LAX Entry-Level Construction Program Is Building Momentum

By Rob McCarthy

The Los Angeles International Airport is recruiting applicants for a program that trains airport-area residents to step into careers in the local construction industry. The third HireLAX Apprenticeship Readiness Program class is preparing to start classes in August. The partnership with Los Angeles Trade Technical College, Los Angeles Southwest College, and the Los Angeles/Orange Counties Building and Construction Trades Council is a workforce development program aimed at local residents. Special emphasis is placed on finding recruits from economically disadvantaged cities within the South Bay.

HireLAX teaches skilled craft labor that is badly needed to support the multibillion-dollar capital improvement program at LAX, according to organizers. "We have seen the incredible impact that HireLAX can have on the lives of its graduates, and we are proud to know that these men and women are helping build the LAX of the future," said Samson Mengitsu, the chief operating officer with Los Angeles World Airports (LAWA). "HireLAX changes lives, and we hope that our neighbors who are interested in a construction career will take the chance and apply."

A mandatory orientation will be held on Saturday, Aug. 25, from 7 a.m. to noon at Los Angeles Southwest College. The eight-week program begins on Monday, Sept. 10. Applicants must RSVP to attend the orientation session.

Residents of Inglewood, Mar Vista, Westchester, Hawthorne and Lennox are eligible for the 30 trainee slots. Register immediately for next month's orientation online at hirelaxorientation2018-08-25.eventbrite.com and wait for an email with instructions.

Within a few days of registering you will receive an email with further information regarding applying for the program. Failure to fill out this paperwork in advance will delay your application and may result in you not being fully screened on the day of orientation.

To be accepted into this LAX-area work-readiness program, applicants must show proof of residency, be at least 17 1/2 years old, and have a strong interest in the construction industry. A California identification card and Social Security card are musts, too.

Contractors performing work on LAWA projects must meet or exceed 30 percent local participation with a workforce that reflects the diversity of Los Angeles. The HireLAX program trains local residents to earn these jobs. Under the HireLAX framework, program graduates will be connected with union apprenticeship programs and contractors so they can begin their construction careers at LAX.

Since its launch last year, two HireLAX classes have graduated, and approximately two-thirds of the graduates are now in union apprenticeship programs and have earned local construction jobs. Of the graduates, 100 percent are working locally. Additionally, approximately one-fourth are women and two-thirds of the program participants are African Americans. Previous involvement with the criminal justice system is not a barrier to this training opportunity.

The HireLAX program was developed within the framework of LAWA's Project Labor Agreement, which is a partnership between the airport authority, its contractors and the local construction unions. The PLA requires contractors and unions to refer local workers to the project, and outreach to persons who have not previously qualified to be employed on construction projects -- especially minorities and women. The LAWA PLA and the HireLAX Apprenticeship Readiness Program are managed by Pasadena-based Parsons Corporation. The nonprofit Flintridge Center is providing recruitment and case management assistance for the program.

Those interested in participating in the HireLAX program must attend a mandatory orientation and participate in an application process. The mandatory program orientation and registration will be held on Saturday, Aug. 25 at Southwest College. Those with questions should contact Christina Watkins at (424) 646-7192 or cwatkins@lawa.org. •

The Murderer's Ape Ratchets the Imagination Most Rigorously

Reviewed by Tommy Vinh Bui, MLIS, Associate Librarian, Inglewood Public Library

The summer sweats might have you wading in drowsy delirium, but the library has some refreshing respite on the shelves just for you. A blast of Arctic erudite ambiance that'll have you pulling on a parka. Jakob Wegelius' mystery-thriller The Murderer's Ape is a humdinger of a yarn. The book'll breeze right by in a blink. Paragraph one pitches you right into a tale of intrigue boasting memorable characters and a plot that takes us all over the world and back again. It ticks every box in terms of young adult literary fare.

It's an epistolary story written from the vantage of our charismatic and thoroughly charming protagonist, Sally Jones. She meets a colorful cast of characters and her journeys take her by plane, train and tugboat all over the map. She's also a gorilla handy with a wrench and wields a welcoming demeanor -- a skill and minor species-related detail that plays a huge role throughout her misadventures. Equal measures Indiana Jones, Forrest Gump and Curious George, Sally Jones is our unflinching and intrepid hero as she unravels this who-dunnit murder mystery in which she finds herself embroiled. Sally Jones really carries the narrative single-handedly. Her observations and deductions imbue her with a unique perspective on the proceedings. She's something akin to a more eloquent and thoughtful Chewbacca.

The content is emotionally rich and the story is hauled along swiftly, with the characters presented as satisfactorily complex and sympathetic to the reader. It also neatly fulfills genre expectations. It's a swashbuckling adventure tale that manages to cobble together just the right amount of the harrowing and the heartfelt. Many a mile is wrung out of these compelling and convincing characters. I glean spin-off potential and a franchise property that will run at least three more books. That's just testament to how likeable the characters are and that there is still untapped potential in this strong series. One can't help but to look forward to the further katzenjammers and brouhahas Sally Jones and company will lumber into next.

The narrative velocity is laudable through and through and certainly worth a re-mention. The writer displays much literary dexterity as he manages to implant a chorus of voices and tonal shifts through a variety of distinct and eccentric characters. He weaves a palpable charisma between our ensemble of characters and it's all but too convincing as we delve deeper and deeper into this tangled plot.

The pacing is exemplary. Narrative momentum is the necessary mainstay of the young adult novel. It is a fine balance of breakneck speeds of exposition and apropos pauses in turbulence to give the reader a chance to catch their breath and digest the whirlwind of plot twists and revelations during the first and early stages of the second act. It is a second act with plenty of ups and downs and feigns and forward-lunges galore.

All in all, Wegelius' The Murderer's Ape is a fine manner in which to while away a few summer hours. Exuding surplus imagination, it'll instantly globetrot you to the fado-laced alehouses of Lisbon, ornate maharajah palaces of India, and the familiar hearth of home that can only be found when you've been fervently circumnavigating the world and acquiring hard-earned life lessons.

This is a fine feast for young and eager minds looking to tack on a few more miles to the ol' mental odometer. Anchors away, wayward wanderers! •

Film Review

Sorry to Bother You is a Crazy Comedy by Newcomer Boots Riley

Ryan Rojas for www.cinemacy.com

Sorry to Bother You may sound apologetic... but as a directorial debut, it's every bit as brash, ballsy and bonkers as any movie I've seen. First-time filmmaker Boots Riley's satirical and zany comedy, which is set in an alternate present-day Oakland, portrays a young man of color who takes a telemarketing job and -- in an effort to increase his sales -- literally adopts a "white dialect" to speak to his customers. This could have been the extent of where the movie settles, to explore this concept more thoroughly, but Riley's unbridled creativity continues to seep in and we find that this storyline is just the beginning.

Lakeith Stanfield plays Cassius "Cash" Green, a young man whose objective is to telemarketing agency's best employees and into the inner circle of the company's CEO Steve Lift (Armie Hammer). This is when a dark secret that the company is harboring comes to light. The film ends with one of the most head-spinning twists that would be less fun to spoil here, even though it could use a little more editing in its final act before it makes you do a double take.

Sorry to Bother You is commanding. It is either making you laugh or making you think. Riley does a very good job pulling in all elements, specifically the production design by Jason Kisvarday in which everything is so detailed that it creates a visually rich movie. The ensemble cast does well. Stanfield carries the movie on his back, Thompson delivers another fierce and unwavering performance, line his pockets with a little extra money. After starting the new job as an entry-level telemarketer, he takes the advice from senior co-worker Langston (Danny Glover) to adopt a "white voice" (voiced by David Cross) in order to connect with his customers during cold calls. In hilarious fashion, when Stanfield opens his mouth, Cross' voice is overdubbed and the movie has fun inserting a "square dialect" into Stanfield's soulfully visual performance. It's this sort of playful comedy that makes Sorry to Bother You a fun time, and its comparison to a Spike Jonze and Spike Lee lovechild are accurate.

Boots Riley is equally interested in fostering a message of activism in addition to the investment of strong comedic elements. Cash realizes that his newfound success comes at a price when his growing status puts him at odds with his lesser established co-workers. It gets to a point where Cash must decide to cross a picket line made up of his bohemian girlfriend Detroit (Tessa Thompson) and best friend Squeeze (Steven Yeun). The decision of who chooses to assist him in getting to work each day creates an emotional hardship that he weighs against his large paycheck.

All of this is put on the highest stage when Cash rises in the ranks to become one of the Armie Hammer has fun as the crazy CEO, and David Cross and Patton Oswalt's "white voices" are a huge part of the laughs. Sorry to Bother You will find success with audiences willing to have a good time and entertain new visual thoughts. The film was picked up by Annapurna Pictures after making its world premiere at Sundance this year for a reported seven figures.

105 mins. Sorry to Bother You is rated R for pervasive language, some sexual content, nudity, and drug use. Now playing at ArcLight Hollywood. •

Hawthorne Happenings

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy Named Norb Huber

HAPPY 100TH

Happy Birthday greetings go out to long-time Hawthorne resident, community activist, city council critic and three-time council candidate, Frances Stiglich, who turns 100 years of age this month. It was just a few of years ago that Francis was walking the streets of Hawthorne campaigning to win election for a seat on the city council. She was bound and determined to shake things up. If there ever was someone who told it like it is, it is Frances. Recently, Frances has been spending most of her time down in San Diego living with her son. But during her time here, she was always looking out for ways to improve Hawthorne. As an example she didn't like all the chewing gum being thrown on the sidewalks by the kids walking to school so tried to get the school officials to teach the children not to. She wanted to organize her homeowners group for her part of North Hawthorne. She always thought that the mayor and the male council members should wear suits and ties to the council meetings and she literally brought ties to give to the young, single governing officials. She was active in the Hawthorne Historical Society and would personally relate to stories from her over 80 years of living in the City of Good Neighbors. But, her one wish that she had that may not come true is her wish to fly to the International SpaceStation or to Mars to celebrate her century of life. Her years may just run out before Elon is ready to send humans to populate the red planet, but don't count Francis out, she will be traveling to her homeland of Croatia to celebrate with here family later this year. Happy 100 and here's to many more.

JOHN BAKER MEMORIAL CRUISE NIGHT

John Baker was Mr. Cougar. He lived and loved the Hawthorne High School/Beach Boys/Hot Rod life. His sudden death dealt a blow to the Cougartown website and to the very popular social media experience that so many HHS alums enjoyed. Facebook is somewhat helping to keep these former Cougars together. But, there is nothing like seeing each other face to face and that is exactly what will happen at Foster's Freeze on Hawthorne Blvd. In memory of John Baker, there will be a cruise night on Saturday, July 21 from 5 to 9 p.m. Come out and get reunited with your HHS friends. Cougartown is alive and well.

TIME TO MOVE ON

It feels weird writing a newspaper column about Hawthorne when I live 400 miles away. So, it's only natural for me to look to ease on out of my role of the Happenings guy. I don't really know what's happening since I'm not there to see or hear it happen. It just happens to be the right time for someone else to take over this duty. Any takers? It's not a tough job. It's just writing down your thoughts and if they are stupid enough then people will read them. I would gladly train my replacement, if I could. How do you teach people to be real? How do I train others to write stupid stuff? Stupid is as stupid is, right? There will never be another me, but that's okay. Someone else will have to develop their own style, their own mantra, their own slogans. It won't be too difficult to retain the 19 loyal readers that I once had as they stay alive, we are currently down to 17 since two of my readers died recently. Hopefully the ideal replacement writer would have a large, supportive, extended family that will not ridicule them like I've had to endure for keeping this thing going after my spiel broke a long time ago. I'll keep on going with this until someone, anyone, emails me to take control of this shipwreck. I need to spend more quality time with my old lady, drink one more cold one per week, take a dip in my pool when the temp hits 100. I need to move on. We've had a great run together. I will miss you, but life goes on. Life is short, so we need to live it. God loves you and me so let's have a cold one. I look forward to having several of you emailing me to say, yes, I help want to keep this going. Thanks in advance for volunteering to fill my shoes. Enjoy.

HEAT AND FIREWORKS SALES AND RANDOM THOUGHTS

It's been hotter in Hawthorne than Orangetown. I can only imagine how it must have been the past week during the heatwave of 2018. I hear the fireworks sales were good this year, the Kiwanis Club made more profit than what they had expected. The World Cup soccer matches have been fun to watch even with no USA team playing. The drama and human emotions shown on the faces of the winning and losing team's fans has been unbelievable. Soccer really is the world's sport. How many more days until LaBron's Lakers start their march to the Finals? How many more years until the Dodgers win a World Series? Life is fun, life is good.

Give Your Small Business A Checkup

(BPT) - A challenge for any entrepreneur is getting access to capital. If you're like many, you're constantly looking for ways to reduce expenses and free up cash flow so you can be ready for anything, whether it's a slow season or an opportunity to expand.

Dust off your business plan: No doubt when you started out in business, you were eager to put your vision to paper. Most entrepreneurs get busy with the day-to-day pressures of deadlines, and that vision can recede into the background. Schedule some time with your board members or business partners to revisit and update the business plan. Now that you understand the realities of your market, you should have plenty of ideas on creating the 2.0 version of your enterprise. When finished, it's important to not allow it to gather dust again. Set goals and schedule check-in meetings with your team to make sure everything's on track.

Update your budget: The nature of entrepreneurship is being agile in the face of change. Market trends, price changes from vendors and suppliers, effects of new laws and ordinances, even road construction are variable forces that can send anyone's budget into a new direction. That's why your budget isn't ever going to be a spot-on prediction. Think of it as a plan. If you stay on top of it, you can spot the trends early and make adjustments right away so you can reap the full advantage - or head off problems before they become unmanageable.

Check your credit score: If you're planning to raise capital to expand or make improvements in the next year, checking in on your credit score is an important first step you can take several months before you apply for the loan. Even if you have a business credit score, certain business loans still require a look at your personal credit score, especially if you're a sole proprietorship. Visit Your.VantageScore.com to find free resources to learn your credit score. There's also helpful information on what factors influence your score and things you can do that can help increase it over the coming months to help you get the best rate possible.

Create a tax strategy: The tax break Congress passed in December will save small business owners 20 percent on their tax bill this year. In the coming year, small business owners have many opportunities to capture more tax savings with the right plan and strategy. For example, if you're planning a large equipment purchase, you may find yourself in a better tax bracket in 2019 if you time it before Dec. 31, rather than waiting until the following year as planned. Have a meeting with your accountant to discover more ideas.

Pay down debt: One way to use the windfall of your 20 percent tax savings is to pay down revolving loan debt. Doing so is a great way to raise access to working capital should you need it down the line.

Depending on the source of credit, reducing your credit-to-balance ratio is one factor that could raise your credit score. Before you do so, make sure you have enough cash flow to meet your expenses.

Improve accounts receivable: If your business extends lines of credit to your customers, it may be worthwhile to implement a credit check policy on all new customers. Knowing they're creditworthy before the fact can help you create the appropriate plan for them and protect your business. Credit reporting is also an effective way for even a small business owner to let customers know they are serious about collecting what's owed. In the end, you'll get paid faster and increase cash flow.

The life of an entrepreneur means things can change drastically on a dime. A thorough check-in with your finances can put you in the best position for success. To learn more about the tools and solutions offered by VantageScore, visit Your.VantageScore.com. •

Looking Up

“City of Astronomy” to Host Gathering of International Space Experts

Based on a Press Release from Caltech, Provided by Bob Eklund

From July 14 to 22, the world’s leading experts in space science will gather in Pasadena, informally known as the City of Astronomy [http://www.cityofastronomy.org], for the 42nd assembly of the Committee on Space Research, or COSPAR. Caltech is hosting the meeting, with the support of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is managed by Caltech for NASA.

“We call Pasadena the City of Astronomy because it’s home to many astronomy institutions, such as Caltech and JPL, the Carnegie Observatories and Mount Wilson and more,” says Thomas (Tom) Prince [http://pma.caltech.edu/content/thomas-tom-prince], the Ira S. Bowen Professor of Physics at Caltech and chair of the scientific organizing committee for the COSPAR 2018 meeting. “It made sense that Pasadena would host the entire international community involved in space science and exploration.”

Up to 2,500 participants are expected at the meeting, taking place at the Pasadena Convention Center and the Hilton Pasadena. Media interested in attending with complimentary registration should contact Laura Gordon by emailing cospar2018@icsevents.com.

The meeting will feature talks, roundtable discussions, and exhibits on a wide range of space science subjects, including icy worlds in our solar system, such as Jupiter’s moon Europa; the search for life beyond

Earth; upcoming space telescopes; Earth climate science; exoplanets; and more. Prince says that the European Space Agency’s Gaia mission, which recently released a three-dimensional map containing more than one billion stars in our Milky Way galaxy, will be a hot topic.

“Even though the topic is space science, the atmosphere is very much down to Earth,” says Prince. “It’s a place for people to get together and collaborate.”

“COSPAR was created by the United Nations Committee on Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, at the dawn of the space age and height of the Cold War, specifically to facilitate exchanges between scientists in the U.S. and former USSR,” says Gregg Vane, a senior strategist for solar system exploration at JPL and chair of the local organizing committee for COSPAR 2018.

A public lecture [http://cospar2018.org/scientific-program/public-lecture]—scheduled for Wednesday, July 18 at 8 p.m. at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium—will feature Sara Seager, a planetary scientist and astrophysicist at MIT. A panel discussion about searching for life in the solar system will follow, moderated by Bill Nye “The Science Guy” and including Bethany Ehlmann, a professor of planetary science at Caltech and a JPL research scientist, and Kevin Hand, a planetary scientist and astrobiologist at JPL.

At the same time as the COSPAR meeting, Pasadena will host AstroFest 2018—a week-long series of space-themed events and activities for the public. AstroFest 2018 kicks off July 14 at the Pasadena Convention Center with exhibits, planetarium shows, and evening stargazing. Activities later in the week include Astronomy on Tap [https://magazine.caltech.edu/post/pulsars-and-pretzels], an informal evening at a local pub, where astronomers and the public discuss everything from black holes to bratwurst. A full list of events is online at <http://www.cityofastronomy.org/astronomy-week-2018>.

“We all share the same sky and its cosmic treasures, and the occasion of COSPAR provides an opportunity for the City of Astronomy partnership to share those wonders with the public during AstroFest,” says Janice Lee, an astronomer at IPAC, Caltech’s science and data center for astronomy, and chair of AstroFest 2018.

COSPAR is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. It was founded in 1958—the same year the U.S. launched the Explorer 1 [https://www.jpl.nasa.gov/missions/explorer-1] spacecraft, a research satellite built and operated by JPL. •

Pasadena City Hall.

Congratulations to Steve Jensen for winning last week's drawing. His correctly answered last week's quiz: "What is 'Fudge' made of?"
Steve's answer: "Fudge is made of a mixture of milk, cream, sugar, and other ingredients and is used for other things besides just being eaten." (Note: This is a humorous example of a wrong answer.)
