After School Programs for IUSD Get Support from City Council

By Haleemon Anderson

With the 2019-'20 fiscal year underway, The Inglewood City Council took action at Tuesday's meeting to provide recreation programs for local schools and solidify upcoming municipal elections. The Inglewood Parks, Recreation and Community Services Department will staff the After-School Recreation Program (ASRP), bringing supervised activities Monday through Friday at 10 of Inglewood Unified School District's (IUSD) 13 elementary and junior high sites. The ASRP will operate daily from 2-6 p.m. beginning on August 19, the first day of school. Host campuses will include Bennett-Kew, Centinela, Highland, Hudnall, Kelso, Oak, La Tijera, Payne, Woodworth and Worthington. Fees for participants are $63 per month, per child.

The City of Inglewood has a longstanding relationship with IUSD to provide high-quality, safe and affordable afterschool care for local families. The program typically serves 440 students, ages 4-13. Recreation and Community Services Director Sabrina Barnes will administer the program.

The Council also voted to align the City's general municipal elections with statewide elections, with the first iteration coming November 2020. The action comes three years after the California Voter Participation Rights Act (CVPRA) was signed into effect by then Governor Jerry Brown. The initiative is designed to discourage low voter turnout by having local elections fall on the same date as statewide elections.

The change will have extend all four elected council seats for an additional year, as well as the five school board positions and the posts of city clerk and treasurer. Inglewood Mayor James T. Butts' term will not be affected by the change.

In public comments, Kelly Clark, a staff attorney for LA Water Keepers, spoke on behalf of non-profit coalition Smarter Water LA and asked the Council to oppose a local water desalination project. "I am here to ask you to formally oppose the West Basin Water District's proposed water plant," said Clark. She told the Council that a lot has changed since it originally supported the project, set to be built in El Segundo. Desalination is a process whereby ocean water is transformed for drinking and other fresh water purposes. "It doesn't make sense to pursue desalinization," added Clark, "when it is the most expensive method." Several South Bay cities and agencies have already come out in opposition to the plant being built -- citing cost, energy and environmental waste.

Several upcoming events were announced. The Inglewood Airport Area Chamber (IAACC) of Commerce will host a back to school event this Saturday at 603 Grace Ave. from 2-5 p.m. Director Eric Holly announced IAACC's upcoming Police and Fire Appreciation Luncheon on Sept. 19, from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the airport Crowne Plaza on Century Boulevard.

Resident Toni Williams of 77th Street, a homeowner for 17 years, invited the Council and City support staff to a neighborhood block party on Aug. 24.

Councilmember George Dotson noted several events in his district. On Aug. 21, he will host an estate planning workshop. On Sept. 7, he will have his annual shredding event at 4901 Manchester. And on Sept. 28, Dotson will host a fundraiser entitled City of Champions 5K Walk/Run at Edward Vincent, Jr. Park.

Councilmember Alex Padilla will host his 6th Annual Picnic and Chili Cookoff on Sept. 7. Padilla said there is one stop left in the competition, which will take place at North Park from noon until 4 p.m. The following Saturday, Padilla announced, there will be a Hispanic Heritage event on the City Hall campus. The Sept. 14 event will feature a classic car show.

Councilmember Ralph Franklin spoke about the recent National Night Out, saying it was a great experience. Councilmember Eloy Morales noted a recent block club meeting he attended. "It's an opportunity to speak directly to the residents," he said.

Mayor Butts ended the meeting on a somber note, speaking about Officer Andre Moya, Jr., who was killed in the line of duty on Monday. The officer was performing a traffic stop on the 215 freeway in Riverside that escalated into a gun battle. Moya and the occupant of the vehicle died on the scene, and two other officers were wounded. Butts asked that the meeting be adjourned in honor of Moya, as well as three other Inglewood residents -- Lonelle Jackson, Gilbert Rodriguez and Pastor Gilbert Chambers who passed recently.

The Inglewood City Council meets every Tuesday, unless otherwise noted, at 2 p.m. in the Council Chambers on the 9th floor, Inglewood City Hall. •

By Desiree De La Cruz-Miller, Library Assistant, Teen/Adult Services

Young Adult books are some of my favorites to read. I love the selection we have at the El Segundo Public Library! I found my latest read in the Teen Zone, a book collection curated for high school teens. This week I

How to Make Friends with the Dark by Kathleen Glasgow. will be reviewing How to Make Friends with the Dark by Kathleen Glasgow.

In this book, Kathleen takes us along the process of a teen coping with the unexpected death of her mother. The protagonist, Grace Tolliver, aka Tiger, experiences the sudden loss of her mother to a brain aneurysm. For Tiger, life becomes a black hole of unknowns. The unexpected loss of her mother means being put into the foster system at the age of 16 the day after her mother passes away. In the midst of moving from foster home to foster home, she must deal with taking care of the details of her mother's funeral. Along the way, Tiger discovers the strength she bears and gains lasting connections with people that help her cope with her loss.

Also in the Teen Zone you will find another great read by Kathleen Glasgow, Girl in Pieces. For help finding one of these great reads or another book that interests you, please come see me or any other staff member at the Teen/Adult Reference Desk. We will be happy to help you. •

Film Review

The Peanut Butter Falcon is a BFF Drama That Defies Convention

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

Summertime calls for adventures, as seen in Tyler Nilson and Michael Schwartz's film The Peanut Butter Falcon. Described as a modern-day Mark Twain story, The Peanut Butter Falcon – from the producers of Little Miss Sunshine – is a charming tale of two bandits on the run and the lessons they learn about LaBeouf), the sharp-tongued fisherman who is also on the run from his past. Together, the young men navigate the elements, growing and learning from each other as the days pass.

I write this next statement in full sincerity: The Peanut Butter Falcon plays very much like an after-school special on the importance of friendship. It's essentially the self-discovery and acceptance along the way. This unconventional buddy comedy stars the always excellent Shia LaBeouf and breakout Zack Gottsagen, a 34-year-old actor with Down syndrome. The film may be predictable, but it's Gottsagen's inspiring performance as a determined and self-sufficient young man that makes it worth a watch.

Zak (Gottsagen) is the youthful spirit who livens up the retirement community he calls home. Not much detail is given as to why his birth parents couldn't provide adequate care for him, but the staff and residents adore him nonetheless. The soft-spoken nursing home employee Eleanor (Dakota Johnson) pays special attention to Zak, giving him tough love when he needs it while also encouraging his passion for wrestling. One night, with help from his roommate Carl (Bruce Dern), Zak escapes the nursing home in an attempt to attend the professional wrestling school of his idol, The Salt Water Redneck (Thomas Haden Church). Traveling alone with just the clothes on his back, Zak is determined to live out his dreams and meet his hero.

Zak's disappearance from the nursing home sends Eleanor on a wild goose chase as she attempts to find him despite his lack of phone, money or any sense of direction. Meanwhile, early on in his journey, Zak meets and eventually befriends Tyler (Shia quote “friends are the family you choose” brought to life. The screenplay is very plug and play, as the characters literally explain the plot through their dialogue. This may come off as pretty cheesy and unoriginal for hardcore cinephiles, but there's no denying that the message is sweet. The Peanut Butter Falcon offers the perfect sentiment for children and young adults, especially as many are entering a new school year in the upcoming weeks.

While the film itself is sweet, it is Gottsagen's boundary-pushing performance and inclusivity that make it truly special. •

WOW! ALL OF AMERICA'S HISTORY IN ONE WEEK

As I mentioned to you last week, Linda, aka my ol' lady, and I spent the past seven days taking our two grandkids on a tour of the center of our nation's history and power, Washington DC. We ended up walking over 12 miles some of the days in 90 degree weather with high humidity, but it was all worth it. Our six year old grandson wanted to see every museum. He wanted to look at every exhibit. Along with the 13 Smithsonian Museums, there are all the monuments and other side attractions like that white house where some guy tweets a lot from. We traveled to Gettysburg and Mount Vernon. We visited Ford's Theater and the Pederson House across the street where Abe passed away. We saw how the FBI investigates and one of the kid's favorites, we visited the Bureau of Printing and Engraving where they saw a lot of green backs being printed. The neat thing is the fact that almost all of the museums have free admissions. Staying with friends in Virginia and riding the Metro into the capital area made it affordable and pleasant. On our last day, we visited both the American Indian and African American Museums. Both were excellent at depicting how life was for groups of people who have quite the history in this great nation. We saw both the good and the bad that have made us who we are today. I wonder how our country would be different if there was not a Union victory at Gettysburg, or a George Washington refusal to become king of the States after his Revolutionary War victory, or an Abraham Lincoln freeing of the slaves. God has certainly blessed us as a nation. Have we always done the right thing? No. However, the freedoms we enjoy, the human rights and life that we now enjoy certainly has been paid for by courageous men and women who put their country first. We should be grateful to live in the greatest country in the history of the world.

WHO IN THE HECK IS THIS DUDE?

Norb Huber is a former Hawthorne resident and past City Clerk of Hawthorne. He currently lives with his old lady in Orangevale, CA. which is 400 miles north of the City of Good Neighbors. He enjoys playing golf, running Outdoor Nativity Store and rambling on and on about life around him when he tries to write a weekly diatribe of nonsense. Oh yes, he wants you to celebrate the fact that God's love and forgiveness is so unconditional and so undeserving that we are obligated to celebrate our joyous freedom from sin and damnation by having a cold one or two. His ramblings might have been read by over 10 somewhat loyal readers for the past eight years.

As Digital Learning Increases, So Do Local Back-to-School Costs

By Rob McCarthy

It's back-to-school month for South Bay districts and time to crack the books. Inglewood students return on Monday. Hawthorne extends the summer vacation an extra day until Tuesday. El Segundo welcomes back its returning and new students on Aug. 28. But before the first bell rings, there are school supplies to buy and backpacks to stuff.

Parents, be ready to open your checkbooks for back-to-school expenses. The pens and pencils and notepads aren't behind the inflation felt by households with children in local public and private schools. It's the iPads and the home-based Internet connection in homes that kids need to complete their assignments that will make the 2019-2022 school year a bit pricier. And to not fall behind in class...

The 2019 Huntington Backpack Index, which for more than a decade has tracked the household costs for K-12 children's educations, issued a bullish prediction ahead of August. You'll need to add a basic laptop computer and an Internet connection for your child to make the grade in the digital classroom of today. That includes elementary schools, the index says.

The Ohio-based bank behind the backpack changed the way it calculated expenses for elementary, middle and high schoolers. A laptop and access to the school's website needed to be included as an indirect way to help students be ready to succeed on their first day back, explained an executive with the Columbus-based financial institution.

"With changing demands on students to complete daily assignments on connected devices, we not only felt it important to revisit our methodology, but also to do our part in setting up our communities' students for success in the classroom," said Andy Harnening, who is head of consumer and business banking for Huntington Bank. It partnered with the nonprofit educational group, Communities in Schools, to survey schools in 26 states.

Here's what it found: A significant increase awaits American families with children attending elementary, middle and high schools. The cost per-child is rising to $1,017 for elementary school supplies, extracurricular fees and technology. It's $1,277 at the middle schools and $1,668 for high schoolers, including fees to participate in athletics and band.

What goes in the backpacks? The creators of the annual index last year listed each item considered among the basics in public and private schools. The Huntington people priced a full backpack for each grade group -- K-5, 6-8 and 9-12. Everybody starts the year with a new backpack, plus No. 2 pencils and pink erasers. A pencil bag or a box is a no-brainer for all grade levels. Surprisingly, even second graders use highlighters and dry-erase markers, which are two of the 37 school items required in the lower grades.

A three-ring binder, red and black writing pens, a ruler and scissors are must-haves for the tots and the teens. A spiral notebook and a writing journal are packed into the index. Surprisingly, even elementary grades are using calculators, USB storage drivers and headphones for listening to various subjects via computer and doing it quietly. The technology at school needs to translate to the home, which is the point of the 2019 Backback Index. Low-tech hasn't been pushed out of schools altogether, though.

Families should pack 3-by-5 cards, brightly colored sticky notes and pencil-cap erasers, along with a hand sanitizer and one roll of paper towels. Middle schoolers should carry a combination lock, the larger 4-by-6 index cards, and a pocket thesaurus for vocabulary-building and writing assignments. A pair of safety goggles will come in handy too, so they can experiment with middle school science projects up close and personal.

There's also the price of a gym uniform, plus music instrument rentals, field trips and other school fees. The contents and incidentals add up to $1,017 per elementary school kid. What a difference a year makes: last year's expenditures would have totaled $636.96, based on Huntington's calculations. That's a $400 swing coming at millions of American families.

At the middle schools, the increase is half of what the lower grades can expect. The grades 6 through 8 set will need another $175 of gear and gadgets in their packs. Back-to-school will mean another $310 this year for the family of a high schooler.

Communities in Schools asked affiliates across 26 states and the District of Columbia about learning requirements ahead of the 2019-20 school year. Surveyers learned that elementary school students are "sometimes" asked to submit assignments from home using a computer or electronic tablet. The rates soared for the middle schools (88 percent) and high schools (94 percent), which now offer 24-hour access to assignments and instructions from the teacher. Parents regularly use email to discuss any concerns with teachers and ask questions about student performance in the classroom.

Textbooks' days are probably numbered, if a recent prediction about the nation's educational system is correct. A survey of educators done by the Deloitte accounting firm found in 2016 that teachers regularly use a digital device in the classroom. Three-quarters of teachers in the survey believe that digital content will replace textbooks in the next decade. They pegged 2026 for the year that reading, writing and arithmetic go paperless.

Half of U.S. classrooms use a digital device every day of the school year, Deloitte reported.

Digital Learning

Laptops, desktops and tablets are the most common technologies in the schools. Tablets are most popular at the elementary schools. High school students prefer laptops. Deloitte surveyors asked principals, teachers and educational leaders which technologies get the most use during a typical week. The K-5 grades are big consumers of games and apps that teach. Videos and websites round out the top learning technology list. A majority of today’s children have hands-on experience with interactive technology by age 5, the data showed. Early introduction to computers, smartphones or interactive pads can have an educational advantage for a child in kindergarten, first or second grade. Research has shown that early-school success plays a big role in future achievement in school and dropout rates. It could even change the way children spend their summers. More access to digital educational content would encourage them to continue their learning over the summer, said the majority of students in Deloitte’s 2016 survey. It also reported 75 percent of the youngsters as being “somewhat” interested in researching things they learn in school, but do it away from school and on their own time. What do parents and teachers in the survey think about the potential for digital content and technology now in the schools? They overwhelmingly were interested in going beyond what’s taught in the classroom. Eighty-eight percent of parents who talked to Deloitte surveyers were keenly interested in digital content that supplements daily instruction. •
