Dealing with the Stress of the Holidays

By Duane Plank

We will change it up a little this week. Instead of a profile of one of El Segundo's fine residents, we feature a Q&A with expert Herald advice columnist and local therapist Tom Andre.

The Holidays can trigger many feelings and emotions all over the spectrum. Why do many folks have a feeling of depression during the Holiday season?

TA: "This can vary quite a bit depending on individual circumstances, of course. Many people make a point of gathering with friends and family over the holidays, and these gatherings enter our social discourse and our daily conversations. For some people who are involuntarily alone or are less connected to their loved ones than they want to be, this talk of connection and togetherness can be a painful reminder of their own circumstances."

Some are exhilarated by the trappings of the season: the music, the shopping adventures, the putting up of the tree and the decorations, and the lights. What do you think makes some folks so happy, and others so sad?

TA: "In addition to the above reasons, many people do not wish to celebrate the holidays, or not in these ways. And yet what we see in popular culture tends to only treat the holidays one way. While it may indeed be socially acceptable not to celebrate this time of year, we never hear stories about this. We have nobody to tell us it is ok, and so it's easy to think there is something wrong with you if you're just not feeling it."

Some feel incredibly stressed during the run-up to Christmas, buying and wrapping, delivering the gifts, paying for said gifts, etc. Or they are maxing out their credit cards. Any tips for dealing with perceived Holiday stressors?

TA: "These are definitely real stressors for people who choose to participate in these holiday activities. Part of the problem is that we often don't think about the holidays until they are upon us, and then we have to rush or max out our credit cards. If holiday activities are important to you, it's helpful to plan for them, think about them, and save for them throughout the year. It may also be helpful to have conversations with others who you spend time with or exchange gifts with about how to reduce these costs and stresses. If you are stressed, I promise you are not alone. Many people will be relieved to have these conversations."

The marketers are out in full force, trying to guilt the consumer into overspending in December. Any tips for coping with the cavalcade of commercialism?

TA: "I think cavalcade of commercialism is a very good way to describe it, and I think the best way to cope with it is to understand it, to look it in the eye and see it for what it is, so to speak. It's a lot easier to say no when you know someone or some company is just trying to get you to part with more cash."

It seems that each Holiday season, the religious aspects of the Holidays are further and further pushed to the background as we rush to buy "stuff," with a lot of that "stuff" being quickly exchanged or returned on Dec. 26. Any tips on re-setting the true meaning of Christmas?

TA: "First, we all have to decide what the holidays mean not only to each one of us, but also to those people who celebrate with us. Can you, together, put into words what you want the holidays to mean? Once you do that: are your actions and the time together working in service of that meaning? If not,

Obituaries

Lance Anthony Lee Alarcon (1970-2022)

Lance Alarcon, lifelong resident of El Segundo, passed away surrounded by his family in the early morning of November 17, 2022, after a courageous battle with cancer. Lance was born in Hayward, California on September 10, 1970, to Gary Lee and Anne Lee Alarcon. Lance and his mother, Anne first moved to El Segundo in 1973 after having moved from Northern California and knew it would be their lifelong home. Lance attended elementary and junior high school at Trinity Lutheran School but was a 1989 graduate of El Segundo High School. All throughout his childhood, Lance was involved in extracurricular activities through the El Segundo Parks and Recreation program, as well as many of the extracurricular sports teams. Lance was a member of the Oaks baseball team, as well as many other El Segundo Little League teams. This is where his love of baseball began (Go Cubs!). Lance was also involved with the Boy Scouts and was a proud member of Troop 267 under Scoutmaster Barry Goldstein. At El Segundo High School, Lance met many of his closest friends. He played varsity baseball and basketball and ran varsity track.

After leaving El Segundo High School, Lance attended West Los Angeles College, and later found his love of acting. Lance appeared in many national commercials, television shows, and movies- most notably "Beverly Hills, 90210", "Coach", "Forest Gump" with Tom Hanks, and "Face Off" with John Travolta and Nicholas Cage. Lance also coached several of the sports that his siblings were involved in. Lance was an avid fan of all sports, but especially the Los Angeles Lakers, the Chicago Cubs, the Los Angeles Kings and the Green Bay Packers.

Lance married his loving wife, Kourtney in 2011, and in 2012 welcomed his son, Cooper. In 2013 he was lucky enough to also welcome his daughter, Peyton. Lance said the proudest moment of his life was when he became a Dad.

Lance is preceded in death by his father, Gary Lee, and survived by his wife, Kourtney Alarcon, his son Cooper, his daughter Peyton, mother and dad Anne and Tony Alarcon, and siblings Lori Watkins (Scott), Amber Alarcon-Carter (Robert), Jenna Alarcon McEwan (Justin), Tony Alarcon, Somer Hart (Marshall), and niece Ellie McEwan. •

Correction

In the December 8th issue we reported on the ESHS Men's soccer win over Roosevelt on page nine. We reported Nate Meyerson got a goal, but that was his brother Mikah Meyerson. Mikah also got the goal we gave credit to Angel Rojas. Mikah Meyerson had two goals and he was the only one to score in the 5-1 loss to Mira Costa off an assist from his twin brother Nate. We regret the error(s)

The Whale Is an Empathic Tale of Empathy, Isolation and Redemption

By Ryan Rojas, cinemacy.com

The first thing you’ll notice in Darren Aronofsky’s The Whale is its unexpectedly compact format. With a screen ratio of 1.33:1, the frame is nearly square on all sides. Intriguingly, there won’t be any extra width for this story.

As the opening title credits began, seeing this already made me feel uneasy. I, like anyone who will be going into this movie, knew that the central character is an extremely obese man. How then, will he fit into this screen for the remainder of the film?

This (intentional) visual restriction immediately sets the stage for a story of discomfort, pain, and struggles to come. As soon as we see Charlie (Brendan Fraser)—by way of an uncomfortably shocking introduction (in many carnal ways)—we see how enormous, and helpless, a figure he is. We know instantly how impossible it must be for him to exist and fit into the world around him.

Except that we quickly see that he doesn’t actually exist in the world. Rather, as today’s 21st-century accommodations allow, he lives in his own reclusive world; inside, and alone. Teaching an online writing class (one in which his camera remains off), he spends his days

A scathing look at the film industries #MeToo scandal from an insider’s perspective. Author Winnie M Li is a former film producer who has experienced abuse first-hand. This is not an autobiographical novel—that was her first novel entitled Dark Chapter. Her new novel Complicit provides an intimate view of the machinations of the film industry and its pervasive abuse of power.

“In some way, I know it is coming, even before I hear from the outside world.” Sarah Li’s previous life catches up with her when an email from Thom Gallagher, the renowned New York Times investigative journalist shows up in her inbox. Gallagher wants information about her time with billionaire businessman turned executive producer Hugo Long. Long has produced some of the biggest films in the last decade but has now been implicated in some serious sexual assault accusations.

Guilt is implied by the title – Complicit. How far does blame spread? The perpetrator, those who enabled him, those who turned a blind eye or all of them? “Some

Wild Week for the Eagles

By Gregg McMullin

The El Segundo Eagles had a busy week. Both girls’ and boys’ soccer teams competed in the South Bay Tournament, and the girl’s water polo team looked impressive. The basketball teams got wins, and the boy’s water polo team handed out awards.

Girls Soccer Suffers First Loss after Tie

As good as the Eagles may be, after winning consecutive CIF Championships, they have discovered that playing a demanding schedule could be challenging. Consider they have started the season playing three Bay League teams that will vie for the league championship. Against Peninsula, the Eagles dominated the pace of play but gave up two long penalty kicks for goals in their 3-3 tie.

Against a physically challenging Santa Monica team, the Eagles fell 3-0.

The Eagles scored first against the Peninsula Panthers when Payton Bemis was in the box on a throw-in when the pass was made. Bemis was in the right spot when she headed the ball into the net for an El Segundo 1-0 lead. After the Panthers tied the game, Bella Munoz had a shot attempt that ricocheted off the left post that kicked away. Hayden Agnew gave the Eagles the lead with a penalty kick that whizzed into the net.

In the second half, El Segundo tightened the back line on defense. Holly Wilbanks, Ava Adlam, and Sam Stahl were instrumental in thwarting scoring attempts. But the Eagles committed a foul that resulted in a long 40-yard either occupying the same flattened corner of his living room couch or traversing the path between his bedroom and bathroom, by way of a walker whose flimsy frame feels as if it could fold under his weight at any moment.

With over 600 pounds of body mass, Charlie is a sight to behold (I say this with no intention of sounding insensitive to the obese community). Yes, Charlie’s appearance is shocking, which the film presents starkly. Yet the film, as we see it, is one of empathy. Director Darren Aronofsky’s singular achievement here is how he draws out the sweet, kind, and tender soul of the man underneath the heavy flesh.

Undergoing an immediate health complication that begins the film, Charlie is told by his nurse and friend Liz (Hong Chau) that he’s in grave danger of dying. The episode brings about a forced introspection, one in which he decides to attempt to reconcile with the daughter he left behind years ago (you would be correct in remembering Aronofsky’s other film about guilt by way of fatherly abandonment, 2008’s The Wrestler, here too).

We see each day of this final week, with title cards to count them down. This narrative structure should also recall the biblical story of creation, in which God created the universe in seven days (we all know what he did on the seventh). Religion and man’s relationship with it, and faith and higher powers at large, are always a preoccupation in Aronofsky’s films, as it is here too. The film confronts religion by way of a young door-to-door missionary (Ty Simpkins) who befriends Charlie and tries to save him by converting him before the rapturous end times (which are closer for Charlie than the young missionary knows).

The central story in The Whale is that of Charlie reconnecting with his daughter, Ellie (Sadie Sink), a high schooler whose troubling social media accounts reflect her raging, isolated nature. Drawing her to his home, Ellie sees her father for the first time in years—more enormous now than ever. Her moodiness and rage counter Charlie’s kindness and sincerity.

Each of these scenes—mostly exchanges between two characters—all start to take on a certain rhythm. If it all begins to feel like a play, it’s because the film is based on one. Screenwriter Samuel D. Hunter adapts his 2014 stageplay here for the film (which also lends itself to a COVID production).

For a film about a 600-pound man, I was very surprised to find how relatable The Whale is and how much I connected with it. Timely issues that we experience now, such as self-isolation, self-medication, grief, and shame, are all things that we can struggle with every day. In a post-COVID, mostly online world, I was taken aback to see how easy and dangerous it is to fall into our own worlds of isolation and despair that can grow from shutting oneself off from the rest of the world.

It’s a brave story to bring to the screen, and it’s Brendan Fraser who deserves every word of praise that his performance is getting. Fraser is a singular talent here, bringing an incredibly moving, yearning presence to Charlie. Fraser brings all sides to this character suffering from grief and addiction. Communicating the pleasures of inhaling a bucket of chicken wings, meatball subs, or pizzas at any given moment, and then the physical stuntwork as well as emotional depth to convey pain inside a man who can barely move is a feat of acting and should be recognized as such.

Cinema rarely features people like this at the center of the frame, getting their own story. And Aronofsky and team, as well as the obese community, should be proud to see this character and story portrayed onscreen with such compassion and empathy, and heart.

The Whale is a transcendent film, as evidenced by its final shot. As Charlie has been saying to his daughter and students, “be honest.” By the time he reaches that pinnacle of truth himself, he is not bound by weight, nor the screen ratio format, or even the gravitational forces of this world. Lightness is that thing that exists within all of us if we just choose to lift the weight of despair.

1h 57m. ‘The Whale’ is rated R for language, some drug use, and sexual content. •

what changes do you need to make to get back on track? It is much easier if you can do it together rather than each on your own.”

Many feel alone during the holidays, maybe far, far away from their loved ones. Any good coping strategies for those who may be separated from their loved ones or who might have suffered a recent setback, maybe a death in the family, and are not in a celebratory mood?

TA: “Of course, connect with loved ones as much as possible using the available technology. But also, if you’re not in the mood to celebrate, it’s perfectly fine not to. If it helps when talking to other people, tell them what your plans are and that that is your celebration. No plans at all? Sounds like a great day to me.

If you are able to, reach out to anyone you know who the opportunity might not have to have the connections they desire well before the holidays (though it’s not too late now). Being together with other people, even those you don’t know terribly well can sometimes be very comforting. For those who have lost loved ones, too often, we are told to “move on” or “get over” these losses. I would suggest the opposite: consider creating ways to incorporate your fond memories of them into your holiday customs.”

The push to watch what we eat and drink during the Holiday season is prevalent, with the advertisers already trying to sell their weight loss programs to those of us who might overindulge. Any thoughts on maintaining dietary sanity during the Holiday season?

TA: “If you have been unable to resist all the holiday temptations, congratulations, you have eyes and a nose and tastebuds. Dieting advice is beyond my scope of practice, but I can say that there is an entire industry telling us we have to look a certain way and then selling us programs to achieve that look. Shame on any person or any company that tries to tell us how we are supposed to look. Next time you feel bad about the way you look, remember there is a company that wants you to feel that way so they can make money from you.”

In 2022, life, and the Holidays, hit us quickly. It is Halloween, and then it quickly rolls into the “Thanksgiving season,” and before you know it, Christmas has arrived. Any tips on how we can savor the season, and not rush through these “good” times?

TA: “If you want to make the season more memorable, I suggest choosing one of two opposite-sounding paths: either slowing it down or packing it in. Either way, you’re stepping out of your normal routine, and when you step out of your normal routine, you tend to pay more attention and make more memories. So, whether it is allowing yourself total relaxation and doing nothing or scheduling yourself so that you see as many people as you possibly can, doing things differently during the holidays will help ensure they are memorable in a way that works for you.”

The Holiday season is when many of us foolishly, some would say, make New Year’s Resolutions. Any thoughts on helping formulate realistic resolutions for 2023?

TA: “Many of us take time during the holidays to reflect on what we would like to do better or accomplish over the next year. By the end of January, most of us had given up our hopes of making the big changes we wanted to and resolved to make new resolutions next year. If you don’t want to disappoint yourself, I would suggest one of two things. First, nothing motivates as much as fear, so if you want to make a big change, impose some penalty on yourself if you don’t achieve it. For example, if you’re a Dodgers fan, write a check for $500 and give it to a friend who is a Giants fan, and tell them to spend it on Giants gear for themselves if you don’t achieve your goal, and tear it up if you do.

Second, resolve to move towards a goal, not necessarily to achieve it. Small changes in direction in life add up over time, and even making small changes is enough. This year I resolved to read two books a month. I stopped keeping track a few months in, and I’m not sure if I achieved my goal, but I’m satisfied because my behavior has moved in the direction I wanted it to.”

Finally, Plank would like to wish Happy Holidays to all Herald supporters! •

free kick. The attempt was high enough to get by El Segundo's goalie to even the score. The Eagles retook the lead when the ball was worked inside with a shot attempt by Munoz. The attempt was contested, and the ball was rebounded with a shot attempt by Olivia McPherson, who slid the ball in for a 3-2 El Segundo lead. With time winding down, the Panthers were awarded another penalty kick from beyond 35 yards out. Even as the Eagles employed a wall on the attempt, the kick went sailing into the net to even the game at 3-3.

"It was disappointing to do so well against a solid team and come away with a tie," said head coach Skip Jones.

The 3-0 loss to Santa Monica gave the Eagles their first loss of the season. Each of the Viking's goals came from opportunistic plays. The first came on a breakaway drawing out the Eagle goalie for an easy shot. The second one came on an open shot that was too high to block, and the third one was pushed in from a rebound.

The Eagles opened their Pioneer League schedule on Tuesday and host Lawndale today at 5 p.m.

Eagles Split in South Bay Soccer Tourney

After getting defeated by Mira Costa 5-1, the Eagles took care of the Animo (Inglewood) Eagles 3-2. The win against the high-scoring Eagles was an impressive game that saw El Segundo match the speed of Animo. Connor Moore got free inside and scored an early first-half goal to give El Segundo a 1-0 lead.

The quicker and more athletic backline of the Eagles held Animo in check near the nets. The speed of Tyler Cleland disrupted passes, while Kieran DiCerbo's defensive skills clogged the passing lanes. The results were obvious with the poor shot attempts by Animo.

On offense, the Eagles put pressure on Animo and controlled the pace. It was demonstrated early in the second half when El Segundo drove the ball inside the box, and Connor Moore slotted a pass into the net for a 2-0 lead. Animo responded a short time later with a score by Erik Medina to close the gap. Moore completed his hat-trick scoring when he took a pass and beat the defense inside, and crossed a shot into the net.

The Eagles opened their Pioneer League schedule on Tuesday, host Lawndale today at 3:30 p.m., and play in the South Torrance Holiday tournament next week.

Water Polo Team Faces Challenging Schedule

The Eagles have played a demanding schedule before opening up league play. If you consider they opened their season with a narrow 15-14 loss to the Millikan Rams, the top-ranked team in the nation, and a loss to Long Beach Wilson, the 20th-ranked team, it is clear the arduous schedule could be a benefit later in the season.

The Eagles hosted the Notre Dame Knights before playing in the prestigious Villa Park Classic. The Knights are one of the top-ranked CIF Southern Section teams routinely in the conversation for a title. Besides being a well-coached team, they are a physically demanding team. The Eagles were not intimidated and won easily 16-5. El Segundo played an up-tempo game and a tight defense. The counterattack phase of their approach beat the Knights, especially in the second half.

The Eagles scored early in the opening period when Stephanie Rodriguez scored from inside. Later on, Rodriguez found an opening to score again to give the Eagles a 2-0 lead. The Knights cut the lead in half with a goal from Lilie Vehling. The Eagles got their offense in gear in the second period by creating more shot opportunities. Evelyn Hale and Emmie Ramirez each scored goals, while Rodriguez scored two goals, including one coming from a long pass from goaltender Kendall Donahue to give the Eagles a 6-3 lead.

El Segundo dominated the second half out, scoring Notre Dame 10-2. They got goals from six players, including Stephanie Rodriguez, Sally Gonzales, Alyssa Mullane, Evelyn Hale, Emmie Ramirez, and Ava Albertson. Kendall Donahue was stellar in goal with eight saves and an assist.

The Eagles competed in the Villa Park Classic and went toe-to-toe with some of the top teams around. They fell to the CIF-SS Division 1 tenth-ranked team Los Alamitos. Then they defeated Agoura, the third-ranked team in the nation, 19-7, lost a thriller to La Jolla, the nation's second-ranked team, 7-3, and finished the tournament with a 14-9 win over Division

1 power Huntington Beach.

Basketball Teams Get Ready for League Opener

The boys' basketball team won their first two games in the Downey Tournament against Calvary Chapel and Mesrobian (Pico Rivera) before dropping games to Whitney and El Rancho. They opened Pioneer League play on Tuesday against North Torrance and host Lawndale tonight at 7 p.m.

The Lady Eagles will enter league play on a three-game win streak. After defeating CAMS 37-20, they held off the Gahr Gladiators 49-35. The game against CAMS saw senior guard Aili Watanabe score a game-high 16 points, while senior forward Nicole Ungaro poured in 15 points to lead the Eagles.

The matchup against Gahr was a closer game than the final score indicated. The Eagles had issues breaking the Gladiators' press but persevered. Annabel Gross put her team ahead early on consecutive runners. With the Eagles holding a big lead in the second half, Gahr put a run together to slice their deficit in half. Nicole Ungaro, Kayla Tran, and Symai Jones righted the ship for the Eagles with their offense, and El Segundo went on to pull away for the win.

Nicole Ungaro scores two of her 15 points against CAMS.

The Eagles opened their league schedule on Tuesday and host Lawndale today at 5:30 p.m. They host Vistamar next Tuesday at 6 p.m.

Boys' Water Polo Team Hands out Awards

The Eagles held their annual season-end banquet and handed out awards. The program, which has been on an upswing, has grown from 18 players two years ago to 43 in the program this season. Head coach Nila Ward said, "Many of the players this year had never played before and made meaningful contributions on JV." She added that she hopes it translates to the Varsity for next year and beyond.

Luc Giroux, just a junior, was named the team's MVP. His outstanding play in goal was recognized, and he was named the Pioneer League's MVP for the second consecutive season. Junior attacker Max Hale was named the team's Most Outstanding Player and was named to the first team of the All-Pioneer League team. Junior Patrick Wang was voted the team's Most Improved Player. Senior co-captain Tyler Thomas was the Eagle Award winner, named to the second-team All-Pioneer League, and perhaps earned the most prestigious Scholar-Athlete Award. Others who were selected to the All-Pioneer League were first-team Nolan Barnett (junior), Carter Williamson (sophomore), and Tristan Foster (freshman), the second team.

Junior Varsity Award Winners went to Brayden Ward (Eagle Award), Nolan Bowen was voted the MVP, and Julien Bertout earned the Most Improved Award. •

Kendall Donahue made eight saves and had an assist in the win over Notre Dame.

Sally Gonzales looks to score against Notre Dame.
