Solid Training Keeps Us Safe

The El Segundo Fire Department continues to train throughout this pandemic while staying safe and responsible. Wildland Fire season is here and all three shifts are brushing up on their hose lays and fire shelter deployments. Photo courtesy El Segundo Fire Department.

City Hears Activists Call for Change

By Rob McCarthy

Members of an El Segundo group associated with Black Lives Matter showed up Tuesday night at City Hall with a message for the council: They want change and aren't going away. Their demand followed a series of peaceful demonstrations and some backlash against Police Chief Bill Whalen for a recent photo taken with student protesters.

The local activists - who are calling themselves El Segundo for Black Lives - specifically asked the City Council for a show of support after holding several peaceful demonstrations. Member John Pickhaver said that a "vocal minority" of residents continue to stick up for the city, insisting that there are no racial problems to fix.

Pickhaver, who is white, was one of five of the group's members to speak Tuesday during public comments. "El Segundo is not fine. A lot needs to be done," he said, pointing to a few offensive comments left on Facebook and other social media.

Another member, Amanda Touchton, who is a parent of two, said "There is no reason this town cannot have more people of color in positions of power," including educators. Touchton stressed the local group, with as many 600 followers on social media, isn't attacking the El Segundo Police Department. Chief Whalen has been professional every step of the way, she said. "This is an opportunity to make our town a better place."

Five speakers and 22 letters later, the El Segundo council agreed it was time to take action. The city will form a commission to advise city leaders on racial sensitivity and to represent black residents, families and students who've recently begun to talk about their experiences. The recruitment drive will begin immediately to seat nine members of the new Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Commission, City Manager Scott Mitnick said.

Mayor Drew Boyles called the city commission "a big step for us" and indicated more action from City Hall is coming. The city's strategic planning document will be amended later this year, the mayor said, so decisions align with this new commitment that El Segundo is working toward more diversity in staffing and decision-making.

Councilman Lance Giroux came to the defense of Chief Whalen, who posed with student protesters on June 3. The chief's actions reportedly bothered some El Segundo officers who feel unfairly accused of the bad behavior that has surfaced in other departments nationwide. Retired ESPD Captain Bob Turnbull wrote a letter critical of Chief Whalen for having his picture taken with student protesters who were holding Black Lives Matter signs. The incident in question happened on June 3.

Turnbull charged the police chief "violated department policy, city code and the code of ethics" by posing in uniform with the young protesters at a political rally. The image of Whalen with sign-carrying Black Lives Matter supporters was shared online. "He (the chief) has lost my trust and the trust of several other police leaders who have come before him to effectively lead the officers of the El Segundo Police Department," wrote Turnbull, who retired from the force in December 2017.

Councilman Giroux, however, considers the chief's response appropriate because he was surrounded by young people who want better relations with police officers who patrol their communities. A great many of the students at the June 3 rally were attending their first political protest, Giroux said, and it was a positive experience for them.

While he understands why police officers might disagree with the chief, the councilman believes the criticism directed at Whalen misses the larger point. "I believe Chief Whalen did the right thing," Giroux said, adding, "what I saw in the photo I didn't think was a political statement." The councilman explained that by showing support for the peaceful protests, El Segundo's police chief modeled the type of behavior the City Council wants to see between the police department and the community.

Short-term rentals were back on the agenda Tuesday with more discussion among the council members about limiting the experiment to single-family homes. Only four members participated because Mayor Pro tem Chris Pimentel recused himself because of a conflict of interest. The decision to regulate the popular guest stays in El Segundo neighborhoods could come at the July 21 meeting.

However, the pandemic could interrupt the planned start for a 15-month trial run to see whether parking and loud guests are going to be a problem. September 1 is a new start date for the short-term rental program; however, that hinges on Los Angeles County allowing

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

My partner and I have been living together for a year now. Some habits they have really do bother me. I find myself saying nothing and "just taking it." Eventually I "get over it" and I'm not angry anymore, but I worry that if I keep "just getting over it" in the long term that this will lead to resentment that will be terrible for our relationship. Is this way of handling things unhealthy?

- Should I be Angrier?

Dear Should I be Angrier,

Think of rain falling on a garden. If the rain doesn't come too quickly, the soil can absorb it without flooding or washing away. If the layer of soil is thick, and if the garden has a robust root system, the land can absorb more rain. If the soil is thin, with little to hold it in place, it will erode easily, washed away by even a soft drizzle.

A garden can be a useful metaphor for relationships. If problems or bad habits are like rain showers, then the questions become, how bad is the storm, and how deep and fertile is the soil of your relationship? Most "healthy" gardens not only handle the occasional rain shower, but they need and expect them in order to grow. If your relationship is otherwise solid and can absorb the problems, then it may just be worth it to grumble to yourself, your friends and your therapist, and then move on. Take a stand when you have to - but not everything is worth fighting over, especially if the soil is thick.

The good news is that as long as it's not illegal or harmful to your physical health, then you get to be the one who defines what is healthy or unhealthy for your relationship. If your relationship can absorb it, then allowing your relationship to do so is probably not "unhealthy." We can all handle different amounts of discomfort. Do you have a sense of how much discomfort you can tolerate and still have the relationship be worth it?

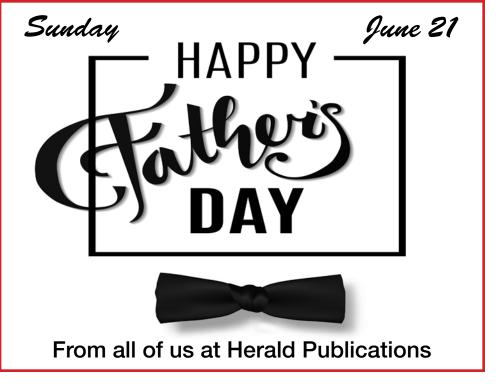

If you live long enough, you will probably have a chance to experience many of the small and large humiliations and inconveniences life brings us. So often when we come into contact with people or entities more powerful than us, we are forced to bite our tongue for fear of bigger consequences that are not worth it.

If - in your mind and in your heart - the relationship is more powerful than you as an individual, then you are both sometimes going to have to give up precious little pieces of yourselves in order to remain in it. You - and only you - have every right to decide if doing so is unhealthy or not.

Dr. Jeanie Nishime Helms the ESUSD School Board During Unprecedented Times

By Duane Plank

When Dr. Jeanie Nishime took over the reins as the new El Segundo Unified School District School Board President late last year, the District was on an upward trajectory. El Segundo voters had passed a $92-million general obligation bond in November of 2018, and that funding was going to be front-andcenter as the ESUSD began accelerating the implementation of its Long-Range-Facilities-

The District was reaping the benefits of the 2016 sale of the surplus Imperial Street School which garnered more than $22 million for District coffers.

Then, the pandemic COVID-19 virus that would decimate and shut-down much of the world was nowhere in sight. Then the killer coronavirus hit America, and the world as we knew it was thrown into tumult.

Classroom education was shut down in mid-March, with educators, students, and parents scrambling to implement distance learning. Nishime said that the District's distance learning program is progressing about as well as expected, noting that the ESUSD had presciently implemented a 1-to-1 iPad initiative at both the high school and middle school as introducing Chromebooks at the elementary level. All this made it easier for the ESUSD to hit the ground running when the mandated shelter in place orders came down from Sacramento. With many teachers, students, parents, and administrators educating on the run, Nishime said the District would be implementing "changes for the fall to address the deficiencies we experienced this spring."

Nishime has been an El Segundo resident since 2007. Her more than 30 years in education, mainly at the community college level, included stints at Fullerton, Riverside and Pasadena city colleges. She also served for ten years as the vice president for student and community advancement at El Camino College.

Nishime, born and raised in Japan, received a bachelor's degree in psychology from Point Loma College in San Diego, Master of Science in counseling from Cal State Long Beach, and Ed. D in institutional management from Pepperdine University.

She said she was encouraged to run for an open seat on the El Segundo school board in 2011 by Dr. Ray Gen, who was on the El Camino school board at the time and is currently the English department chair at El Segundo High School. Nishime did not know what she was signing up for. "I was so naïve," she said but figured that with a lessened commute time with her landing the El Camino job, she had more time to give back to the El Segundo community. Nishime said that her previous jobs involved arduous, timeconsuming commutes. "When I first moved (to El Segundo), it was the first time that I lived and worked in the same com- Dr. Jeanie Nishime munity." Husband Spence Bauer served as her campaign manager, and Nishime became immersed in political campaigning, seeking resident endorsements, knocking on voters' doors, and distributing lawn signs. Six weeks later, she was elected to a four-year term on the ESUSD school board.

The school board has been meeting virtually since mid-March, which, Nishime said, has worked out well, considering the circumstances. She said she has heard "horror stories" from other South Bay school board presidents about tech glitches that have plagued their meetings, but the ESUSD has been able, for the most part, to navigate the technology highway. She said that she misses the "comradeship" of seeing her fellow board members in person, and laments that the final graduation and promotion ceremonies that she will attend as a member of the ESUSD will have to take place in a virtual format.

Nishime said that now more than ever, the District is steadfast in adhering to accomplishing their goals for the upcoming school years. Those goals include ensuring high-quality learning; promoting the social well-being of all students; recruiting and retaining high-quality employees; promoting parental and community engagement; and maintaining fiscal health while focusing on school safety.

> Those goals, Nishime said, "have taken-on new a whole new meeting in light of this pandemic," noting an expected 3-million dollar hit to the District budget for the next school year.

> ESUSD Superintendent Dr. Melissa Moore touts the leadership of Nishime, emailing that Nishime "possessed not only a wealth of educational knowledge and expertise but also her thoughtful consideration in examining the issues. Her intelligence, compassion, and pragmatic approach have contributed to the school district's tremendous success with student achievement and social-emotional well-being of students during her tenure."

Board member Nancy Cobb, who has decided not to seek reelection in the fall, said that she enjoys collaborating with Nishime, calling her a "dedicated professional who brings years of relevant experience to the job. She acts in the best interest of our students. Cares about their academic success, safety, and well-being, and never lost sight of the big picture," Cobb emailed, "including maintaining an excellent staff, communicating with parents, and the larger community, and ensuring the financial well-being of our school district. She listens to all opinions, asks relevant questions, and seeks solutions. Most importantly, for the COVID-19 era, she stays calm in a crisis."

Asked to gaze into her crystal ball and posit on how education will evolve, when the students hopefully return to the classrooms on Aug. 26, Nishime said that she foresees an educational system that will involve a hybrid learning model, including classroom and distance learning, with student and worker safety paramount. "The big disruptor," she said, "will, of course, be the state budget. The budget is brutal...but knowing this District, we will make sure that any cuts are kept as far as possible from the classroom." She said that currently, District administrators are looking at employee attrition as opposed to lay-offs to tighten their financial belts.

Nishime, who has announced that she will not seek reelection to the Board on Nov. 3, is looking forward to "full-retirement" mode. She loves to travel, which she has done extensively in Europe and Asia, fostering a great interest in culture and international education, and looks forward to spending to spend more time with her kids, and hopefully, she said, possible grandkids, as well as focusing on her church activities.

But until her retirement, Nishime will continue to steadily guide the El Segundo school board through these unprecedented times. •

Notice of Availability Draft Environmental Assessment for Proposed Space and Missile Park Los Angeles Air Force Base

The 61st Air Base Group announces the availability of a Draft Environmental Assessment (EA) for the proposed Space and Missile Park at Los Angeles Air Force Base. Implementation of the Proposed Action would include the development of a park functioning as an educational development and ensuring the preservation of important representative artifacts documenting the Space and Missile Systems Center's history. The proposed park would also serve as a gathering place for SMC personnel and visitors to enjoy the outdoors, improving morale and welfare at the base. While several details such as a complete inventory and orientation of static displays are still under development, the conceptual designs for the proposed park call for up to six artifacts displayed in either vertical or horizontal alignment. Each static display - including required concrete foundations - would be engineered individually based on the specific artifact to be installed. Each of the static displays would feature informational plaques and educational signage. There would be two formal entrances to the park - one of which would be compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) – and there would be several seating areas, with shade trees intended to provide inviting areas for congregation.

Pursuant to the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) regulations and in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), this draft EA serves as a concise public document that provides evidence and analysis for determining whether a Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) is appropriate or an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) should be prepared. The draft EA presents the purpose and need for the action, the proposed action and alternatives, a description of the affected environment, and an analysis of environmental consequences. It also documents cumulative impacts from projects which are proposed, under construction, recently completed, or anticipated to be implemented in the near future. No significant environmental impacts have been identified in the raft EA.

The public is invited to review and make comments on the draft EA, which is available at the online at www.losangeles.af.mil. Comments must be received no later than June 30, 2020. The public may submit written comments to the address below:

> Mr. Joshua Jones, 61 CELS Environmental 482 N Aviation Blvd. El Segundo, CA 90245 Email: 61cels.environmental@us.af.mil

Pandemic Spurs Innovation For Small - To Mid-Sized Businesses

(BPT) - As COVID-19 continues to disrupt normal day-to-day operations of small - to mid-sized businesses and nearly half of the U.S. workforce hangs in the balance, employers are taking creative measures to reset their go-to-market strategies and offerings. By changing their operations to meet the demands of their customers, businesses can not only stay relevant but keep their staff employed and thrive in the new economy.

This pandemic offers business owners, investors and solopreneurs the opportunity to take a critical look at their overall business model, offerings and operations and reset the entire business structure, creating new opportunities to serve and prevail. This is the perfect time to explore new legal solutions to the most common business obstacles to help companies preserve and protect their brands and prosper for generations to come. There are great examples of resets happening within many industries.

With the pandemic closing summer camps throughout the country, ACA-accredited Adventure Links, a 23-year-old summer camp in Virginia, has found a way to replace its usual summer adventure camp programs with The CampCloud(TM), an experiential online alternative. The company is now offering its virtual camping programs to individuals and employers to assist employees working from home by keeping their kids engaged, learning and delighted all day from virtually anywhere. The program is being offered to other camps as a customizable, online option for their campers.

Ensuring the health and safety of employers when stay-at-home orders are lifted, and business resumes, is critical. Thanks to a team of entrepreneurs, Disinfect & Shield(TM), an FDA-registered, EPA-approved and ecofriendly disinfectant used in surgical suites for the last decade, is now available to businesses worldwide to kill SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19 and other dangerous organisms. It works by creating a permanent anti-microbial shield, preventing the virus from attaching to surfaces where it has been applied without risk to humans, animals or crops. With Disinfect & Shield(TM), employees, customers and visitors can feel safe knowing that their space has been properly disinfected and treated for optimum health and safety.

Clint Coons, founder of Anderson Business Advisors, offers 5 financing and entity creation tips to help entrepreneurs and small business owners:

• Know how to use loans: CARES Act loans have specific guidelines like having to use at least 60% of the loan within 24 weeks of receipt for payroll expenses. Concerned that money would dry up, many small business

Loving Tells the Story of America's First Inter-racial Married Couple

By Ryan Rojas for cinemacy.com

As seen in a recurring set of events throughout the film Loving, Richard Loving (Joel Edgerton) strives to build a house for his soon-to-be wife, Mildred (Ruth Negga). At first, his brick-laying is fast and sloppy, slapping cement in between bricks at a thoughtless speed. It's not long after Richard and Mildred – an inter-racial couple in 1950s Virginian South – move to Washington D.C., and encounter profound racism against them over their relationship. In building this new house and aware of the hate spewed his wau, own relationship, and whose judgments and opinions they wouldn't care for.

Of course, the real magic in Loving comes from the performances between Joel Edgerton and Ruth Negga, who compliment each other wonderfully as Richard and Mildred Loving With his bleached hair and yellowed teeth, Joel (in a career-best performance), tenderly shapes the character of Richard to be a pure-hearted Southerner, whose puppy-dog innocence doesn't consider that choosing to be with a woman whose skin colors will threaten his life as well. Ruth Negga as Mildred captivates

Loving courtesy Cinemacy.com

Richard now lays the bricks and measures much more concertedly, much more aware and precise of how he must live overall to ensure his and Mildred's safety if they choose to be together, and as a married couple.

Based on the true story of Richard and Mildred Loving, Loving tells the real-life story of America's first interracial married couple, a romance that invited jail time and threatened their civil liberties. As a film, Loving doesn't intend to falsify sentiment, or play to vapid conventions. The quiet yet committed path of love that Richard and Mildred Loving take while their enemies – being the local townspeople, state police department, or Supreme Court – hurl at them, is a road paved with grace and dignity, and serves as a template for how one can live in this day and age.

Writer and director Jeff Nichols crafts this movie to play like a love story unlike most; it's not a sweeping Hollywood romance like The Notebook, and it's not a suspenseful courtroom drama, either. Nichols shows how this pure-hearted love pushes all other struggles to the periphery. It's as if even the film itself is an unwarranted intrusion of their

the screen with her enormous watering eyes and total grace. Every moment of commitment between them – whether whispering night-time love admissions to each other, building a house together, or just the quiet looking into each others eyes, shows how love will always win in the end.

Loving is rated PG-13 for thematic elements. Available to stream on HBO and to rent on Amazon. •

How To Help Older Adults Avoid Fraudsters During The COVID-19 Pandemic

(BPT) - Crises and upheaval have a way of bringing out the best - and, sometimes the worst - in society. That's why, during this month focused on Elder Abuse Awareness and in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, it is important to protect the online information of senior and vulnerable friends and loved ones.

The FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center has seen an increase in online extortion attempts as state governments have issued "stay-at-home" orders in response to the crisis. That comes at a time when The Better Business Bureau says fraudsters are targeting older populations in particular.

"Our elderly population are the wisest and most treasured members of our communities," says DJ Johnson, Charles Schwab's Senior Vice President of Corporate Risk Management. "However, they're at a higher level of risk, not only due to possible physical complications with the virus, but also by being targeted by online scammers who have increased their efforts to defraud this susceptible group. As the senior population is confronted with challenging decisions, whether about visiting stores for groceries or isolating themselves from loved ones, criminals can prey on vulnerability from several fronts."

Scammers have deployed several methods intended to trick individuals into sending money, disclosing personal information or downloading malicious software. At Schwab, teams are trained to pay attention to behavioral cues that might be the result of an attempted scam.

While fraud can come in many forms, here are a few specific schemes that can be more targeted at the senior population:

Emergency scams: Schemers misrepresent themselves as a family member requesting money for care, or requesting supplies to "stay afloat."

Social Security: Scammers pose as someone from the Social Security Administration requesting payment or personal information to prevent benefits from being suspended or reduced.

Investment scams: Fraudsters promote investments in companies that claim to prevent, detect or provide a cure for COVID-19.

So now, more than ever, it's important to See Seniors, page 9 home-sharing again soon. The county's health officer halted short-term overnight stays to contain the coronavirus spread, which has contributed to nearly 3,000 deaths in Los Angeles County.

Only homeowners who live on the premises could register for the home-stay program. This way, they are sharing living space with guests and not renting out whole houses for events and parties, the council agreed. Apartments are a "hard no," everyone agreed. Despite concerns by city staff that enforcement would be more difficult with duplexes, the council on Tuesday made room in the program for duplex owners.

The moneymaking opportunity for homeowners comes with restrictions to protect neighbors from nuisances and hotel-like conditions in the residential zones. This is a home-sharing program for now, so a whole house cannot be turned over to visitors. Only two guests per room will be permitted, and a homeowner must be present during a guest stay. To participate, an owner must sign up, agree to pay permit fees, and follow the regulations governing noise and guests' behavior.

The booking sites are responsible for collecting bed tax and paying it to the city. Booking sites, including Airbnb and VRBO, will be asked to de-list El Segundo homes that aren't enrolled in the program. The city expects the site to deliver a quarterly report, which code-enforcement officers and the finance department will use to catch any cheaters.

Supporters, including Elaine Hopkins, who wrote a letter urging the council to create the pilot program, say that home-stays provide seniors with income to remain in their homes. Hopkins added that it could help local businesses, too.

It's estimated that 30 to 50 home-stay hosts would join the 15-month program. The fees and bed taxes are expected to cover the costs of running the pilot, according to Sam Lee, the planning and building safety director. The city's primary costs are a consultant to monitor the rental activity and complaints, and some overtime for code-enforcement on weekends, he explained.

The countdown toward the long-awaited remodel of the Plunge officially begins this week. El Segundo had decided to award the Methun architectural firm a $130,000 contract to create a modern design for the art-deco swim stadium. Named for former U.S. Olympic water polo coach Urho Saari, the Plunge was built in the 1940s and is need of major mechanical and structural repairs to the pool, according to the design firm.

The city has budgeted $5 million to remodel and find new uses for the site's two pools, lobby, stadium seating and locker rooms. With the completion of the Wiseburn pool, the city promised to explore new uses for the Plunge beyond water polo and competitive swimming. The Methun team will collect feedback from the community, which will be incorporated into the redesign, according to its proposal.

"It's been a dream of a lot of community members, and we're closer and closer, which is exciting," said Meredith Petit, the city's Parks and Recreation director. The Methun design group has a 40-year history in Los Angeles County, refurbishing the historic Robert Frost Auditorium in Culver City and the Egyptian Theater in Hollywood. The team is experienced at modernizing pool and recreational venues, according to its winning proposal for the design and communityengagement work ahead. The renovation and remodel is expected to be completed within 18 to 24 months.

Petit also announced that the city's pools would reopen by July 1. They've been closed, along with playgrounds and sports leagues, due to the COVID-19 orders from the state and county. Recreation staff expects when the skate park is allowed to reopen, socialdistancing requirements will limit the number of skaters to six at a time, Petit said.

It's possible that AYSO soccer will be allowed to take the field this fall, she added. Spring sports leagues are holding out hope for a modified, shortened season beginning in July. However, it depends on the county, which shut down contact sports and those involving shared equipment, including baseball, basketball, and volleyball.

And finally, El Segundo, as of this week, had recorded 39 positive cases with no known deaths. Fire Chief Chris Donovan said Tuesday that 1,147 El Segundo residents have tested, with 3.3 percent having the virus. The countywide rate for positive tests is running at 8 percent, the fire chief said. • owners applied with no way of utilizing them because their business cannot reopen under the strict guidelines imposed on the industry.

- · Alternate cash sources: Borrow from a 401(k) or IRA to keep businesses afloat, as it does not need to be paid back for at least 3-6 years. However, pulling money out of a retirement plan comes with some risk, such as if the business does not see profitability, then retirement funds were wasted on a failed business venture.
- Beware of increasing liabilities: Because insurance will not cover claims brought under COVID, reopening comes with risk and business owners are wondering how they will operate under strict COVID-19 related guidelines and still make a profit. Now is the time to pivot and reset.
- · Consider restructuring: Set up your business in the right entity and state. Mistakes in formation or taxation can have a lasting negative impact on business growth and viability. Before starting a new business, consider the best structure for asset protection and tax minimization. For example, a limited liability company (LLC) gives business owners time to operate at a loss for the first few months and write off the loss on their individual 1040 forms against other forms of income. There are different entity funding options with protection ramifications.

 Utilize Privacy Shield Protection by creating anonymity with trusts.

COVID-19 has shown that many businesses aren't prepared for worst-case scenarios and make common mistakes that can affect their ability to grow and borrow money. If approached strategically, small- to medium-sized businesses can take this time to implement changes and help their operations succeed and thrive. • stay informed in order to detect signs of fraud. Added isolation can increase vulnerability to falling victim to a scam.

- · Consult with family members and friends prior to acting on a request for funds.
- · Assign a trusted contact.
- The Social Security Administration is not suspending benefits and will never request payment to receive them.
- Perform extra due diligence when making investment choices. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

People are turning to the internet for upto-date information about COVID-19 and to purchase goods that either cannot be found in stores or as an alternative to shopping in person.

To take advantage of this, fraudsters set up websites to offer goods or services, such as protective gear (gloves and face masks), cleaning products, vaccines, testing kits and home delivery services. They then use these sites to collect payment and personal information with no intention of delivering the goods and services. This data is used by the fraudsters, or sold to other criminals on the dark web.

- · Visit the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), or coronavirus.gov, or contact your physician for information regarding COVID-19.
- · Avoid visiting pages offering cures or vaccines.
- Go directly to websites by entering a trusted URL address into your browser.
- Avoid using phone numbers for companies found through general web searches.
- Read site reviews regarding product delivery and purchases. The reviews may indicate if a site is selling counterfeit products.

Phishing is the fraudulent practice of sending emails or texts purporting to be from reputable sources to persuade individuals to reveal personal information, such as login credentials.

- Be suspicious of any email or text that requests your personal information.
- Hover over links to check validity, or visit websites directly by entering a known URL address into your internet browser before logging in or accessing material.
- Help ensure a website is secure before entering personal information.
- · Do not click or download suspicious or unknown attachments, and be wary of attachments even from people you know.

Impersonation fraud schemes are used by impostors to obtain personal information and request fraudulent payments. The scam may begin with a phone call, email, computer popups, text or other communication. Fraudsters are employing pandemic-related robocalls, claiming to be associated with charities, insurance companies or businesses offering products or cures. Some calls even offer cleaning services for your home. Impostors may pretend to be government officials and try to capitalize on the extended tax-filing date and proposed economic-stimulus checks.

- Avoid answering calls from unknown numbers.
- Hang up if you do answer a call that's unusual. Don't press any buttons because this could lead to more calls.
- Don't supply personal, account or payment information, especially if you feel you're being pressured.
- Never send money in response to a robocall or social media message.

Swanson® Broth does double duty in this recipe. It replaces the oil for a light take on a fresh summer pesto and it gives the farro a boost of flavor while it simmers. Make the pesto ahead of time and toss with farro and veggies just before serving.

Zucchini Farro Salad with Homemade Pesto

Provided by Brandpoint

Prep Time 25 Minutes • Total Time 1 Hour 30 Minutes Serves 6 People

Ingredients

- 2 1/3 cups Swanson® Chicken Broth
- 1 cup packed fresh basil leaves
- 1/2 cup packed fresh parsley leaves
- 1/4 cup pine nuts, toasted
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon zest1 cup uncooked farro
- 1 small zucchini (about 6 ounces), chopped
- (about 1 cup)1 cup fresh whole kernel corn
- 1/2 cup chopped red onion
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice1/2 teaspoon salt

Directions

- Step 1: Add 1/3 cup broth, the basil, parsley, pine nuts, cheese and lemon zest in a blender. Cover and blend until the mixture is smooth.
- Step 2: Heat the farro and remaining broth in a 2 1/2-quart saucepan and heat over high heat to a boil. Reduce the heat to low. Cover and cook for 30 minutes or until the farro is tender and the broth is absorbed. Remove the farro to a large bowl and let cool for 30 minutes.
- Step 3: Add the zucchini, corn and onion to the farro. Add the broth mixture, lemon juice and salt and toss to coat. Sprinkle with additional thinly sliced fresh basil, if desired.

Recipe Tips

For a nut-free version, omit the pine nuts.

Purrrfect Companions

Phoenix

With "kitten season" upon us, there is an urgent need for foster parents. Whether you care for one or many, once or frequently, Kitten Rescue would love for you to become a foster parent. They offer training, guidance, medical care (if needed) and lots of moral support. Fostering brings you the rich reward of knowing you personally saved this kitty's life in providing a safe, loving home while waiting for adoption. Interested?.....please email them at foster@kittenrescue.org for more information.

If just 2% of the pet-owning households in America fostered one pet a year, we could stop euthanizing healthy pets in shelters.

Here are a few of the precious cats and kittens waiting for their fur-ever homes.

This handsome devil is Phoenix. He is a six-year old, stunning smoke tabby with the personality of a Bengal. He is smart and inquisitive and will hop in the shower with you. Phoenix is looking for a cat-experienced guardian who appreciates a cat with a strong personality. He is very affectionate but can also be quite opinionated. If you would like an intense but loving cat and are willing to listen when he declares his feelings, then Phoenix could be your soulmate.

Tippy Tail was rescued from the city shelter with his sibling Roy as bottle babies. Tippy Tail is a hefty kitty, pushing 12 pounds but has no idea he has that much weight to throw around. A clumsy goofball, he tends to fling himself on top of his brother or romp around the house with one of the resident cats. He loves to chirp and chatter with you when he wants attention. Tippy Tail needs a feline buddy in his home and would love to be adopted with his brother Roy.

Roy is incredibly affectionate and loving, always sleeping on the bed or climbing on top of other kitties. He will start to drool when he's nuzzling his face into another cat and kneading his paws. Roy loves to squeeze himself between kitties, always wanting to be the center of attention. He loves to roll around on his back and will follow you to every room. He's very easy going and likes to chat with you when he wants attention. At nearly 12 pounds, Roy is a big, lanky boy!

Roy and Tippy Tail both love other cats and must have a feline buddy in their homes. They really adore one another and would love being adopted together - they are a purr-fect pair, the ultimate dynamic duo! Tippy Tail and Roy have sensitive stomachs and cannot have kibble; they are on a wet only, poultry-based pate style Friskies. Other foods upset their systems and they must remain either on this Friskies wet only diet or a raw cat food diet. Adopted as a pair or individually, Tippy Tail and Roy cannot wait to find their forever families!

Bear is an amazing grey kitty with soft green eyes. He loves love to explore and romp and play with other kitties. Bear likes people and can't wait to have one of his own! Being raised with his brother and sisters, Bear would also enjoy having a kitty pal in his new family. He is waiting to come home with you and be your best new buddy.

Chance is a sweet little orange tabby. He was found wet, cold, and hungry on a rainy day in a cardboard box. Chance loves to chase wand toys, balls, the laser light, climb everything and zoom through his tunnels. He will run to greet you when you walk into a room and make the cutest little coos when he sleeps. Chance loves to curl up with you at bedtime and wake you up with kisses. He's a very active and rambunctious kitten who would love to liven up your home with playful antics. He is a bonded pair with his sister and best friend, Sassy.

Sassy is a stunning little calico girl. She's loves to curl into your arms or against your face for some nuzzles and kisses. When Sassy is not purring at your side, she loves to wrestle with her brother and chase balls and anything she can bat around. Sassy is a great climber and loves to find new adventures and places to explore. She also adores dogs and other cats. Bonded with her best friend and brother, Chance, together they are waiting to become a part of your family.

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. Temporarily, adoption events are suspended. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

With our city and state shut down, we are faced with the delicate balance to protect our fellow humans from the spread of COVID-19, while continuing our mission of saving the most vulnerable victims of the homeless cat crisis. We know that these are hard times for everyone. If you can give a little, it will go a long way. They are still counting on us during these difficult times. Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Blvd. #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

If you remember Tricia Helfer from the TV series Battlestar Galactica, she has a special message for you on the Kitten Rescue Facebook page about "Giving Tuesday".

Saving one animal won't change the world, but the world will surely change for that animal. •
