Restart Hit for Airbnbs, Budget

By Rob McCarthy

The burning question of whether El Segundo should regulate overnight guests in private homes - popularly known as Airbnbs - won't be decided before June. The City Council met Tuesday for the second time in a week and agreed to push off the next public hearing to June 2. The city's staff requested more time to revise the proposed zoning ordinance, which lays down rules for homeowners to follow and penalties.

Four council members will pick up where they left off on February 3, when the proposal was up for a second reading. Mayor Drew Boyles, along with Councilwoman Carol Pirsztuk and Councilmen Scot Nicol and Chris Pimentel, appeared close to voting on an 18-month proposal to license neighborhood bed-and-breakfast businesses and charge operators a permit fee. The temporary change to the city's zoning law would have required homeowners to carry $1 million in liability insurance. The last draft of the ordinance, which is now being revised, also said hosts could rent two rooms per night. Occupancy was limited to two adults per room and 12 people on the property, including the back yard, if guests came to town to see relatives and friends.

The new draft of the short-term rental ordinance will go through a first reading on June 2, at which time the council could ask for more changes or approve the document and set up a final vote at their next meeting in June. Councilman Lance Giroux, who began his term last week, will consider the zoning issue for the first time on June 2.

The City Council again held a virtual meeting with the five members, not physically in the council chambers. Attendance by Zoom video technology is allowed under the statewide emergency order for the coronavirus. The meeting opened with the usual Pledge of Allegiance and an invocation. The council members and staff stood and were instructed to face any flag in the room where they chose to quarantine. The second virtual meeting went off smoothly and lasted just 25 minutes. Fire Chief Bill Donovan said that the city this week started monitoring the health of residents of the Park Vista senior community. Seniors and anyone with existing health problems or immune deficiencies are considered at the highest risk of infection from the COVID-19 pandemic. The city has contracted with a health-care agency for on-site health screenings three days a week at the senior affordable-housing property. A nurse will report to Park Vista on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Kinecta Federal Credit Union’s Commitment to Community and Protecting the Planet

As a not-for-profit financial cooperative, we consider it both a privilege and an obligation to give back to the communities where our members and employees live and work. In 2019, our employees and our subsidiaries volunteered more than 8,800 hours, raised more than $650,000 in charitable donations, and participated in more than 180 community events, including annual beach clean-ups in partnership with Heal the Bay.

Whether it’s providing scholarships and grants to deserving students and teachers, offering sound advice at our free financial workshops, supporting local businesses or hosting our annual food drive, service is at the core of who we are.

Our love for the community extends to the environment. On Earth Day, we reflect on the importance of responsible corporate citizenship and doing our part to protect the planet. We’ve upgraded to drought-tolerant landscaping at our Manhattan Beach headquarters, reducing water usage by more than half. Additionally, we are in the process of upgrading our interior and exterior lighting to LED/time sensors to reduce energy usage at our Operations Center in El Segundo. With the help of our employees, Kinecta recycles all e-waste and toners, and saves energy with nightly computer monitor shutdowns.

Other green initiatives at our newer, state-of-the-locations include adding electric vehicle charging stations, bike racks to encourage fewer cars on the road, energy-efficient mechanical & electrical systems and carpeting made from recycled materials.

For our members, Kinecta offers e-Statements as an alternative to traditional paper statements, which reduce waste and the risk of identity theft. In honor of Earth Day, we hosted Shredfest, an annual paper-shredding event for the public to safely and conveniently dispose of sensitive and unwanted documents. Since 2016, more than 27 tons of personal documents have been safely shredded, recycled and diverted from landfills.

While these initiatives support sustainability, Kinecta is also committed to lending money in an environmentally responsible way. We will never finance coal, oil pipeline or any other projects that pollute the air and water, sponsor deforestation or otherwise contribute to the destruction of natural resources.

We welcome you to join us in the movement to protect and preserve the Earth. By becoming a member of Kinecta, you’re supporting an organization dedicated to giving back to the community and preserving our environment for future generations. # Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I am one of the lucky ones who still has a job. My company cut salaries across the board, mine included, and even though I’m home and able to work from home I am now working harder than ever, twelve hours a day, six or seven days a week, and I’m exhausted physically and mentally. Even though I have no commute, I feel like I see my family less than before. My job pays most of the bills, so my husband cares for our young child, and I feel like an inadequate mother. On top of this I feel guilty for even thinking this way, knowing how many people are hurting right now. Is there some way to reduce this anxiety?

– “Lucky” Me

Dear Lucky Me,

You have lamented that you don’t get to spend time with your family, so I’m guessing that family togetherness is something that you value. You have noted that your job pays most of the bills, so I’m guessing that being a provider is something that you value. You have noted your interest in being an adequate mother, and while we know that society unfairly critiques mothers’ parenting much more than that of fathers, I suspect you value having a close and loving relationship with your child. You mentioned you feel guilty that you are employed while others are not, so I would bet that you care about your neighbors and your community.

If I’m right - if you are a family- and community-oriented, loving person with a sense of responsibility - then a lot of things that you value are being tested right now. To make it worse, there is an entire movement dedicated to “leaning in” that insists that working mothers can “have it all” if they get with some imaginary program that includes having time and money and energy and a worthy partner. Any one of those stressors is enough to invite Anxiety to charge in like a schoolyard bully. Together, the problems can seem to invite a whole gang of Anxiety Bullies.

Are you planning to suddenly turn into a bully yourself? Will you cause so much trouble that you’ll scare the Anxiety Bullies away? Will you stop caring and lose interest in the well-being of your family and community?

No, no, and no? No bully likes being called out, and the Anxiety Bullies are no exception. Take them on one by one. Give them each a hard stare and tell them that you know exactly why they are here, how long they can stay, and what will make them leave. Remind them they’re not strong enough to

Keep Your Distance

With the sunny weather on Saturday the 11th, I was among those on the popular walk down Grand towards the beach, but meantime very careful to maintain the recommended distance of isolation. With no access to the beach, I merely continued a little north on the quiet east (inland) side of Vista del Mar. Turning back, I was approached by three joggers from the opposite direction. Nothing of concern in that alone but the shock came when the young person in the lead charged straight at me, never deviating from her path despite plenty of detour room and, breathing heavily, passed me by inches. All I could do was turn my back, which she appeared to find amusing. With 20,000 dead Americans and some segments of the populace extraordinarily vulnerable, keep in mind there are plenty who don’t give a damn. I should have tripped her.

Endings, Beginnings, An Observation of Complicated Love(s)

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy.com

“Everything might not be ok, but that’s ok. You’re exactly where you need to be.” It’s a sentiment that’s exceptionally fitting right now, and a beautiful takeaway from Endings, Beginnings, the latest feature from director Drake Doremus. In these times of self-isolation and social distancing, I’m finding his films to be more therapeutic than ever. Although we may be watching from within our homes on VOD, we will still be connected through its message that:

Shailene Woodley portrays with incredible honesty. Her performance is raw, selfish, and, admittedly, relatable. Co-stars Jamie Dornan and Sebastian Stan meet her level of artistry, creating scenes that cut right to the heart.

Endings, Beginnings is made up of an abundance of subtext and that is partly fueled by the film’s soundtrack and Frank’s “Music To Suffer To” Spotify playlist. Moody tracks from Beach House, Hayden Thorpe, Lawrence Rothman, and more act as musical poetry that embellishes every scene. Additional subtext

Endings, Beginnings, Courtesy of Samuel Goldwyn

We’re allowed to give ourselves the room for personal exploration without judgment, and the vulnerability to admit our universal human desire: to love and be loved.

Daphne (Shailene Woodley) is fresh off a breakup with her long-term boyfriend (Matthew Gray Gubler) and currently calling her sister’s Los Angeles pool house home. After four years of struggling to find contentment in her relationship – “Searching for a yes, and never finding it” – the only commitment she is looking forward to having is the one with herself. Daphne romanticizes her future; full of travel plans, bold expressions, and wild adventures. But her intentions are tested when she meets Jack (Jamie Dornan) and Frank (Sebastian Stan), two men who light up Daphne in very different ways, and who also happen to be best friends. This unexpected and complicated love triangle forces Daphne to re-examine past traumas and dependencies and re-prioritize the future she had envisioned for herself.

Scrolling Instagram during personal moments of self-inflicted sappiness, I recently came across a saying that’s stuck with me, “The timing isn’t wrong, the person is.” In this case, Daphne finds compatibility and is attracted to two men, one providing passion and one stability. This sexual vs intellectual chemistry provokes an emotional crisis that and emotional catharsis swirl throughout the film and let the audience fill in the blanks with occurrences from their own lives. Blue-toned cinematography by Marianne Bakke and imaginative editing by Garret Price also gives the film its dream-like quality.

Triangles have sharp edges, and when it comes to love, someone’s bound to get hurt. Endings, Beginnings, now streaming, is a reminder that even with earnest intentions, life doesn’t always go according to plan. The sooner we are able to accept this reality with love and grace, the happier and more fulfilled our crazy, chaotic, and beautiful lives will be. •

Overview of a Great Season

By Anthony Gomez

The El Segundo Boys 10U Premier All-Star team had an fantastic run this year. The team was made up of Forward Jace Keith, Midfielders Daniel Bass, Preston Milne-Castro, and Xavier Gomez. The backend was led by CDM Louis Lappe and Backers Brody Brooks, Elyjah Green, Rishi Nair, with Max Baker in goal. The Area 1D tournament (which the 10U Boys had not won since 2012) included reigning Western States Champions Manhattan Beach, Hawthorne, North Redondo, and South Redondo. After pool play (1-1-2 record; 4 GF/4 GA), the boys exploded against Hawthorne 6-0, setting up a rematch in the Championship against Manhattan Beach, their only loss. Both teams played extremely physical – the defenses and goalie play on both sides was incredible. Scoreless the first three quarters, El Segundo scored early in the 4th on an own goal created by Preston Milne-Castro’s corner. But Manhattan Beach tied it up with minutes left pushing overtime. El Segundo started fast in overtime, scoring early when Xavier Gomez converted a PK. But once again, Manhattan Beach scored in the waning moments to force a Shootout! Both teams scored their first two attempts, then missed their third. Manhattan Beach would miss their 4th try before Brody Brooks converted putting Gundo up 3-2. Manhattan Beach’s final shot was stonewalled by Louis Lappe, crowning the El Segundo boys Champs and sending them to the Section Tournament where they would eventually fall in the Semifinals. Overall the boys finished in the Top 16 in the Western States! It truly was a special run for a special group of boys. •

Chase Waite Keeping Others Happy, Hopeful and Positive

For the past four years, when you roam the halls of El Segundo High School, you were bound to run into Chase Waite. There are many adjectives to describe Chase, but the best may be the kindest person you’ll ever meet. His charm, friendly demeanor and smile he greets each person with are the qualities of the well-known boy next door. Chase has many interests, and he makes each day count. Unlike many teens these days Chase takes each day seriously and makes each one of them count. He knows that the best impression is the first impression. He’s a good student and very athletic, but those who know him say he’s a great friend who likes to make others smile. These days Chase wakes up each morning to check his email for his school work, and he stays in touch with his teachers and friends. His four year overall 3.6 GPA is a tribute to his academia. Of all of his classes, Chase’s favorite is the Drama class, which he’s been in for four years. “My favorite class is the Drama class because of my teacher Mr. Sidwell.”

two years to attain his Associate’s degree. “The plan is to transfer to another college to finish my degree. I don’t have a Major yet, but I am interested in pursuing Sports Broadcasting and doing acting on the side.” If he doesn’t go into sports broadcasting, he might think about being a public address announcer. He did some P.A. work at the Eagles football games. He wasn’t intimidated by something he’d never done before and learned very quickly. Chase stays active these days by shooting baskets, playing the keyboard and staying involved in the Special Effects Club. Though he hasn’t played basketball for the Eagles, he recently made the Los Angeles Elite Basketball club team. He would play every day after school with friends, but now he’s been shooting by himself. He got involved in the Special Effects Club, thanks to his best friend, Ray. They are currently working on a scary horror movie. Chase’s greatest passion is making others smile. So when he’s not studying lines for a play, you can find him in writing funny and entertaining rap lyrics. “I love to write funny

Chase in the 2019 ESHS Fall Drama Production of “Love Sick” by John Cariani. The Scene is called Obsessive/Impulsive: about a woman and a man who fall in love at first sight.

Chase got involved with Drama in his freshman year and he was addicted. “I joined Drama in my freshman year because one of my friends asked me to be in it.” According to him, it was one of the best decisions that he had ever made. Chase added, “The class is amazing and I feel like I have another family.” Chase has been in seven shows since his freshman year and he loved each one of them. One of his favorite shows was called “Brothers Grimm Spectaculathon.” In the show, he had a total of nine roles, with one of the scenes having him switching through six characters. The numerous characters he played would have been a challenge for most to remember all the lines but not for Chase. He said, “For me, it’s a little easier because I have a method of going over the lines multiple times until I remember the lines without having a script In hand.” He added, “Mr. Sidwell is an amazing director and he has truly made me a better actor and person in life.” He stays involved and active in the school’s Drama Club by being elected it’s Vice President. He says it’s his way of giving back to the club and his second family. He plans on attending El Camino College using the South Bay Promise pathway for and entertaining rap songs that I post on my YouTube Channel called ‘The DAWG Vlog.’” He added,” it’s fun to make my friends smile and laugh by recording the songs.” Chase is very close with his family and you can be sure they have plenty of family nights these days. They do so by watching movies, playing board games together and listening to Chase play the keyboard. Chase is upbeat about the world and life, in general, these days. He, like the rest of us, sees the challenges and misses going out to eat with his family, having the freedom to hang out with his friends and attending school in general. But he says, “This bump in the road of history will soon be a memory.” When the class of 2020 has their reunions, they will most likely reminisce about their four years in high school, especially their senior year. Many people will be remembered, but few will stand out for what they meant to the school and their classmates. Chase Waite is one of those who will be remembered as a best friend who made them smile and feel good about themselves. He said, “I love to make people laugh and I hope everyone remembers me as a happy and positive guy.” No doubt, Chase has left his imprint of keeping others happy, hopeful and positive. • and perform health screenings to detect symptoms of the coronavirus or other health issues. The Bridge Church is one of the local organizations checking in with residents who might need assistance with food shopping or prescription medicines, Donovan said.

El Segundo bought and provided face coverings to all city employees and has begun testing employees for signs of illness. Donovan, who announced on April 9 at a virtual town-hall meeting that firefighters were being tested for fevers several times per day, said the practice had been extended to all city employees at their worksites. As of Tuesday, 21 El Segundo cases had been reported by the Los Angeles County Health Department. That number was up from a dozen the week before. However, Donovan assured residents the increase in confirmed cases was not alarming. A backlog in testing at one lab accounted for the sudden jump in El Segundo, the fire chief explained. The delay of people tested and awaiting results have cleared.

El Segundo's incident-management team remains in what Donovan calls "response mode" but "we're really thinking about the recovery efforts and how we come back" once Gov. Gavin Newsom and L.A. County health officials signal it's OK to relax the stay-at-home order and the closing of bars, restaurant dining rooms, and schools. Allowing people back on local beaches, in parks and at community events won't happen all at once, Donovan said. "It's not like flipping on a light switch. It will be a staged phased, deliberate, smart approach to how we enter back into our normal activities."

El Segundo is following the lead of state and county officials in keeping restrictions in place to slow the spread of COVID-19 until there is a definite drop in the new cases. The governor's six indicators for loosening the quarantine and closures will be part of the city's phased-in return to how things were before the virus blew up in mid-March.

The City Council on Tuesday also began looking past the current public-health crisis to the next several months when the 2020-21 budget will be built. Going into the current budget year, Finance Director Joseph Lillio listed the possibility of a recession as an unknown event that could put financial pressure on El Segundo. The shutdown of all but essential businesses and a 90 to 95 drop in local hotel occupancy rates will generate fewer tax dollars that El Segundo is counting on to pay salaries and fund day-to-day operations. City Manager Scott Mitnick and his staff will begin compiling early revenue and expense projections later this month - kicking off the annual budget process. The next budget cycle will be different, and last just nine months - the council decided Tuesday.

Starting in July 2021, El Segundo's unusual October-to-June fiscal year will change to conform to a more traditional cycle followed by other California cities and counties. The new fiscal year will begin on July 1 and ending June 30, starting in mid-2021. Finance Director recommended the change and the council unanimously agreed to the change.

The financial impact from the coronavirus emergency on El Segundo's General Fund revenues will become more apparent on May 5 at a mid-year budget presentation to the City Council. The current condition of the city's finances will be discussed at that meeting. The City Council is scheduled in mid-June for a strategic planning session. The public is encouraged to participate as city leaders begin the budget process that was going to be challenging enough before the order came to shutter all non-essential businesses and avoid activities, like flying, business lunches and conferences, that fuel El Segundo's economy. More than 98 percent of El Segundo's general fund comes from commerce.

Mayor Boyles revealed he and other South Bay mayors are in talks, so all beach cities have a coordinated effort to reopen beaches when the order is lifted. "And when we do, we'll come back with the distinct, competitive advantage. So we're working closely on that." The mayor's daily coronavirus updates are posted on the city website. •
