts and dress shirts. We have cars to park in our garages, driveways or crowded streets. Most of us have a roof over our heads. So, what is it that we want for Christmas? We have heard the old lines, "It's better to give than to receive.", "It's the thought that counts.", "Give from the heart"; all of those are great. There is a deep feeling inside of us that motivates us to give to others out of our love for them. We want them to be happy. We want to give to show that we care for them. So, what would an old man who tries to write a random column want this season? I really would like more time to relax and have a cold one once in a while. I look forward to that gift being opened on June 15th, 2018. That is the day that I will close the door to my classroom for the final time. Only 116 days left to teach, but who is counting? I just read where over 10,000 baby boomers are retiring every day now in America. It certainly would be nice to be one of them. My life will change, but one thing won't change. My Christian faith will continue to motivate me to love and share my faith with others. The greatest gift that I can share with others is the truth found in God's Word. The truth is that Jesus came to earth in a manger 2,000 years ago to save the world. Those who believe have life, eternal life. That gift is much better than a 100" wide screen HD TV. Like always, just chill, enjoy a cool drink and know that God loves you. •

5 Preparation Tips to Make Any Cruise Smooth Sailing

(BPT) - When it comes to a dream cruise, everyone has their own idea of the ideal vacation. The beautiful ocean waves breaking against the bow beneath you, the warm breeze blowing against your hair and the lure of new, unexplored destinations off in the distance. If you're lucky, maybe your dream vacation is already in the works and you're eagerly counting down the days until it's time to board. And if you're still in the dreaming phases of your perfect cruise, you realize that dreaming of your vacation is almost as much fun as living it... almost.

No matter where you are in the process, the perfect cruise is more than just picking your dream destination; there are plenty of other things to consider as well. Whether a minor or monumental task, these tips are your starting point. Satisfy each of these considerations and you'll be on your way to making your cruise everything you dreamed it could be.

• Always be on the lookout for the best deal. If you could enjoy the same amazing cruise at a fraction of the price, why wouldn't you? Deals are not hard to come by in the cruise industry and the key is to book early. Do your research, look for package offers and book your trip as soon as you can. The wait may be difficult but an early booking could save you hundreds of dollars.

• Pick the right cruise line. Your dream cruise rests on the right ship, so don't leave this choice to chance. MSC Seaside is a sun-lover's paradise with plenty of outdoor space to take in the Caribbean sunshine and stunning views, thanks to its unique outdoor, ocean level promenade. When you step inside for a bite to eat, you'll discover MSC Seaside is home to celebrity chef Roy Yamaguchi's first restaurant at sea.

• Pack smart and know what's included. Your cruise line is your home away from home for the duration of your trip, but that doesn't mean you have to bring home with you.

• Plan activities for the whole family. While the cruise itself is enjoyable, it's the activities you take part in while on the ship that truly make your vacation unforgettable. Look for a cruise that offers activities for your entire family. MSC Seaside, for example, features the most interactive water park at sea with slide boarding technology, two of the longest zip lines at sea, a 4D cinema and two Formula 1 racing simulators.

• Arrive early. Weeks and months of planning using the tips above could be all for naught if you don't heed this last piece of advice. After all, flights can be delayed or cars can break down and if such a thing should happen to you, planning a little extra time into your schedule ensures that when the ship does leave, you're on it, no matter what happened on the road to get there.

Your dream vacation is waiting for you. If you're in the planning stage for your cruise, applying the tips above can help you finalize your strategy and finally get on the ship.

To get started on planning your cruise, visit www.msccruises.com.

Busting Myths and Misconceptions about Osteoporosis

(BPT) - One in two women over the age of 50 will suffer a fracture caused by osteoporosis in her remaining lifetime. Despite its prevalence, there are many myths and misconceptions about this "silent" disease. These myths may be a reason why osteoporosis is underdiagnosed and undertreated.

A fragility fracture (breaking a bone by falling from a standing height or lower) can impact day-to-day life, but it can also be an indicator for osteoporosis in postmenopausal women. When you have osteoporosis, even daily tasks such as taking your dog for a walk can put you at risk for a fragility fracture of the wrist, leg or even hip. But, a startling 82 percent of postmenopausal women did not identify such fractures as a possible risk factor for osteoporosis, according to results from a recent online survey of over 1,000 postmenopausal women conducted by Harris Poll on behalf of Radius Health, in partnership with HealthyWomen and the National Osteoporosis Foundation.

"It is critical that postmenopausal women do not dismiss seemingly insignificant fragility fractures as 'clumsiness,' but instead see them as an important indicator for bone fragility, disease progression and the need for intervention," says Dr. Andrea Singer, MD, FACP, CCD, clinical director and trustee of the National Osteoporosis Foundation.

This is just one myth about osteoporosis. There are many others, including:

Myth: Osteoporosis only affects the elderly.

Truth: Osteoporosis often affects women after menopause. Natural menopause can occur as early as age 50. The rate of bone loss after menopause is increased with the accompanying loss of estrogen. Osteoporosis is a progressive disease that lowers the density of bones over time, making them weaker and more likely to fracture.

Myth: Osteoporosis isn't very common.

Truth: Ten million Americans are estimated to have osteoporosis, and more than 8 million of those are women.

Myth: Osteoporosis isn't that serious.

Truth: More women over the age of 55 were hospitalized in the United States for osteoporosis-related fractures than for stroke, heart attack or breast cancer. Yet, according to the survey, postmenopausal women were more likely to be concerned with a diagnosis of stroke, heart attack and breast cancer than osteoporosis.

Myth: Health care providers will tell you when it's time to test for osteoporosis.

Truth: Research suggests only 2 in 10 older women in the United States who suffer a fracture are tested or treated for osteoporosis. Furthermore, according to the survey, 96 percent of postmenopausal women who have not yet been diagnosed with osteoporosis and who suffered a fragility fracture were not told by their health care provider it could be linked to osteoporosis.

Myth: Getting enough calcium and vitamin D is enough to treat osteoporosis.

Truth: About 3 in 10 postmenopausal women incorrectly believe that drinking milk or taking calcium supplements alone will prevent osteoporotic fractures/breaks, the survey found. While getting enough calcium and vitamin D is critical to keep bones strong, it may not be enough when it comes to treating osteoporosis in postmenopausal women, especially after a fracture.

Myth: There is no way to build new bone after menopause.

Truth: About one-quarter of postmenopausal women incorrectly believe there is no way to build new bone at their age, the survey found. The truth is that certain types of treatment for postmenopausal osteoporosis can help build new bone, while others help slow bone loss.

Separating the truths from the myths is an important step in pursuing appropriate care for bone health after menopause. ## Trojans Take Home Pac-12 Title

By Adam Serrao

With quarterback Sam Darnold under center, the USC Trojans won their first conference title since 2008. With a 31-28 victory over the Stanford Cardinal last Friday night in Santa Clara, the Trojans showed just how gritty they can be and how good they have become in such a short amount of time. Unfortunately for USC, its two losses on the year banished the team from College Football Playoff conversation and landed it in this year's Cotton Bowl. Even still, the Trojans not only showed that they have become a force to be reckoned with, but also proved that they have come a long way since their inconsistent play at the beginning of the regular season.

USC fans got everything that they could have possibly asked for out of the game against Stanford last week. Not only was it close and competitive throughout, but it came down to a gritty fourth down stand with seconds ticking off of the clock in the fourth quarter of play that would wind up determining the Trojans' fate. Uchenna Nwosu, the outside linebacker for USC, was the hero of the game this time around, gashing the Cardinal offensive line to fly through and make a game-saving stop on the one-yard line. "Probably the biggest stop of the year," Trojans running back Ronald Jones explained of the play.

USC came away with the slim three-point victory, but not before Jones rushed for 140 yards and two touchdowns while simultaneously moving into the top five on USC's career rushing list. Darnold, the star quarterback who will likely have just one game remaining in the Cardinal and Gold before taking off for the NFL, finished with 325 yards through the air and two touchdowns while also being named MVP of the title game played at Levi's Stadium in Northern California. "It's special to see how far we've come as a team," Darnold said with a smile on his face after his team had finally secured the win.

With the victory, the Trojans became the first team from the South Division to win the Pac-12 title. It wasn't easy, either. The defense had to put up with the prolific play of both opposing quarterback K.J. Costello and opposing running back Bryce Love. Costello only completed five passes in the first half of play, but came on strong in the third and fourth quarters to finish with a total of 192 yards through the air and two touchdowns. Love, on the other hand, had carried Stanford all year long and attempted to do so again in this game with a total of 125 yards and a touchdown on the ground.

Despite the good play of Stanford, the game still ended in USC's favor. Even with the win for USC, the team still found itself on the outside looking in on this year's four-team College Football Playoff. "Obviously, the reality is we'll need some help," USC coach Clay Helton said following his team's victory, before the playoff standings were announced. "But we deserve to be in the discussion, especially the way we finished the season. [We're] hot right now."

If only the season were two games longer, the Trojans may have had a better chance to prove themselves and their 11-2 overall record. Unfortunately for USC, those two losses were enough to keep the team behind the likes of Clemson, Oklahoma, Georgia and

Alabama in the end-of-year standings. "We're sitting here as champion," Helton continued. "That's important. We sit here with 11 wins. We sit here with an unbelievable strength of schedule. We had the opportunity to show on national TV who we are."

Although they did not finish in the final four, it can still be said that the Trojans had an excellent season and perhaps even overachieved in a year when they weren't expected to do much at all. With the amount of injuries suffered on the team and the amount of youth on the offensive side of the ball, the achievements of USC this season can certainly be considered impressive, to say the least. As it turns out, a 30-27 loss at Washington State in September could turn out to be the only thing that kept the Trojans out of the playoff. That slim, three-point loss, which could have realistically gone either way once all was said and done, may just turn out to be the one game that comes back to haunt USC and all of its fans once this year's season officially comes to an end.

Despite the Trojans' impressive win over Stanford, there simply wasn't a possible combination of championship game results last Saturday that could have vaulted the team into the College Football Playoff conversation. Even still, the team's first conference title since 2008 should be celebrated—and a matchup against Ohio State in this year's Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic is certainly not something to be taken for granted. That game will take place on December 29 in Arlington, Texas and could provide the Trojans with the perfect pedestal to finish the season off strong with a statement win against an extremely elite opponent from the Big Ten. •

If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. # PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS

Purrrfect Companions

Violet

Saving one animal may not change the world, but it will change the world for that animal. Share your love this season by adopting one of these wonderful kitties.

Violet is a beautiful and soft brown/black tabby with a lovely face and matching personality. This young year-old girl is still learning how to directly come to people for affection, but she loves to flirt-meow and follow you around. Sweet and gentle, Violet loves to be petted, but she has lingering moments of shyness--so she would do best with other cats and maybe around very gentle dogs. She is very sweet with the cats in her foster home and gets along with other cats very well. As she might be wary of normal kid noise and play, she might not be best with small children.

What this darling group of kittens, Twix, Panda and Sox, would love the most is to have their own special families. It would be wonderful if each of them could be adopted with one of their foster siblings...

Twix thinks whoever chooses her will be very lucky. She likes exploring new hiding places, playing with balls, running and taking long naps. Twix would love to have her brothers Sox and Panda join her--but if they can all find good and loving homes, then she will be happy.

Panda is a boy looking for a kind family to love and care for him. He is playful, curious and easy to cuddle with. Panda also loves exploring, eating, jumping off chairs and napping.

Sox is a playful boy who is curious and very lovable. He likes eating fish and playing with noisy balls, feathers and toy mice. He is also very good at running, leaping and climbing.

Madeline (photo on front cover), aka Maddy, is in love with humans. When she sits on your warm lap, it makes her purr uncontrollably. She loves cuddling and playing with her siblings, Biscotti and Florentine (who are also available for adoption). They chase each other and pounce. In a perfect world, Maddy would love to stay together with her brother and sister. However, just one of her siblings or a young energetic kitty at home will please her too.

Cauldron was rescued with his siblings from the East Valley shelter at only one-week old. Cauldron is a little bundle of energy and a ton of cuddly cuteness. He loves people, as he was bottle fed-from such a young age, and is fantastic with everyone he meets from adults to young kids. This playful boy hasn't met a toy he doesn't like. He cannot be the only cat in his home, so Cauldron must either be adopted with another kitty or placed into a home with a young, playful cat.

Torta was rescued from an animal shelter at barely one-day old. He and his siblings were the smallest kittens to ever enter the Kitten Rescue Nursery. Tiny fighters, these precious kittens are tenacious lovers of life. They absolutely adore humans, as they were bottle-fed from their very first moments in life. Torta is an energetic child with a lot of spunk and playfulness. He is always romping around, wrestling with his fellow foster kittens. He is not the most graceful kitten, but that doesn't stop him from trying to climb up so he can nuzzle all over your face while purring up a storm. Torta must be adopted either with another kitty or into a home that has a playful resident cat, so he cannot be the only cat in his home. He gets along well with people of all walks of life, every kitty he meets and likely would adjust fine to a cat-friendly dog.

These kitties are available for adoption
