Etch and Catch Was a Big Success

The Community Engagement Division of the El Segundo Police Department facilitated Operation Etch and Catch over the weekend. This quick in-n-out event ensured that your vehicle's license plate number was permanently engraved on your catalytic converter by mechanics to discourage thieves from targeting you. If criminals make the mistake of stealing your engraved converter, the engraving will help police investigate and catch them. There was an overwhelming response and over 90 cars were etched. ## Venerable St. Anthony Elementary School Shuttters Classroom Doors

By Duane Plank

As you drove East on Grand Avenue six weeks or so ago, or took your daily lockdown walk, past the corner of Lomita and Grand streets in El Segundo, you may have noticed blue banners hanging on the chain-link fence surrounding St. Anthony Catholic Church and school promoting the 2020/21 elementary school year, hoping for a resumption of classroom normalcy as students, educators, administrators, and parents yearned for a return to the actual classroom for the 20/21 school year.

Well, never mind. Because after more than a 60-year existence, St. Anthony Elementary School has closed its classroom doors, a victim of perceived economic realities amongst the worsening of the COVID-19 pandemic. The banners promoting the ramp-up to the 2020/21 elementary school year have disappeared, with the only cloth advertisements still adorning the chain-link fences promoting the resumption of the St. Anthony Pre-school for the youngest learners.

In a letter to the community dated June 19 announcing the school closure and posted on the parish website, pastor Father Robert Victoria wrote that "the school continues to need an average of $200,000 a year from outside sources independent of tuition to remain open." He said that parish recognized the shortfall in 2016, "but we all chose to fight for our school." He wrote that the "coronavirus pandemic has further undermined the financial ability of the parish to fulfill (its) pledge. All other resources are depleted."

Father Robert wrote that "this decision is not an easy one. It was made after careful discernment and after continued efforts to improve the sustainability of the school over many years. We remain hopeful that this is not a permanent state of our school, but the time has come to step back and reassess the viability of the school in this community."

Multiple messages left with the parish for Father Robert to discuss the closure were not returned by the time this story was filed.

Jill Deranian, principal at St. Anthony since June 1 of 2018, said that the closing came out of the blue. "As a school," she said, "we were not prepared to be closed. We had tours happening; we had a videographer, had just re-done two rooms, we had enrollment happening."

Deranian, who had taught at the school 17 years ago when the enrollment was 350 students, said that while current enrollment was at seventy, at one-point enrollment had dwindled to just 30. She and her staff, in concert with St. Anthony's parents, were making strides to boost enrollment at the school, which had yearly tuition of $4,400 for the first student.

"When I took the job on," she said, "we knew there was a deficit, a huge deficit for the last six years." In January or December, she said, Father Robert made a plea to the parish, asking for funding to keep the school open for the next two years.

The abrupt closure of the school sent the seventy students and their families scrambling to find new schools during a pandemic, and jettisoned nine St. Anthony school employees, who also lost their health care, Deranian said.

Georgiana Curcio was the principal at St. Anthony from 2008 to 2015. She emailed that her family has had a several decade relationship with St. Anthony, with her husband

ESUSD School Board Virtual Town Hall Addresses 20/21 School Year

By Duane Plank

Most of the lawn signs congratulating El Segundo Unified School District 2020 graduates or students being promoted to the next step in their educational journey appear to have been jettisoned to the garage.

But did you know the next school year, arguably the most challenging in ESUSD history, will commence in less than a month, on August 26? With most everything in this country in a state of flux, school administrators were hoping for some semblance of normalcy when the new school year started—no such luck. California Gov. Gavin Newsom has decreed that schooling in the Golden State will be virtual, distance learning, for the foreseeable future.

School districts were forced, out of "an abundance of caution," to implement distance learning in mid-March when classroom doors were shuttered. Depending on who you speak with in differing school districts, the distance learning protocol was effective. Or needed some tweaking.

Monday night's virtual town hall meeting, moderated by Dr. Jack Plotkin, who served as the El Segundo Middle School principal before ascending to his new position as Director of Innovation and Student Support, attempted to answer

Short-Term Rentals

Three things regarding your article on “Short-Term Rentals” July 23, 2020, I question. The article states “hosts must occupy a home, duplex or condominium” and elsewhere states “the owner must live on the premises”, two descriptions of occupancy. The description of occupancy “owner must live on the premises” could mean living in a garage and renting out the house as stated at a council meeting and “hosts must occupy a home, duplex or condominium” should in all manner of clarity stipulate hosts must occupy the same house, duplex or condominium they are renting, not a home, duplex or condominium they are renting, emphasis on same. Second question, all places that have nightly rentals such as hotels, motels, inns, etc. provide parking. The article does not mention where these renters are to park their cars; and how conscientiously will these out-of-towners be in moving their cars on street sweeping day. Thirdly, I do not appreciate an influx of strangers in my neighborhood as we neighbors watch out for one another. An influx of strangers puts a kink in the city’s Neighborhood Watch programs.

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

My partner and I are breaking up. Over the past two years, too much resentment has built up. We love each other (or loved - I’m honestly not sure about that anymore either), but we both said some things that neither one of us can get over, and it’s clear that we will both be happier apart. There is a lot to untangle. We live together and we have a lot of shared bills and accounts. One or both of us will move out in the next month or so - as soon as possible. All that we seem to agree on is that we don’t want to be together anymore, and it feels like everything we do or say turns into a fight. Do you have any advice for how to handle this situation?

– Breaking Up is Hard, Playa del Rey

Dear Breaking Up is Hard,

I’m sorry that your relationship has ended. I do think that there are some things you can do to make your lives a little bit better during a difficult time.

First, be kind to each other, even when you do not want to be. For any number of reasons, many of us secretly, or not so secretly, want to “win” the breakup. Sometimes we want to make sure we register every resentment and take back every compromise we made for the sake of the relationship. Why? Well, it feels good at the time.

Some people think they have to “blow off steam” or “let anger out” and use this as an excuse for bad behavior. But what happens if you don’t do this? What happens if you don’t say everything you want to, even if the other person deserves it? Heads do not actually explode. If we can manage to choose restraint and kindness, sometimes the intensity actually diminishes. Rarely do we say, “I wish like to say, “Thank you to this amazing community.” The support we have received since the COVID-19 pandemic began and support we are still receiving from this community has been more than we could have envisioned. From the generous financial donations, to the offers of hands-on assistance in the pantry, to the weekly donations of non-perishables, hygiene and cleaning products stocking our pantry shelves, to the donations of fresh fruits and vegetables from your gardens, to the gasoline gift cards for each client, we must say C.A.S.E. has been generously cared for during this time. Our clients and/or families are so appreciative of all we have been able to offer on pantry days over these past several months and it is mainly due to this community coming together to support ‘El Segundo Families in Need’. From individuals, to families, to corporations and organizations, to churches and small business, you have all stepped up to assist our C.A.S.E. families and we sincerely appreciate the love and support that has been shown to our organization and those families we assist. Without this generous and continuing support we would be able to offer the same level of assistance to our families.

– Thank you so much, C.A.S.E. volunteers and our C.A.S.E. families •

I had been harder on my ex when we broke up.” Resentment may even fade to a point where you can both look back fondly on the relationship someday - after all, something brought you together in the first place.

So don’t try to win the breakup.

Second - bear with me here - sometimes we don’t actually think the things we think we think, but we say those things anyway. Everyone’s mind goes to unpleasant places sometimes - and unfortunately occasionally we open our mouths at those times. But just because a thought, a suspicion or an idea occurs to us and then escapes our lips does not mean that we actually choose to subscribe to it when we are at our best.

That doesn’t mean anyone should get a pass for abusive or demeaning language - but that is a different subject from this one. Instead, if you ask yourself, “have I always been fair and judicious in the things I’ve said to my partner?” and the answer is no (hint: that’s most of us), then perhaps even after a breakup it is never too late to start asking yourself, “how would I react if I were at my best? How can I behave at this moment in a way that I will be proud of years from now?” You may not have control of your partner’s behavior, but you’ll walk away with your head held high.

Circumstances Reshape the Council’s Priorities

By Rob McCarthy

Uncertainty about when the local economy and schools will reopen looms large as El Segundo city leaders start setting their priorities for the next year. The City Council began the process last week as it prepares to deal with the fallout from the ongoing COVID-19 health emergency.

Social-distancing requirements are keeping friends, neighbors and families apart. Youth sports are on hiatus, and school campuses will remain closed when the fall semester begins in three weeks. Councilman Scot Nicol said he’s concerned residents are starting to feel disconnected after five months of restricted activities.

He proposed a new initiative for 2020-21 to restore a sense of community and togetherness in El Segundo. Nicol doesn’t want to wait until the pandemic ends. He’s concerned about the long-term effects of months of home isolation, without public events or everyday routines. Life hasn’t been the same since mid-March, and that was before protests and demonstrations began over race and policing issues.

“I was thinking how different life is now, and how different it is going to be coming out of this,” Nichol said, during the goal-setting session. “And I think there should be something in our priorities for the coming year to bring our community back together.”

The council members considered whether to keep, change or add to the five core goals set two years ago. A new goal made at the top of this year’s list is diversity and inclusion. In addition to strategic-plan goals, the council sets priorities for the city manager and department heads. According to the city manager, 63 activities tasked last year to city departments, 41 were completed, and 19 are ongoing.

Nicol said the COVID-19 shutdown caused him to wonder what will El Segundo be like when the community finally can reopen. What lasting effects will be there after the period of isolation without celebrations and community events like the Fourth of July fireworks and homecoming at the high school?

Councilwoman Carol Pirsztuk also mentioned the growing division between groups in El Segundo over race and policing issues. The school district’s two learning options proposed for 2020-21 could be a wedge issue between families over whether it’s safe to send children back to school. Though no votes were taken, she sounded favorable to Nicol’s suggestion that community-building be a new priority in the next fiscal year.

Once schools are cleared to reopen and allow students back on campus, El Segundo schools will offer two days of in-class instruction and three days of distance learning. Or students can take all of their classes online, district leaders decided right before Gov. Gavin Newsom’s latest orders that closed restaurants, salons and gyms again because of the sudden spike in COVID-19 cases state- and countywide.

Council members and City Manager Scott Mitnick placed diversity, equity and inclusion at the top of the five-item list, known as strategic plan goals. El Segundo city government uses the list to guide decisions and to measure annual performance. Diversity and inclusion will move into the No. 1 spot, along with enhancing customer service, engaging and communicating with stakeholders.

Before the July 22 goal-review session, the council approved creating a citizen advisory committee on diversity and inclusion, which could begin work sometime in September.

questions from parents and community members about how ESUSD educational services will look this school year.

The District received more than 450 queries from interested stakeholders, and Superintendent Dr. Melissa Moore noted that around 800 people had tapped-in to the 100+ plus minute meeting that was hosted on the Cisco-WebEx platform. School board president Dr. Jeanie Nishime participated in the gathering, as did school board vice-president Tracey Miller-Zarnecke, and multiple ESUSD administrators.

Scenarios for restarting the school year were discussed, but the reality of this time is that everything that will occur in the District is still evolving.

The District had drafted a hybrid learning option, in which in-class teaching would occur two days a week, but Newsom recently kyboshed that plan. So that left ESUSD administrators and staff scrambling to strengthen their distance-learning program that was rolled-out in mid-March. Administrators were confident, they said on Monday night's Webcast, that the distance learning program, however long it need be implemented, would be successful.

One of the main points stressed by District participants was that parents need to decide by 11:59 p.m. on July 30 whether their children will participate in a fully distance-learning program for the first school semester, or whether they will opt for the hybrid option if/when students are allowed to return to the classrooms. No turning back, they said. Once a decision is made, it will be in place for the full first semester.

ESUSD parents have been emailed a Goggle doc in which they can sign-up for full distance learning. They do not need to respond if they select the hybrid option.

Said Moore: "The real issue, as a parent, is if you feel comfortable with your child returning to in-person instruction."

As the participants answered parent inquiries, it was revealed by Moore that, although all plans are still tentative, that the CIF has set a start date to resume high school sports, including football and volleyball in December, with a spring sports season commencing in late February or early March, featuring baseball, softball, basketball, and soccer.

Kim Linz, the ESUSD's Chief Business Official, informed those viewing virtually that the Food Service Department would restart meal service for students on August 26, using a Grab and Go model. Students eligible for the Free and Reduced Lunch Program will receive breakfast and lunch daily at no charge. Other students will be able to purchase meals. Information and a schedule will be forthcoming from the District.

Miller-Zarnecke, the school board vice president, emailed some of her thoughts that she would share with the viewers: "During these pandemic times, I feel like we are all navigating a constantly shifting geography where scientific and data-based analyses continue to chart us on a previously uncharted path. But while ever-evolving information can seem overwhelming and unsettling at times, I am grateful as a Board Member that we have an engaged and caring team of teachers, administration, and district personnel who are extremely capable of working with many moving parts and preferences and priorities on many levels. I am pleased that planning what the Fall reopening of ESUSD schools will look like has been a truly collaborative effort involving all levels of staff as well as board members, parents and students. I am especially appreciative of all our school families who stay up-to-date on the latest State and County mandates to understand this is the reality in which our way to "do school" must continue to evolve to continue to exist. Finding the right balance among academic standards, educational goals, social/emotional well-being, and public health/safety has never been more complicated than it is at this moment. Still, I continue to read everything I can, listen to everyone involved, rely on my institutional knowledge and experience in ESUSD, and use rational thinking to make the best choices I can as a Board Member in service to our community."

Director of Operations Ali Rabiei added his thoughts via email prior to the meeting. "These are, without a doubt, unique, challenging, and uncertain times for schools. Even though the latest direction from Governor Newsom has extended the physical closure of schools to students, we are still moving forward in preparing our schools for reopening in a hybrid when conditions permit, once Los Angeles County is removed from the state's monitoring list. This situation is two-fold," he added, "the instructional plan for students and the health and safety of all. ESUSD staff has worked hard this summer and will continue to do so to have this all covered. We are prepared for both a virtual opening this Fall and the eventual physical reopening, coupled with a hybrid/distance learning approach."

Dr. Dylan Farris, district Executive Director of Human Resources and Marisa Janicek, Assistant Superintendent, also fielded questions on Monday evening. Farris gave updates dealing with the possibility of cameras in the classroom, as well as staffing protocols, and the validity of, once the students return to the campuses, holding outdoor instructional sessions.

Janicek noted that, with the start-up being fully distance learning, all minimum school day requirements would be met, with the teachers taking roll each day and consistently interacting virtually with the students to "set them up for success" for the school year. "It is going to be amazing," she said. "Our teachers have worked so hard," she said, developing effective strategies to foster student engagement.

In her wrap-up remarks, Moore said that she understood parents' frustration as the new school year looms, citing the one-of-a-kind disruption in education. She vowed that the ESUSD would open successfully on August 26 with the distance-learning protocols in place, saying that "we can't wait to have our students back with us."

"The pandemic has tremendously disrupted public education," Moore emailed after the town hall. "What once was a somewhat predictable and comfortable system is turned upside down. This disruption is felt by our students first and foremost, our employees and our parents. In ESUSD, we are diligently striving to offer a high-quality distance learning and hybrid instructional model. We look forward to returning to classrooms when deemed safe to do so."

The video of the town hall has been posted on the ESUSD website. The next ESUSD school board meeting will take place virtually on Tuesday, August 4. •

Dave Franco's The Rental Will Make You Rethink Booking Your Next Airbnb

By Morgan Rojas for cinemacy.com

Dave Franco wants you to rethink your summer vacation plans. Or at least, prepare you for the worst: your rental is not as safe as you think it is. In his impressive directorial debut, The Rental, Franco and his co-writer Joe Swanberg have not so subtly planted the seed that privacy is not guaranteed. Using classic horror tropes to tell a modern story, this unsettling thriller is a paranoid traveler's nightmare gave me the chills, although I initially felt unsatisfied with some of the film's ambiguity. It seemed like an easy way out of an otherwise well-executed and sticky plot. But as the credits rolled, something clicked. Ambiguity and anonymity are just as much of a threat -if not more so- than an "obvious" villain. Feeling on-edge without the ability to grasp hold of something tangible is an awful feeling, as seen in the mental unraveling of the protagonists.

and perhaps a much needed cautionary tale that we should all be double-checking our next Airbnb for cameras and wire-taps.

What was supposed to be a celebratory weekend getaway to the Oregon coast turns into the trip from hell when two couples make a sinister discovery in their house rental. A couple of red flags appear when married couple Charlie (Dan Stevens) and Michelle (Alison Brie), Charlie's brother Josh (Jeremy Allen White), and Josh's girlfriend Mina (Sheila Vand) first arrive at the house but things just seem odd rather than illegal. Charlie and Mina also have a business relationship that, not surprisingly, has led to some sexual tension and predictable mishaps. Their one-time indiscretion risks getting exposed when Mina discovers a camera in the house, threatening their secret and ruining the lives of their partner's and themselves. Unfortunately for them, this discovery is just the tip of the iceberg, as the "oh shoot" moments grow bigger, more invasive, and even deadly.

A fantastic ensemble cast and a clever script

The psychological effects from The Rental will fall outlast the instant gratification of shock and awe horror films, making Franco's first foray into the director's chair a success.

Distributed by IFC Films, The Rental is available on VOD and over 250 drive-ins and theaters. •

Council's Priorities

The other four guiding principles for the current council are:

- Support community safety and preparedness, including preparing a report about the city's COVID-19 and response to civil unrest in the county;
- Develop El Segundo as a choice employer and workforce.
- Develop and maintain quality infrastructure and technology;
- Champion economic development and fiscal stability.

Back-to-back public emergencies for COVID-19 and civil unrest have tested the city's incident response team and the employees, City Manager Mitnick, told the council. After the COVID-19 emergency is over and life begins to return to normal, El Segundo will do a full evaluation of how it responded to these "once-in-a-lifetime events" for any city, according to Mitnick.

"Usually, emergencies last a day, a few days or weeks. Not five, seven or nine months," Mitnick said.

The fallout from the COVID-19 shutdown includes loss of local jobs, closures of businesses, and a need for El Segundo to tighten its belt in the next budget cycle, it was revealed. Despite losing $10 million in anticipated revenues since mid-March, El Segundo's economy started to rebound before Gov. Gavin Newsom halted the reopening of the Los Angeles County economy. Revenues picked up by almost $1 million in a single month before the governor abruptly ordered restaurant dining rooms, gyms and nail salons to close again. They have since been allowed to reopen outdoors only.

On Aug. 5, the City Council will hold a budget study session open to the public. With next year's priorities set, the five members have tough decisions about funding city services, staffing levels, recreation programs and capital improvement projects, including the Teen Center. The city manager said he's "still cautiously optimistic" about a rebound in 2021 and believes El Segundo will come out of the pandemic slowdown in better shape than many of its neighbors.

Finance Director Joe Lillio previewed the challenges the council must address to draft a spending plan for the 2020-21 fiscal year. (The next fiscal year will last nine months and the 2021-22 fiscal year will begin three months earlier, on July 1.) Lillio anticipates El Segundo's expenditures could exceed the revenues and collected taxes by $1.5 million, though it's possible the economy could rebound and make up the difference.

Commercial-development projects, including a new business campus at the former Boeing site along Pacific Coast Highway, are moving in the plan-approval stages. This signals that El Segundo remains an attractive city for companies looking to relocate or expand their operations. Mayor Drew Boyles wants El Segundo ready to promote the advantages of doing business in the city once the brakes come off the economy. The city's main competitors will be Playa del Rey and Culver City, he said. The City Council recently approved a rebate program that refunds the cost of an annual business license if a company decides to leave the city within one year. •

Fred attending the school beginning in 1965. The Curcio’s also sent their two sons to the parochial school.

Father Robert began his tenure at St. Anthony in 2007. Curcio wrote that in 2008, the school reached what she termed “an-all-time-low,” due to dwindling enrollment, possibly facing imminent closure. Curcio was hired as the principal, and she said, started working with “the dedicated and talented group of teachers and staff, along with an actively engaged group of parents.” She said that the stakeholder’s efforts to keep the school open at that time were “highly impressive and very commendable.”

She said that what once began as “an amicable and promising relationship between the school and the pastor had disappointingly deteriorated.” She termed Father Roberts’s “attitude, actions and communication” at that time as “openly aggressive and shockingly unpriestly.”

After Curcio left the school, she said that the school had a revolving door of principals, culminating with Derosian’s selection in June of 2018.

So, where will the displaced students land? El Segundo Unified School District Superintendent Dr. Melissa Moore emailed that “I am sorry to hear about St. Anthony’s School closure. ESUSD has an established board policy and administrative regulation on permits that we are required to follow. It is based upon students meeting a minimum set of criteria to be eligible and where space is available. I encourage the families who are interested in ESUSD to apply for permits as soon as possible.”

El Segundo Mayor Drew Boyles wrote that “It’s unfortunate that such a storied part of our community, one that has educated decades of our children, is being closed. We wish the best for the faculty, staff and families of St. Anthony School.”

Cristina Maxwell had a Kindergartner attending St. Anthony this past school year. She said she knew that the school had ongoing financial issues but was not prepared for the seemingly abrupt closure. She said she appreciated sending her child to a smaller school, with a “hands-on environment,” also touting the “moral foundation” of Catholic education. She said her first first-grader would likely be attending Center Street Elementary later this year.

Maxwell’s parting comments regarding Father Robert: “He is absolutely a coward.” She noted that we live in a time, she said, that people are starting to realize that those in power are being scrutinized for the decisions that they make that affect others. “It is time to call these people out,” she said.

One of Frank Foray’s children wrapped up fourth grade this year at St. Anthony, with another child in the pre-school. He said he is looking into finding another parochial school for the upcoming school year. The Westchester resident said he was also blind-sided by the closure. He said he knew the school had ongoing economic concerns, but that school administrators and parents had been working diligently to bridge the financial gap. He offered his opinion that the parish did not do enough promotion to build enrollment “in the surrounding areas,” adding that “it is not an enviable (time) to try and find a new home for the kids.”

Nora Cisneros, a professor at Cal State Los Angeles, had two children affected by the school shutdown. She said that her family would miss the El Segundo “tight-knit community” and the rigor of a parochial education that a small school like St. Anthony can offer. She lamented a perceived void in communication and leadership with the parish that ultimately led to the school closing, and the short amount of time available to find a new school site. “Definitely a surprise,” she said, of the closure.

Adrienne Rodriguez served as the PTO President at St. Anthony for the past two years. A Hawthorne resident, she said that she is looking to place her daughter, Virginia, who has attended St. Anthony for eight years in a Torrance parochial school. Of her daughter’s experience at St. Anthony, she said that “The education was awesome,” touting the efficacy of St. Anthony distance learning. She said that when word spread about the closing, “kids were crying. They want to go back to school and their friends. She said she believes Father Robert used the COVID-19 pandemic as an excuse to shutter the doors. She, like other parents interviewed for this story, felt let-down by parish leadership. “I feel Father Robert has wanted to close-down the school for six years,” and that he used the fallout from the COVID-19 pandemic as an excuse to shut the doors. “100 percent,” she said.

Linda Williams, who lives in Gardena, saw her daughter finish second grade at St. Anthony earlier this year. She, too, was blind-sided by the decision to close the school, which left her scrambling to secure a third-grade site for the 2020/21 school year; however, it will unfold for her daughter. When I spoke to her, she was confident that her child would be able to enroll in one of the ESUSD elementary schools.

Williams said when she received news of the closure, she experienced a gamut of emotions, including feeling “shocked, devastated, upset, angry, sad.” She saw Father Robert as “very detached, and unempathetic” towards the consequences that the displaced students and families would have to deal with.

Although Curcio said that she was “extremely disappointed and heartbroken,” about the closure, she was not shocked. “As I voice my brutally honest opinion, which I know many share, I realize that some people may be offended. My intention was not to hurt anyone, but rather to inspire change in an antiquated system. For the most part, I try to focus on positive memories of working with those who, together in faith, made St. Anthony, great.”•
