ECHS Student Presentations on Community Forum Day

Eleventh grade students present to community members about their intersession projects on Community Forum Day at Lawndale's Environmental Charter High School (ECHS) on February 2. Pictured left to right: David Ramirez, Cristina Valadez, Franyelika Ortiz and Abel Escobar. The 11th graders explored the question, "What Role Do Changes in Demographics and Property Play in the Process of Gentrification?" In order to better understand the process of gentrification, students researched changes in property and demographics of their local community and analyze the role that they play in this process. ## What's Keeping People Away from Local Beaches?

By Rob McCarthy

The South Bay is shaped by the coastline, and so is the lifestyle in those communities. Locals choose to live here for the ocean views and the vibe that comes from living near the water. The beach belongs to every Californian. However, throngs of would-be visitors never come to visit, and now we know why.

"If you say 'California' to anybody, the coast or the beach is going to be one of the first things that pops into anyone's mind," said Jon Christensen, who just released the results of a statewide survey about what prevents Californians from enjoying the beaches. What Christensen and his co-researchers discovered is the state's beaches are beyond the budgets of many residents, especially people with lower incomes and families. Going to the beach costs money, the survey by UCLA and San Francisco State University found.

They priced a day trip to the beach (almost $37) and an overnight stay ($605) and found those travel costs were way beyond what Californians were willing to pay to use the beach or stay a night. On average, people are willing to pay $8.75 for parking and $117 for overnight accommodations. Households making less than $50,908 wanted to pay $78 for overnight accommodations, limiting their options to flopping on a friend's couch or camping.

It wasn't always this way, Christensen notes in his report. The Coastal Commission and the Coastal Conservancy focused on keeping beaches open to the public by providing access points. "Overcoming economic obstacles for would-be beachgoers will prove more difficult," he fears. "This generation of challenges can't be handled by the Coastal Commission and the Coastal Conservancy alone, The Legislature and Governor can lead, but it will also take local agencies, philanthropy and nonprofit organizations." Last year marked the 40th anniversary of California's Coastal Act, which guarantees everyone access to the iconic coastal areas and beaches up and down the state.

The poll results of voters statewide and beach surveys pinpointed the three reasons why people who live outside the beach cities say that access to the coast is a problem for them. The cost of parking is high, hotels aren't affordable, and public transportation is limited. Nearly 30 percent of people stay away because they can't swim.

South Bay cities could help by offering free or reduced parking rates on select days, and it doesn't have to be during the summer months only since the area's best weather happens after kids go back to school. Off-peak pricing to park at Dockweiler State Beach, El Segundo, Manhattan Beach, Hermosa or Redondo could lower the barriers and let visitors and first-timers to Vista del Mar experience a view of the Pacific.

To no one's surprise, Dockweiler State Beach attracts more Latinos, African-Americans and people from lower-income households than Santa Monica Beach. Santa Monica attracts a diverse beach crowd that looks like modern-day California, the report said.

Another finding of the survey: An overwhelming majority of California voters say that coastal water quality and the beaches are important to them. That explains why 30 million residents visit a beach at least once a year. "Our coast and beaches are among our most democratic spaces. Despite our differences, we all share a love of the coast and many of the same desires and reasons for coming to the beach," the authors remind us.

A cooperative marketing campaign to visit South Bay's iconic beaches and vistas could go a long way toward making a day at the beach more inviting to inlanders. South Bay cities could help by offering the above-mentioned free or reduced parking rates on select days. Off-peak days pricing to park at Dockweiler State Beach, El Segundo, Manhattan Beach, Hermosa or Redondo could also ensure the message gets out that beaches are everyone's to enjoy. Vista del Mar is translated "view of the ocean," but people want to feel the sand under their feet too.

The report recommends a broad series of steps that public officials and private groups and foundations can take to lower the economic barriers for people living inland. There are groups at the coast and inland doing their part to interest Latino girls in surfing, for example. The Brown Girl Surf group doesn't have a local chapter yet, but given time and some funding it will introduce boys and girls who've never been to the beach to the conclusion that singer Sheryl Crow shares in a song: "I'm gonna soak up the sun while it's still free..." •

Da Vinci Schools’ RISE High to Serve County’s Homeless and Foster Students

By Brian Simon

As the local community continues to monitor the progress of the upcoming Wiseburn High School campus (the future home of Da Vinci Communications, Da Vinci Design, and Da Vinci Science high schools) and onsite aquatics center, a major program arguably a bit under the radar will also take flight this fall. Thanks to a $10 million grant provided by XQ: The Super School Project co-led by Laurene Powell Jobs (the widow of the late Apple co-founder Steve Jobs), the new RISE High launched at Da Vinci Schools will provide educational opportunities for underserved homeless and foster children in the broader Los Angeles County.

A major component of the program will embed school sites within multiple social service-provider locations in high-need areas across Los Angeles (with MOU agreements in process with identified partners). Additionally, a Mobile Resource Center (MRC) will travel to strategic locations to meet students who are disconnected from traditional school campuses. Stops will include areas near shelters and service providers. “Students will be able to track the location of the center via its Twitter handle, as well as on the RISE app,” explained Kari Croft, RISE High Principal. “The MRC will be equipped to serve and support students by providing meals, snacks and water; a washer and dryer; hygiene kits; tutoring and academic support; laptops, computers and Wi-Fi access; outlets to charge cell phones; and school supplies.”

Da Vinci was one of just 10 schools across the country to secure grants in a competition in which 42 judges pored over nearly 700 applications comprised of various ideas to reimagine high schools. Da Vinci Schools CEO Dr. Matt Wunder didn’t think there was much of a chance to win the grant. “It’s not because I didn’t believe in the vision and the team, but because the XQ competition was so extremely competitive—and originally, only five awards were to be handed out,” he said.

The impetus for RISE goes back several years when Wunder maintained a regular dialogue with Natasha Bayus, Team Leader of Volunteer Engagement, at Schools on Wheels—a nonprofit based on Downtown Los Angeles’ Skid Row—that provides 1:1 after-school tutoring and mentoring. Bayus had a counseling internship at Da Vinci Schools and related to Wunder that despite the best intentions, Schools on Wheels could not provide many of the important services these children needed to thrive both academically and personally. In 2014, a small Da Vinci team met with Schools on Wheels officials about the latter potentially becoming its own state-funded school. That team included a colleague of Los Angeles educator Croft, who was also interested in creating a school to serve at-risk students. Da Vinci offered Croft, a Master’s candidate in School Leadership at Harvard University’s Graduate School of Education, a fellowship in 2015/16 during which time she apprenticed with Da Vinci leadership and staff and received input from key stakeholders in education, business and homeless/foster youth providers to help shape the concept for a new charter school called RISE (which stands for Revolutionary Individualized Student Experience).

“Kari wanted to apply for this grant—and along with Da Vinci’s network, we helped bring together an all-star team of educators, industry professionals, nonprofit leaders and students to design the model and write the grant,” said Wunder. “The application itself was an exceptional planning tool and responding to the questions could only accelerate and extend the school design process.”

Croft pointed out the importance of the program to address the major obstacles faced by homeless and foster youth unable to obtain credit in an educational system that places a premium on seat time. “Research shows that homeless and foster youth are 87 percent more likely to leave high school before graduating,” she noted. “The traditional high school models often do not account for the unique and extensive needs of impoverished, homeless, and other types of at-risk students. We believe this mastery/competency and real world-based school will meet disconnected young people where they are and help get them to where they need to go to be successful in school, career and life. If successful, this will serve as a replicable model for other organizations to implement in other high-need counties.”

Funding for RISE will be allocated over a five-year period and used in three major categories—personnel; start-up costs for technology and facilities; and wraparound items such as counseling, health and wellness, housing, and job placement. While Da Vinci will craft the academics as well as offer the academic portion of the program locally, RISE itself won’t be located on the new Wiseburn campus at 201 N. Douglas Street in El Segundo. It will co-locate with social service providers outside of Wiseburn and an MRC will cater to the needs of the most at-risk students. Currently, a small Da Vinci RISE (Da Vinci Flex) serves just under 30 students at the Del Aire Campus. The first resource center outside of Wiseburn boundaries will open this August.

“We believe Da Vinci RISE can meet the needs of a variety of students, including those who need to recover credits, are highly motivated and wish to accelerate their progress toward a high school diploma and/or college degree, have medical needs, are athletes or have a wide variety of extenuating circumstances that require flexibility of schedule, or are interested in incorporating extended work experiences into their education,” said Croft.

Organizers believe that targeting social service provider locations at school sites will allow students to identify a “home” base—so those students can feel empowered and see their needs prioritized. Rather than mandating traditional fixed campus school hours, RISE will provide “flex scheduling” to allow students to meet personal needs and fulfill work, familial and other responsibilities outside of schools. “Each student will work with an Education Team comprised of teachers, parents/guardians, counselors and other supports to create a Personalized Learning Plan (PLP) including a schedule that combines learning experiences in a way that best meets his/her individual needs,” said Croft. “RISE will offer an extended school day, week and year to ensure each student has the time and support of a consistent, stable environment to meet his/her individual needs. Under this system, students can also progress at their own pace.”

The RISE Board of Trustees (under the helm of Da Vinci Schools Board President Chet Pipkin) consists of several prominent community and business leaders. On the academic side Croft will serve as Principal, with RISE co-founder Eric Whalen as Assistant Principal. Wunder will also play a large role, as will Wiseburn Superintendent Dr. Tom Johnstone. “Since the inception of Da Vinci Schools in 2009, both Wiseburn Unified School District and Da Vinci Schools have shared a passion for serving marginalized students who face many obstacles to receiving an excellent education,” said Johnstone. “The XQ Super School Project gives Da Vinci Schools the necessary time and resources to establish a model program that others can learn and benefit from. Wiseburn’s interests in this endeavor are in helping Da Vinci Schools to remove obstacles and barriers so the talented members of the RISE High School staff can fully dedicate their energies to serving these students. In the end, if RISE High thrives and is as successful as I know it will be, we all benefit and all of society wins!” •

News for the City of Good Neighbors from City Clerk Huber

A MADE IN HAWTHORNE “COLD ONE”

If you have been a loyal reader of my column, my solution of every problem that you might be facing is to relax, breathe easy, and go home and have a cold one. “A cold one” implies the consumption of an alcoholic beverage but it doesn’t have to be a beer. Your favorite cold one may be a lemonade or an ice tea. Good news! Now we can have an alcoholic cold one that is brewed right here in Hawthorne. The very first craft brewery will be open for business this week. The grand opening of Los Angeles Ale Works will take place this Thursday, February 16th at 3:30 p.m. The brewery’s owners have been working on the renovation of the warehouse located at 12918 Cerise Avenue for the past calendar year. Like the commercials always say, please drink responsibly. I say, be responsible and don’t drink if you can’t handle it.

ANOTHER BIG RAIN STORM FREE SAND BAGS

A drencher is on the way and is forecast to hit Hawthorne this Friday. If you need to shore up your property and prevent your garage from flooding then here is a chance to keep you dry. The City of Hawthorne is offering free sand bags to residents. A dumpster full of sand and the bags are located on the street in front of our city maintenance yard located at 12501 Truro Avenue.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETING

breakfast will be held outside the historic water tank building of the VFW. Tickets are $5 and can be purchased at the gate. Come early to avoid the crowd.

Mandatory Commercial Organics Recycling for Certain Businesses

California’s Assembly Bill 1826 required mandatory organics recycling as April 1, 2016. At that point, businesses generating eight cubic yards of organic waste per week were required to recycle their organic waste. The law includes schools, hospitals, stores, restaurants, for-profit or nonprofit organizations, as well as residential dwellings with five-plus units. New requirements will be phased in over several years and help California recycle 75 percent of its generated waste by 2020.

This law helps California achieve its aggressive recycling and greenhouse gas emission goals and address climate change. Organic materials (yard trimmings, food scraps and soiled paper) make up 41 percent of the remaining waste stream. Redirecting these resources to composting and digesting operations will save landfill space, generate energy, reduce emissions, and restore soils.

Organic recycling mandates are triggered by timelines and quantities. Key start dates are:

April 1, 2016: Generators of eight or more cubic yards of organic waste per week.

January 1, 2017: Generators of four or more cubic yards of organic waste per week.

January 1, 2019: Generators of four or more cubic yards of solid waste per week.

January 1, 2020: Generators of two or more cubic yards of solid waste per week (pending statewide progress).

Businesses can meet the mandatory requirements by:

– Separating organic wastes and contracting a waste recycling service to collect and recycle organics.

– Recycling organics onsite, or hauling organics offsite for processing.

– Subscribing to a waste recycling service that separates. •

Lawndale Girls Make History

By Adam Serrao

The Lawndale High girls’ basketball team has just gotten finished accomplishing a feat that it had never before achieved in the entire history of the school. With a 43-25 blowout win over the Beverly Hills Normans last Tuesday night at home, the Lady Cardinals walked away with an Ocean League championship for the first time ever. Coming into the season on the heels of a successful campaign last year in which the team finished in second place to Culver City, head coach Anthony Gipson knew that his girls were on the precipice of greatness. Lawndale took the experience that it gained from a successful season one year ago and improved on it while becoming even better. Now, with first place in their division officially clinched, the Lady Cardinals can formally call themselves Ocean League champions for the first time ever.

It was a long time coming, but behind a shutdown defense that held Beverly Hills in check, the Lawndale recorded its sixth win in seven games while simultaneously walking away with a first place standing and league championship. The team’s first place finish broke a streak set by Culver City that saw the Centaurs finish in first each of the last six seasons. Now it’s Lawndale’s time, and senior guard Rejinae Crandell couldn’t feel any better about it. “It feels really great,” Crandell explained with a smile beaming from ear to ear. “It took us years to accomplish this. We came in third place, second... and this year we won the whole thing. It took a lot of hard work.”

Crandell led the team on offense with 12 points on the night, but it wasn’t Lawndale’s scoring that proved to be the difference. A stout defense, spearheaded by senior forward Jazzmin Oddie, provided much of the Cardinals’ firepower on the night. Oddie finished the game with eight steals and proved to be the fly on the court that Beverly Hills just couldn’t seem to swat away. “I thought Jazzmin played her best game of the season,” Gipson said. Oddie was everywhere on the court, stepping in front of passes and swiping in through lanes. Her eight steals were the most on the team, but Crandell also chipped in with six of her own.

It was the Cardinals’ defensive effort that led to Beverly Hills’ inefficient night on offense. The Normans failed to score at least 10 points in any of the four quarters of the game. Despite a slow start, though, Beverly Hills was able to go on a 9-0 run at the end of the first half and began the third quarter outscoring Lawndale by 10 in the opening minutes. That’s when the Cardinxals’ defense got back down to it and held the Normans to just four total points in the fourth quarter while scoring 11 of their own to eventually take an 18-point victory on what also very fittingly happened to be the team’s senior night.

Lawndale will look to a roster full of seniors to call on the experience necessary to have success this postseason. The team’s second place finish one year ago was enough to get them into the second round of the playoffs where they took a 46-41 loss at the hands of Mayfair. The Cardinals (16-9, 8-1) will look back on lessons learned from a long regular season to find even more success in the postseason and maybe even bring home the much-coveted CIF championship trophy.

HAWTHORNE HIGH

The Hawthorne girls’ basketball team is making a certain kind of history of its own. Only unfortunately for the Cougars, it’s the kind of history that teams and coaches alike look to avoid by any means necessary. After opening up the regular season by winning two of their first three games, things were looking up for head coach Paul Mason and the Cougars. That’s precisely when everything began to spiral rapidly out of control.

Dating back to Hawthorne’s last victory in early December, the team has lost 18 games in a row. The Cougars’ main problem has been putting points up on the board. There have been nine matchups this season in which Hawthorne has failed to score at least 10 points in a game. The Cougars have only scored over a total of 20 points three times all year long. Hawthorne began last week with a matchup against the fifth place El Segundo Eagles. The Eagles led by a score of 30-11 at the half and held the Cougars (2-19, 0-9) to just one point in the third quarter to eventually cruise to a 54-16 victory. Hawthorne’s eyes are already set on next season when the team will lose only two seniors and gain much more experience on a roster that should be able to produce both offense and wins.

INGLEWOOD HIGH

The Inglewood girls’ basketball team has had an unsuccessful go of things in this year’s divisional play within the Bay League. Nine straight losses have highlighted an ineffective campaign that was made even more difficult for head coach Charles Michael Cain and his Sentinels with a 76-23 loss at the hands of the Mira Costa Mustangs on the road last Tuesday night. Inglewood only managed two points in the first quarter and three in the fourth as Mira Costa senior Allie Navarette led all scorers with 20 points to bring her team to the win. With four freshmen and two sophomores on the varsity team this year, Inglewood should benefit from experience and maturity in years to come. •

Brady Cements Legacy as Greatest Ever

By Adam Serrao

Whether you hate him, love him or just love to hate him, there is no questioning the fact that Tom Brady is the greatest quarterback to ever play the game of football. Even before Super Bowl LI was played, Brady had already cemented his name atop the list of all-time greats to ever lace up his cleats in the NFL. After playing over two quarters of horrific football, the Patriots, led by Brady, began what is now the greatest comeback in Super Bowl history. Down by 25 points with 8:31 left in the third quarter, Brady never gave up and eventually led his team to a 34-28 overtime victory. Now that all is said and done, it can safely be said that Brady isn’t only the greatest quarterback of all time—but also the greatest football player to ever play the game.

Tom Brady now has a Super Bowl ring to go on every finger of his left hand. In addition to setting a record for the most championships of all time, Brady also earned his record-setting fourth Super Bowl MVP. He passed for a Super Bowl-record 466 yards and devised a historic 25-point comeback when the previous record for largest come-from-behind victory in the Super Bowl had been 10 points. As much as everybody sat there with beers in their hands rooting for the quarterback who seemingly has it all to stumble...there he stood, as unflappable as ever, turning in one of the greatest performances ever on the biggest stage in America.

In the final quarter-and-a-half of play, Brady didn’t only bring his team back from the dead. Brady brought his team back from the dead with one of the greatest performances ever. The quarterback cemented his legacy as the best by going 26 of 33 for 284 yards, two touchdowns and zero interceptions. At a time when just one tiny mistake would have sealed the Patriots’ fate as Super Bowl losers, Brady remained flawless. In the same amount of time, Brady’s quarterback rating was 122.7. A normal, well-above-average quarterback rating is right around 105. Brady even did it with his legs. A quarterback that used to be absolutely immobile took off on a 15-yard run on third-and-eight for a first down when a forced punt would have almost certainly lost the game.

Despite leading his team to just three points in the first half and throughout their first seven drives, Brady showed up when it mattered most. He realized that his best bet to avoid double coverage was to avoid the middle of the field. Rookie Malcolm Mitchell then became his target of choice on the outside portion of the field. Brady used his pass-catching running back out of the backfield, James White, who eventually recorded a Super Bowl-record 14 receptions—most of which came on check-downs. The Patriots wound up scoring on four separate drives that spanned 70 or more yards and took 10 or more plays. The Atlanta Falcons went a span of 68 minutes (including halftime) without touching the football. Throughout a stretch of 29 plays in the second half, Brady converted 24 first downs. The Patriots converted a total of 37 first downs in the game, while Atlanta managed only 17.

In the end, it was Brady standing there on the podium once again, raising the Super Bowl championship trophy in one hand and his Super Bowl MVP trophy in the other as red, white and blue confetti fell from the NRG Stadium ceiling in Houston, Texas. “We’re bringing this sucker home!” an elated Brady shouted to thousands of Patriots fans who had just finished watching their quarterback make history. Brady and the Patriots didn’t hold a lead in the game for one minute before the first overtime in Super Bowl history began. Yet, when the coin flip landed in the Patriots’ favor, everyone knew what was about to happen.

“Just play every play,” said Patriots receiver Julian Edelman. “Play every play.” By not giving up and playing every play, the Patriots rattled off 31 consecutive points, with an absolutely ridiculous catch by Edelman added in, to eventually win the game. The Falcons had their chances to ice the clock. They were up by 25 points. Instead of simply running the ball, though, they kept giving Brady and his offense chances. When running out the clock was key, the Falcons ran the ball four times in the second half as they watched their more-than-three-touchdown lead slowly disappear. “When they got hot, it was hard for us to deal with,” Falcons head coach Dan Quinn explained after the game. The Patriot defense stepped up to rattle Matt Ryan and the offense converted time and time again to exhaust Atlanta’s defense. New England gave the Falcons the first half. The Patriots shined, though, in the minutes that mattered most.

Now that the game is over, it’s easy to look back and realize that the Patriots did what the Patriots always do. Whether you love the team or you hate them, whether you’re tired of seeing them win or have just come to expect it, Brady did what Brady always does. Bill Belichick also did what Belichick always does and the Patriots did what they have now done more than any other team in football history. Tom Brady wasn’t going to let his team lose. A 25-point deficit just led everyone to believe that he had no other choice. Brady accomplished the unbelievable. He did what no one possibly thought could be done. With a win in Super Bowl LI, Tom Brady made history and ascended to the ultimate level of greatness. Even if you hate him, you’ll always be able to look back and say that you had the chance to watch the greatest quarterback to ever play the game. Super Bowl LI was his greatest performance. •

You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown

The ordinance adopts and modifies 2016 edition of California Building Code to the greater requirements than those set forth in California State Building Standards and reasonably necessary for the local climatic, geological, or topographical conditions. The aforementioned codes together with certain amendments, deletions, exceptions, and qualifications, generally deal with all aspects of building construction, specification of building materials, plumbing design, water supply and drainage systems, approved construction and plumbing techniques, electrical specifications, engineering formulas to be utilized during building design, fire safety systems for residential buildings, retrofitting techniques, energy conservation techniques, and special requirements dealing with fire and seismic safety. ## A black and white close-up photograph of a cat's face. The cat has dark fur with lighter patches on its face and chest. Its eyes are wide open and looking directly at the camera. The background is plain and light-colored.

Madison

Madison is a sensitive soul who tries to understand what you are saying while looking deep into your eyes. She appears to be holding out hope to one day learn your innermost thoughts. Unlike Gabby, her extroverted sister, Madison prefers hanging back for a few moments to evaluate each situation. Once clear, she'll hop down from her cat tree and demand cuddles and pets. This five-month-old darling wants very much to find a human or two with whom to bond and cuddle. She's a real love bug. True to her Tortie coloring, she is very affectionate, silly, devoted and vocal about her likes and dislikes. She also enjoys children and playing games with them. Madison would like to be adopted with her sister Gabby or her brother Ryan.

Ryan is a happy-go-lucky guy who gets along with everyone. He has an easygoing personality and generally takes things in stride. He's a goofy fellow too--not fully comfortable with his ever-growing long legs and body. He loves cuddles and playtime, and is full of energy. Luckily, he is constantly entertained by his sisters Gabby and Madison. Ryan would do well being adopted with one or both of them or as a buddy to another playful cat who is open to having a friend. Ryan is very interested in being friends with a dog, but he has sadly not yet met any wanting to be friends with him. Ryan loves playing and cuddling with older children and doesn't mind being slightly mauled and carried around by

Gabby is a classic Tortie: affectionate, assertive, goofy and devoted. She is a bit of a chatterbox and will greet you with some meows when you enter a room. She immediately warms up to strangers, curling up on their laps and giving them big cat kisses with her eyes. She would like a human or two of her own, though. Torties are known to be loyal and most affectionate with their core family. She would like it to be known that she will be in charge of your house. Any cats she lives with must be comfortable knowing that she will be the alpha and they must be confident enough to endure her grumbles. Gabby is not a fan of dogs, although she has always lived with one and will tolerate them. She likes respectful children who will play with her. Gabby would like to be placed in a home ready to worship her with cuddles and kisses. She would like to be adopted with her sister Madison, also a Tortie, and who seems to understand her best...or her brother Ryan, who is comfortable playing the beta to her alpha.

Violet is a wonderful little girl. She nearly starved to death at birth, but was rescued by dedicated Kitten Rescue volunteers and placed into a warm and loving foster home with her two siblings. Violet, a once independent cat, has become very loving and cuddly. She

Beauregard

Beauregard is a very playful and loving kitten. This little guy was rescued from the front steps of a home with two siblings. His foster family says it will find it hard to part with Beauregard as he's a real snuggler, particularly at night. He has been known to purr the night away--content to sleep at their feet or come under the covers for a quick soft pet. He's got amazingly soft fur and no bad habits. Beauregard would love to be adopted into a loving home. He has been raised with teens and the family's four-year-old, so he is a great family cat. He'd be just fine with a loving adult as well, but he'd be quite

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org. Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Boulevard, #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

On Saturdays, we have adoptions from noon to 3:30 p.m. in Westchester at 8655 Lincoln Boulevard, just south of Manchester Avenue, and also in Mar Vista at 3860 Centinela Avenue, just south of Venice Boulevard. Our website lists additional adoption sites and directions to each location. •
