CPA Larry Mitchell Has Found His Home in El Segundo

By Duane Plank

When Kris Cindrich first met El Segundo CPA Larry Mitchell during their college years, Cindrich said that Mitchell did not look like a guy who would excel in the accounting field and later pilot his CPA firm.

It seems that Mitchell and Cindrich were assigned to a workgroup in one of their college classes. Mitchell, said Cindrich, “had long, blonde hair, a bandana, and looked like one of the 80’s bands metalhead guys. Look at this guy,” he thought when they first met. The workgroup consisted of five members, and once Cindrich found out he would have to collaborate with Mitchell, he remembers thinking, “not this guy, anybody but this guy, but as it turned out, he was great.”

Cindrich, who is also a CPA, and Mitchell soon became fast friends. Their more than 35-year friendship has included multiple recreational road trips involving houseboating, excursions to Death Valley, and participating in wine-tasting events.

Mitchell, whose business has been located in El Segundo for 15 years, finally bought a house in town a couple of years ago. Born in Hanford, California, Mitchell related that his father worked in the construction industry, which meant that the Mitchell family had to be mobile. Mitchell said that when he was six, the family moved to the East Coast. The Mitchell’s hop-scotched around the US of A multiple times, living in thirteen states. Mitchell said that his family’s four-year stay in Aspen, Colorado, was “probably the best place that we ever lived.”

He finally ended up residing in Michigan, where he would attend Central Michigan

Segundo Saxes Quartet Shares Music in El Segundo

By Kiersten Vannest

Every now and then, enhancing the ambiance of small-town El Segundo, residents get the chance to hear the smooth tones of a saxophone scoring their walk through the farmer’s market or stroll down Candy Cane Lane. For over a decade, Segundo Saxes, an amateur sax quartet based in El Segundo, has rehearsed and played everything from classical music to Black Sabbath at shows and events around town.

The Segundo Saxes was formed in 2006, sponsored by the South Bay Music Association (SBMA). After the original quartet split off about twelve years ago, the group’s current longest-standing member Dave Young took over responsibility for the Saxes and saw them through several member changes, dozens of performances, and a slate of music reaching across decades and genres.

“I’ve been an amateur musician since junior high school,” says Gold, “I’m 62 now, and so I would’ve been playing the sax for something like fifty years.” According to him, unusual for a saxophonist, Gold does not play any other instruments outside some percussion. Though he started with winds and strings in junior high, he picked up the saxophone at his brothers’ suggestion after they told him it was a “cool instrument.”

If you’ve never heard of a saxophone quartet before, it sounds exactly like what proud to be awarded one of the safest refineries in the U.S.

For the second time, the Chevron El Segundo Refinery has been recognized as the safest gasoline producing refinery in the West in receiving the American Fuels and Petrochemical Manufacturers Association (AFPM) 2020 Platinum Distinguished Safety Award. The award, AFPM's most prestigious, is given to a facility that has attained an exemplary level of safety performance, as measured by a stringent set of federal Occupational Safety & Health Administration (OSHA) statistics over the course of a full year.

Over 178 safety award applications were submitted by manufacturing facilities across the country, which included many of the 443 petrochemical units and refineries operating in the U.S.

We are honored to receive this recognition and remain forever mindful of what it means to be a good neighbor as we also celebrate our 110 year anniversary. We are extremely proud to share our history and this achievement with the community, and we thank you for your support.

Lady Eagles Look to Repeat Soccer Title

By Gregg McMullin

El Segundo's Cinderella 2021 season was a magical one, to be sure. They weren't picked to win their first league title since 2008-09, but they had the talent to get the team back to the playoffs for the first time in three seasons. El Segundo got into the playoffs as a third-place team, and from there, the Eagles discovered that they not only could compete at a higher level, they could win. Head coach Skip Jones says something sparked his team after their first-round 3-2 overtime win against highly touted Granite Hills. "After that first-round win, on a cold, windy day on the road, we knew something special might be in the works."

This season the Eagles will have a bulls-eye on their back, says Coach Jones. "We from Division 3 to Division 4."

What has the team done to prepare for the upcoming season? A group of seniors organized twice a week practices which were open to all levels and all players. A majority of the players participate in either club or recreational soccer, and most have been involved in cardio workouts.

The Eagles have plenty of talent returning. The team returns eight starters and a few others who played a major role off the bench. Returning starters include Chelsie Charles, the CIF Player of the Year, Michaela Turner, Jaden Fode, Ciera Doggett, Holly Wilbanks, Barcelona Heredia, Isabella Munoz, Charlie Gerson, and goalkeepers Delaney McRoberts and Nili Kovacs. In addition, the Eagles get back three players from injuries that would and sophomore goalkeeper Tanner Ijams.

The Eagles will look to unseat West Torrance as defending league champions and fend off South High to win the program's first Pioneer League title in 13 years. That's when the Eagles won the Pioneer League title and advanced to the CIF-SS semifinals. They'll lean on their experience and Chelsie Charles' scoring. In winning the CIF Player of the Year award, Chelsie matched her brother Christophe who also won the award in 2018 in the same sport. It's a true rarity that a brother and sister have won the player of the year award in the same sport. You might have to go back to the siblings, Cheryl (1982) and Reggie Miller (1983), who won the CIF Player of the Year award in basketball, to find that.

will certainly test the Eagles. They open the season on December 1st at Mira Costa and have other preseason games with Santa Monica, Bishop Montgomery, Inglewood, Leuzinger and Peninsula. They'll also compete in the South High Holiday Tournament during December, and open Pioneer League play at home on January 5th against North Torrance.

ESGS 14U Golden Eagles take Second at the LA South Bay Turkey Tournament in Torrance

The El Segundo Girls Softball team, 14U Golden Eagles, played in the annual LA South Bay Turkey Tournament hosted in Torrance. They survived an opening game tournament pool play loss to reach the championship game but fell.

Senior forward Chelsie Charles returns after being named CIF Player of the Year after leading the Eagles to a CIF title.

enter the season with higher than normal expectations. Teams won't take us so lightly, so we'll get everyone's best." He says his team has the talent to return to the playoffs but concedes the road to a consecutive CIF title could be an arduous road. "The path could be tougher because we've moved up have played last season, including Lizzie Kapoor, Brynn Boyles and Abby Martinez. New players include seniors Arianna Goitom, Jillian Ernest, Jayden McColgan, Isabella Derring, Sarah Bedoyan, Audrey Cdebaca and Erin Rifkin. Tyler Matlosz rejoins the team after concentrating on track last season

#26 Isabella Munoz made an impact as a freshman for the Eagles and their CIF title run.

Last season the Eagles played no non-league games thanks to the pandemic, so according to Coach Jones, they didn't reach their potential until the first game of the playoffs. He said with a full slate of non-league contests, and he's hoping for a faster start this season. The early-going schedule

In the opening pool play game, the Golden Eagles fell behind early and couldn't come back in a 9-1 loss to Cerritos Rampage. Mary Dennis, Eileen Osby and Hailey Kniest each managed one hit each to lead the Golden Eagles.

#14 Michaela Turner will be a key returnee for the Eagles.

Holly Wilbanks is a returning starter and will bolster a talented team.

In C'mon C'mon, Joaquin Phoenix Sees Life Through a Child's Eyes

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

Watching a Mike Mills film is always a very intimate experience because he draws inspiration from his own life. Beginners was for his dad, 20th Century Women was for his mom, and his new film, C'mon C'mon, is for his kid. Acting as a time capsule of childhood innocence, viewed from the perspective of the young at heart, C'mon C'mon is an earnest and delicate relationship drama that reflects on the importance of human connection.

Johnny (Joaquin Phoenix) is a middle-aged, single man who is consumed with his job as his own nuclear family, C'mon C'mon is an ode to the overall challenges of parenting in the 21st Century. It's easy to see the Mills' school of thought here – the uncertainty and amazement of raising a human being while you yourself are still figuring out how to co-exist in the world.

Joaquin Phoenix gives a phenomenal performance as Johnny (a man who Mills admits is partly based on himself). Phoenix's organic embodiment of the character and emotional translucency is on full display. British-born Woody Norman is the film's biggest revelaa field radio journalist in NYC. His current project is interviewing young people about their candid thoughts on the future. His ability to connect with these kids is a foreshadowing of what the universe has in store for him next.

Johnny has a semi-estranged relationship with his sister, Viv (Gaby Hoffmann), so it's a little surprising that she calls him asking for a favor. Viv is desperate for him to watch her young son Jesse (Woody Norman) for the few days she will be gone. Hesitant at first, Johnny sees this as an opportunity to re-connect with the nephew he barely knows. What becomes revealed as Johnny and Jesse spend time together is the epiphany that, despite being generations apart, they are actually more alike than they know.

In addition to being a touching tribute to tion; with his mop of messy hair, charming doe-eyes, and precocious sensibilities, his ability to hold his own against a Hollywood heavyweight like Phoenix is not only admirable but downright amazing.

Shot by cinematographer Robbie Ryan (The Favourite, American Honey), black & white gives C'mon C'mon an obvious "cinematic fairytale" look that is more intentional than simply for aesthetic purposes. Life, as well all know, is never black or white. We live in the grey. C'mon C'mon also lives in that grey, tackling philosophical issues that have no clear answer and proposing hypothetical questions that receive varied reactions. What Johnny and Jesse navigate throughout the course of the film is a whole lot of greyness—and it's

Sacred Cows and Curries— Dining Out (or Not!) in India

Article and photos by Ben & Glinda Shipley

It will either infuriate you or endear them to you, but the British, with their astonishing tin ear for foreign languages, have left a trail of odd monikers everywhere they've ventured on the globe. Venice, Florence, and Naples instead of Venezia, Firenze, and Napoli. Frogs for French, Jerries for Germans, Eyeties for Italians. Bombay and Mysore for Mumbai and Mysuru.

In the 19th century Indian Raj, one favorite culinary mangling gave us the term "curry"—from the Tamil "kari", which means nothing more than "sauce" or "stew". Even today, tikka masalas are all the rage in England, but the word "masala" means nothing more than "mixture". Neither of these terms, in fact, says a thing about the ingredients in a dish.

But they do key in on one timeless bit of foodie serendipity, which is that roasted and ground spices are the key to Indian cuisine—just like sauces to the French, pasta to the Italians, broiling to the Americans, and chopping and dicing to the Chinese. Every venerable Indian amah guards her secret masala recipe, passed down and augmented through Lord knows how many generations. And at the opposite extreme from fast food, every Indian meal you consume will be a unique product of that chef's family, culture, religion, personal tastes, and mood.

After five years of traveling in India, we no longer buy pre-mixed powders, but roast, grind, and mix our own. We still blend something you'd recognize as curry powder, but only for western and Jamaican dishes (deviled eggs, anyone?). For Indian food, there's nothing like the aroma that greets the visitor when you throw together a five-course meal with that morning's fresh spices. And it's really not that ambitious.

The possibilities are mathematically endless, but savory Indian dishes start in two basic directions:

Coriander—cumin—turmeric (in the Indian shops: dhanya—jeera—haldi). Mix in a variety of other spices, and you have something you'll recognize as western curry powder.

Cardamom—cumin—cinnamon (elaichi—jeera—daalacheenee). Start here, and eventually you'll arrive at garam masala.

To these bases, Indian chefs and amahs add saffron (kesar), peppercorns (kalimirch), chili (laal mirch), fenugreek (methi), fennel (saunf), cloves (laung), nutmeg (jaiphal), anise (chakri phool), dried bay and curry leaves (karee pattee), and the seeds of celery (ajavaayan), caraway (shah jeera), poppy (khas-khas), sesame (til), and black mustard (raai). Not to mention asafoetida (don't ask). Not to forget garlic, ginger, onions, tamarind, and tomatoes. Not to neglect ghee (butter), coconut, and yogurt.

Like any other cuisine, there are distinct regional variations in Indian cuisine. On the west coast of America, you'll most likely be familiar with Punjabi, from Northwest India, Kashmir, and Pakistan (think lamb, tomatoes, marinade, Tandoor). The British started out in Bengal in Eastern India, so that tends to a beautiful monochromatic vision.

C'mon C'mon is full of magical little wonders, but perhaps the most important of all is the reminder that the simple act of listening can be a catalyst for good. Whether it be through intimate moments shared between Johnny and Jesse or the unscripted admissions from kids across the country, C'mon C'mon encourages an expression of unconditional love. Not just to our blood relatives, but to humanity as a whole. Picturing the future is a scary thought when we feel like we're facing it alone, but trusting that someone will be there for us throughout the journey makes moving forward a little easier.

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I feel like I am grateful for the things I have, but I still feel guilty about wanting more. And I do want more. I have tried to do a better job of practicing gratitude, but everything I try doesn't seem to be working. I know there are so many people having a hard time out there, and I am worried that I will come off as insensitive, or unfairly ambitious. I feel worse when I try to change the way I feel and can't do it, like there is something deeply wrong with me. Any ideas?

— Ungrateful? - El Segundo

Dear Ungrateful:

Have you tried eating at restaurants with the word "Gratitude" in their names? How about buying products with clever phrases about gratitude stamped on them? Have you meditated on it? Do you have a gratitude journal and a gratitude mantra hanging over your bed and another one in your kitchen? Try doing all that first. If it doesn't work, read on.

I kid, of course, but for a reason. It is indeed gratitude season, and gratitude is an industry, and if it helps then I am here to officially tell you that you don't have to practice gratitude if you don't want to.

Consider who benefits most from the social norm that we should be thankful for what we have and not want more: anyone who benefits from the status quo. You mentioned you are concerned about inequality, and that seems like a pretty unfair message for those people who live at the bottom of a society where inequality is at record levels.

If you're worried that you don't feel grateful enough, the best way to feel truly grateful is to first experience what it's like not to have comforts and luxuries for a period of time. Are you to spend some time living on society's minimums in wages, healthcare, transportation, housing? Are you prepared to give away your material possessions until others have nearly as much as you do?

Instead of worrying about practicing gratitude, try making it a point to practice decency (I don't mean to imply that you don't do this!). The best way to practice decency is to treat everyone with dignity and respect, always.

That's not as easy as it's supposed to be. We all have our tribes, and as such we tend to think of others as a little bit less than members of our tribe. Yes, in our minds we all dehumanize others to one degree or another. But that doesn't mean we have to treat people as if they are inferior to us.

Even if you tell yourself it's ok for others to have less because - insert your reason here - you don't have to act like you feel that way. Look people in the eye. Thank them even when you are paying them to do a service for you. Ask what they would like and take their word for it. Choose to accept their sincerity even if it sounds ridiculous to you.

It is easier to practice gratitude than it is to help others, and I suspect that nagging feeling you have speaks to your understanding and dissatisfaction with that reality. So treat the problem, not the symptom: find a way to help people who need it. If you do, I suspect you won't find yourself worrying so much about being sufficiently grateful.

Credit Factors That Affect Auto & Homeowner's Insurance Premiums

(BPT) - People think of their credit scores when measuring their "creditworthiness," like when they're looking to take out a loan, buy a home or open a new credit card. But did you know your insurance credit score can affect your auto insurance premiums too?

Before auto insurers take you on as a policyholder, they might use your credit score as an indicator to evaluate how likely you are to file a claim. If your score doesn't fit within their standards, you may get charged a higher premium. On the other hand, some insurance scores are loss ratio models, so they actually rank you based on the probability that you'll be a more profitable customer.

According to Consumer Reports, the difference in auto insurance premiums related to credit scores can be significant. Drivers who only have "good" scores can end up paying from $68 to more than $500 more annually in comparison to those who have excellent scores.

Moreover, it's important to know that your credit score is not the only factor that determines your premiums. According to Experian, if you live in Hawaii, California, Massachusetts or Michigan, auto insurers can't even use your credit information to determine auto insurance premium.

Insurance companies say that a person's credit scores help them to better predict their risk of insurance losses. While a score evaluation can seem like a broad judgment, there are often certain factors auto insurers will look at when determining your monthly premium, such as:

The longer a person has credit and keeps that credit in good standing, the higher their score. However, while people who've had credit longer can stand a good chance at getting a lower premium, it's not a guarantee.

Insurance companies may still view you as a risk if, for example, you have an excellent credit history but a poor driving history.

When you sign up for auto insurance, your provider wants to gauge whether you are in financial stress or not and how likely it is that you will file a claim. So if you regularly pay your bills when they're due and don't have any missed or delinquent payments reflected on your score, you should be OK.

However, with life's unexpected twists and turns, sometimes it's hard to maintain a healthy credit score, even if your score is historically excellent and you are seen as low risk. Fortunately, many auto insurers understand this and will offer you a reconsideration for the amount of your premium for what they call "extraordinary circumstances." Some of those circumstances may include:

- Death
- Divorce
- Serious illness/injury
- Temporary and involuntary loss of employment
- Military deployment

Situations often vary and insurers often have different policy guidelines. If you're curious, contact your insurer to see what circumstances they do and don't consider.

Auto insurers, like lenders, want to see the correlation between various factors, such as a good credit mix and a lower credit risk.

Applying for insurance can feel daunting. But when you have the right credit information in your hands, you should be able to get a better idea of what to expect. Generally speaking, a strong credit score can help you qualify for lower insurance premiums when you shop around.

Larry Mitchell

University for a couple of years. When his parents moved back to California, Mitchell initially stayed in the Great Lake State, but was soon intrigued by living in California again. Seems he was speaking to his Cali resident brother one day, who was regaling Mitchell with stories about “swimming in the pool in January” while the snow-bound Mitchell was “chipping ice off my window.”

Enough of the frigid winters. Enough of scraping icicles off everything, right? Time to head West.

Mitchell soon came to California to live with his parents, but that living arrangement did not last too long. About six months, Mitchell said; at that point, his “construction marauder” parents re-located again, this time to Pennsylvania.

At that point, Mitchell was heading towards attaining his collegiate degree in business, concentrating on the accounting field. Post-graduation, Mitchell moved to Hermosa Beach to work for the accounting firm Deloitte. After a stint at Deloitte, Mitchell concluded that he was not in line for what he termed “the cool jobs” with the firm, so he “bounced around” to a couple of other accounting firms,

He ended up making partner at a Pasadena accounting firm, and in 2001, decided to “go out on my own.” He partnered with another gentleman to form a firm based in Santa Ana. Five years later, when the partnership was dissolved, Mitchell landed in a business suite in El Segundo, where he established Lawrence R. Mitchell & Company.

Mitchell said he became interested in accounting back in his Michigan high school days. Not wanting to follow the chosen career path of his father, he assessed his employment options. “Looks like I am good at accounting,” he remembers thinking, so he followed that schooling pathway through his graduation at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

Mitchell’s firm has worked for numerous local businesses, residences, and non-profit organizations. He said that “one of our favorite clients is the El Segundo Chamber of Commerce.” Mitchell has worked with the Chamber for more than 15 years, also serving on the Chambers executive committee. He also works for the Foundation that spearheaded the fundraising campaign for the aquatics facility built adjacent to the Wiseburn High School.

Mitchell met longtime local Don Brann while they were involved with the ES Chamber. Brann touts Mitchell’s civic involvement. “Larry has a long-standing history of supporting local El Segundo causes such as the Chamber of Commerce and South Bay Sports Health and Recreation Foundation,” Brann emailed.

Liz Odabashian, a former El Segundo resident, currently living in Hawthorne, has worked with Mitchell multiple times. They have been acquainted for more than 25 years. “Larry has such a well-rounded firm and can help with the small and the big,” she said. “You feel like you are the only (client). He is going to make sure that whatever you need is done and is done perfectly. I am very thankful that I can not only call him my colleague, but my friend. He and his team contribute a tremendous amount to our community.”

So, what does a CPA firm do for its numerous clients? My guess is count and account for stuff, but I am a layperson when it comes to that level of finances. According to the Larry R. Mitchell website, his firm is a “full-service tax, accounting and business consulting firm.” That definition works for me.

Suffice to say, Mitchell finds the business-friendly environment fostered by the City of El Segundo to his liking. And like many who live, work, and play in our town, marvels at the fact that El Segundo remains a well-kept secret. “I am continually amazed,” he said, “that so many people do not know the name of the city,” and that it is often referred to by outsiders as the area “over there by LAX,” not realizing the town is home to Fortune 500 companies and iconic titans of the aerospace industry, with the massive Chevron campus sprawling to the South.

Mitchell and wife Anna had lived in North Redondo until about two years ago, when the couple decided to plant their roots in town, buying a house in the Freedom Park area of El Segundo. Echoing the comments of many residents, Mitchell says he is very impressed with the friendliness of his neighbors, which was not always the case in North Redondo, he said.

And he also touts the relative compactness of the residential part of town, where he and his wife like to stroll through the city streets, occasionally stopping at a local establishment for a slice of pizza and a glass of wine.

So, Mitchell was asked how did the COVID scourge affect his company. He said that the virus, a death-knell to many businesses, had actually sent his CPA firm’s workload “through the roof. CPA firms and that includes all my colleagues, were the first responders to businesses. We do not get any news coverage for this, but if you ask any of my employees, in the year 2020, we actually had never worked more,” as reeling business entities struggled to track their finances and struggle to keep their doors open.

When Mitchell is not looking at ledgers and numbers, peering under his green-tinted accounting visor (very, very old-school reference) to formulate the best possible financial outcome for his clients, what does he like to do? He said that he and Anna like to retreat to their cabin in Big Bear to decompress. Mitchell said that buying the Big Bear cabin was “the best thing that we ever did.” He also likes to partake in wine-tasting excursions and, as mentioned earlier, yearly “get-out-of-Dodge trips” with longtime friend Cindrich and assorted mates, as well as just enjoying the colloquial charms of El Segundo. Basking in the two-to-three times weekly three-or-so mile walks around the local environs with Anna, walks that had helped Mitchell dissolve ten-or-so of the fifteen pounds that he said that he gained when the lockdown started.

El Segundo’s Larry Mitchell: A man who accounts for a living and a man El Segundo residents can count on. • the name suggests. A saxophone quartet is a musical ensemble that contains four saxes, typically: soprano, alto, tenor, and baritone. As Gold describes it, players are encouraged to improvise and are often highlighted in solos during performances. Because the instrument is so flexible and the quartet is able to build off the other members, all kinds of music are explored by the Saxes.

“We play classical music as much as we play show tunes. We play rock. We play popular tunes, you name it,” says Gold. He describes one recent concert of his, A Brief History of Jazz, as a journey through the different eras of jazz music throughout the decades, from the roots of jazz and gospel and the blues to ragtime big band and swing to Bebop and Bossa Nova, all the way to modern electronic pieces. He followed that up with a concert playing all of Beethoven’s 3rd symphony.

Many of the quartet members have played in the El Segundo Concert Band, a local community band that produces three to four family-friendly concerts a year and which is also a part of the South Bay Music Association.

In 2014, the SBMA was officially formed and had blossomed into the organization it is now. Today, the association provides mini-grants for alternative music teaching methods due to Covid-19, scholarships for student musicians, private lessons, free music concerts, and in-school musical clinics by professional musicians.

A former president of the association himself, Gold explains that the SBMA is a registered 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization that helps to fund music teachers and programs in El Segundo. The SBMA started in 1998 as a group of a dozen El Segundo parents of band students performing “Louie Louie” as a surprise for their kids. The group loved it so much that they formed the El Segundo Concert Band.

At any given time, the Concert Band is comprised of about 20% of high school students who qualify to join. The band and organization offer music mentoring and encourage all younger members to continue their musical journey.

Every February, the group hosts an annual Comedy Night and Silent Auction to benefit the El Segundo High School Eagle Band.

Over the past decade, the event has raised over $200,000.

Gold says that the Segundo Saxes rehearse often and thoroughly to ensure that their performances are the best they can be. The pandemic threw a wrench in the quartet’s plans. Members shifted, and the number of shows dipped as gatherings dwindled. The last show the quartet was able to play was at a luncheon for the Daughters of the American Revolution in Palos Verdes less than a week before everything was shut down.

“It could have been a disaster...seriously a disaster,” he says. Thankfully, as Gold continued to follow up with them long after the show, no members present at the luncheon contracted Covid from the gathering. As everything opens back up, Gold says the Saxes are ready to roll again, safely.

Often playing civic events and local shows for veterans, the Segundo Saxes are also available for hire for public or private events. All proceeds go to the South Bay Music Association, so in addition to helping fund a local community program, booking the quartet is also tax-deductible.

Currently, the Segundo Saxes are focusing on filling the fourth seat of the quartet after some scheduling conflicts, and pandemic interference caused two members to leave. With the addition of a new member, the Saxes are hoping to play at the upcoming Candy Cane Lane, pending Covid restrictions and permissions. As the Segundo Saxes continue to develop, Gold expresses his hope of supporting music education and sharing the sounds of the saxophone with the community.

“[I hope] to keep offering music to people and to have a good amateur group that people enjoy.” •

The Segundo Saxes played their last show in Palos Verdes a week before Covid prompted shut downs across the nation.

“Be thankful for what you have; you’ll end up having more.
If you concentrate on what you don’t have, you will never, ever have enough.”

City of El Segundo
Notice of Intent

NOTICE OF INTENT TO ADOPT A NEGATIVE DECLARATION
FOR THE ELSSEGUNDO 2021-2029 HOUSING ELEMENT

Address: Citywide

Purpose: In accordance with the State of California Public Resources Code Section 21092, Sections 15063 and 15072 of Title 14 of the California Code of Regulations Guidelines pertaining to the California Environmental Quality Act, and the El Segundo Municipal Code, this is to advise you that the Development Services Department of the City of El Segundo has prepared an initial study of environmental impacts on the following project and is recommending the environmental determination described below.

Project Description: The proposed project is an amendment to the City's General Plan Housing Element in compliance with State of California Government Code Sections 65580-65589.8. The Government Code for the State of California requires that every city prepare and adopt a Housing Element to be included as part of the city's General Plan. The Housing Element must include: a) An assessment of the community's housing needs; b) A statement of goals, policies and quantified objectives that will guide the implementation of specific programs; c) A housing program, to be implemented over a specified period that describes the implementation actions to be taken by the City to meet the needs; and, d) An inventory of sites, resources and constraints relevant to meeting the community's housing needs.

The Housing Element Amendment includes the Regional Housing Needs Assessment (RHNA), and proposes creation of RHNA Mixed Use Overlay and RHNA Overlay designations to specific parcels that are currently zoned Commercial (CO, C-2, C-3), Residential (R-3), Parking, and Downtown Specific Plan. However, no changes to the underlying zoning designations are proposed with this amendment.

Under the RHNA allocation, the City is required to provide the zoned capacity to accommodate the development of at least 492 residential units using various land use planning strategies. The Housing Element Amendment identifies methods to accommodate the 492 new units, including 189 very low income and 88 low income units, for the 2021-2029 Housing Element cycle. The Draft 2021-2029 Housing Element can be view at the following website: www.elsegundo.org/housing-element.

Environmental Determination: Negative Declaration. An initial study of environmental impacts was prepared pursuant to 14 California Code of Regulations § 15063 ("CEQA Guidelines"). A Negative Declaration of Environmental Impacts is proposed for this project pursuant to CEQA § 15070. The public review and comment period for the Negative Declaration begins on November 26, 2021 and ends at 5:00 p.m. on December 27, 2021. The proposed environmental documents are available on the City's website at: www.elsegundo.org/housing-element.

Further Information: The Negative Declaration is also available for public review, Monday through Thursday between 7:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. and Fridays between 7:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. in the City of El Segundo Development Services Department, located at 350 Main Street, El Segundo CA, 90245. Comments may be submitted to Principal Planner Paul Samaras, AICP, at psamaras@elsegundo.org, or mailed to the address above.

SPECIAL NOTICE REGARDING COVID-19: Given the Declaration of a State of Emergency and a Proclamation of Local Emergency related to on-going COVID-19 pandemic, we recommend viewing the Negative Declaration using the above listed website. Be advised an appointment is required to view Negative Declaration at the City of El Segundo's Development Services Department. To schedule an appointment to view the documents, please contact Paul Samaras, Principal Planner at psamaras@elsegundo.org or at (310) 524-2340.

Future Public Hearings: Following the ND's public review period, a Final ND will be prepared. The Final ND along with the draft Housing Element will then be presented to the Planning Commission for its review. The Planning Commission's recommendation on the project will then be presented to the City Council for action. Public notice will be provided of all future Planning Commission and City Council meetings. El Segundo Herald Pub. 11/25/21 H-27365

PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS PETSPETS

Featured Pets of the Week

Provided by Hannah Collett, spcaLA

We've got buns, hun! Linguine and her siblings are 4 month old domestic young rabbits ready for adoption. Rabbits make wonderful companions and can be litter trained. Bunnies are playful, and their natural curiosity are great for games like bowling. They can even play fetch (though you will be the fetcher). Rabbit adoption fees are $20 until the end of the year, so hop on over! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-1726>

Newton wants you to know, guinea pigs make great pets! She is a 1 year old female guinea pig...very entertaining, social, and likes to chat. If you're thinking of adopting Newton, she'll need a large, solid-bottom cage with plenty of timothy hay for bedding. She likes to play hide and seek, so include a hutch or a tunnel. She also likes balls and other toys to play with and a chew to keep her teeth in check. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-2140>

Chibi is a cute 3 year old female domestic short hair Torbie with a beautiful coat and bright shining eyes. She came to spcaLA as a lost cat, but we believe she was once someone's companion. She is social and seems to be okay with other cats. Adopt Chibi! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-2098>

Brenda is an 8 year old female Pitt Bull/Mastiff mix looking for a companion that is interested in a slow and easy pace. She is not in a hurry, taking her time, no matter what the task. She'll give you a gentle tail wag to let you know she's pleased. A cushy spot on the couch or a fluffy dog bed is her dream come true - besides a home, of course! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-1301> dominate their preferences (the color yellow comes to mind). One of our favorite styles originated in Kerala in the south—think seafood, chilis, and coconuts. In the big cities like Mumbai and Delhi, you'll find everything from extremely sophisticated (and expensive) inter-regional feasts to some of the most renowned street food in the world.

Four common threads run through most Indian cuisine:

Best seat in the house for Mumbai street food from Bademiya.

Not a lot of chilis:
As Westerners, we naturally expected our mouths to demand CPR after every blistering bite, but most Indian cooking is actually quite mild. And subtle. Even coconut, which can overwhelm a Thai curry, is held on a tight leash. There's a spice in everything you eat, but if one taste (cumin?) blows away the others, you might want to request an upgrade.

Not a lot of alcohol:
Alcohol isn't necessarily banned, especially at the big western hotels. And in Maharashtra and Karnataka, India boasts two of our favorite wine regions on the planet. And there's nothing for atmosphere quite like a gin and tonic on a steamy afternoon at a crumbling colonial tennis club. But Indians just aren't big drinkers. Most of the time, with our meals, we take a spectacularly refreshing mango lassi (mango, yogurt, cardamom, and mint).

Not a lot of meat:
14% of the country is horrified by the taste of pork. 80% reveres the cow for befriending and comforting the deity Krishna through his ancient tribulations. Unfortunately for fish, sheep, and chickens, their ancestors never made the honored (or dishonored) lists—but there's 30% of the population who don't much care for consuming any living being. So this is an easy (if less than doctrinaire) country to be a vegetarian. Again, there are exceptions, and you can find pretty much any meat in some obscure corner of the culture. But as a visitor, why would you want to? We consume as much as we want, but no one ever suffered a guilty conscience from gorging on vegetables.

Not a lot of drama:
In general, we expected a much more complicated relationship with food than we found in India. In a mega-state like Maharashtra, there exists the potential for every kind of misery (New York and London come to mind), but widespread hunger, at least in the urban areas, isn't the scourge it used to be. Obesity is rare, but so is visible malnutrition. Famine has all but disappeared. Indians might not over-eat, but they relish the foods of their culture and will welcome

Maybe someday we'll find out the hard way. Maybe we won't.

So...
As Indian-obsessed foodies, we're just getting started. We did take lunch with one of the premier chefs of India, where the chocolate dessert truffles were served suspended in a magnetic field (we have no idea why, but it took the waiter longer to suspend them than it took us to swallow).

A little of this, a little of that—a midday Mumbaiker Thali with a refreshing plain lassi.

As for the foreigner's digestive adjustment—to put it delicately—that issue has never proved more than vaguely inconvenient for us. We both sport pretty weak stomachs, and face an amoebic challenge flying coast to coast in America, much less to Europe, Africa, or Asia. A week or so before arrival in-country, we start a regimen of probiotics, but only because we drop all inhibitions at the first exotic aroma. And as for ice cubes, brushing teeth, suspicious plastic bottles, and all the other water-based shibboleths, we keep meaning to start paying attention.

But our most memorable meals have been among the least gaudy and expensive. And that is the true secret of Indian food—simple ingredients blended with mouth-watering spices and cooked to perfection. So easy. So relaxed. So good.
