6 Great Movies You've Probably Never Seen

By Pete Whalon

The following is a public service for those who love great movies and are not opposed to watching a flick that was made more than six months ago. There are so many fantastic movies available on DVD that I'm sure 80% of the viewing public has never had the pleasure to watch. Below is a synopsis of six films from the past you probably missed. Do yourself a favor and get your hands on these classics soon. Don't let the year of their release scare you--an unforgettable movie is timeless!

1. The Last Detail--1973-Jack Nicholson. Two bawdy, tough looking navy lifers - "Bad-Ass" Buddusky, and "Mule" Mulhall - are commissioned to escort a young pilferer named Meadows to the brig in Portsmouth. Meadows is not much of a thief. Indeed, in his late teens, he is not much of a man at all. His great crime was to try to steal forty dollars from the admiral's wife's pet charity. For this, he's been sentenced to eight years behind bars. At first, Buddusky and Mulhall view the journey as a paid vacation, but their holiday spirits are quickly depressed by the prisoner, who looks prepared to break into tears at any moment. And he has the lowest self-image imaginable. Buddusky gets it into his head to give Meadows a good time and teach him a bit about getting on in the world. Lesson one: Don't take every card life deals you. Next, he teaches Meadows to drink, and, as a coup de grace, finds a nice young whore to instruct him in lovemaking. Mule, who worries aloud about his own position with military authority, seems pleased with Meadows's progress. However, when the trio reach Portsmouth, the game comes abruptly to an end as reality sets in.

2. Lost in America--1985-Albert Brooks-Julie Hagerty: David and Linda Howard are successful yuppies from L.A. When he gets a job disappointment, David convinces Linda that they should quit their jobs, liquidate their assets, and emulate the movie Easy Rider, spending the rest of their lives travelling around America...in a Winnebago! (This is a kind of large, luxurious mobile home which suits a 1980's yuppie more than the counterculture dropout approach of Easy Rider.) His idealized, unrealistic plans soon begin to go spectacularly wrong.

3. Emperor of the North-1973-Lee Marvin-Ernest Borgnine: It is during the great depression in the US, and the land is full of people who are now homeless. Those people, commonly called "hobos", are truly hated by Shack (Borgnine), a sadistical railway conductor who swore that no hobo will ride his train for free. Well, no-one but "A" Number One (Lee Marvin), who is ready to put his life at stake to become a local legend - as the first person who survived the trip on Shack's notorious train.

4. Twelve Angry Men-1957-Henry Fonda: The defense and the prosecution have rested and the jury is filing into the jury room to decide if a young Spanish-American is guilty or innocent of murdering his father. What begins as an open and shut case of murder soon becomes a mini-drama of each of the jurors' prejudices and preconceptions about the trial, the accused, and each other. Based on the play, all of the action takes place on the stage of the jury room. There is also a 1997 remake with Jack Lemmon and George C Scott that is almost as good.

5. Taking Chance (A HBO movie)-2008-Kevin Bacon: Inspired by the true story of the United States Marine who volunteered to escort the remains of a nineteen year old soldier who was killed in Iraq to his small hometown in remote Wyoming, Taking Chance stars Kevin Bacon in the feature directorial debut of Oscar-nominated producer Ross Katz. Lance Corporal Chance Phelps (USMC) was just nineteen years old when he was killed during active duty. Now, as Lance Corporal Phelps is prepared for his final journey back home, Lieutenant Colonel Michael Strobl (USMC) (Bacon) makes it his personal mission to ensure that his fallen brother is laid to rest with the proper respect. As the journey begins, Lieutenant Colonel Strobl gains a greater appreciation of the sacrifices made in war than ever before. Have a box of tissue close!

6. The Jericho Mile (a USA Channel Movie)-1979-Peter Strauss: Rain Murphy is a man sentenced to life in prison, choosing to do his time in near-isolation, and engages in distance running when given the opportunity for free-time. While his form and speed capture the attention of prison officials who believe he could be competitive for the Olympics, Murphy expresses disinterest. But when the one man he has befriended is taken advantage of by political groups within the prison, Murphy decides to pursue the opportunity presented to him in his memory. This action not only has profound changes on him, but also on the atmosphere of the inmates in the prison and their outlook on the accomplishments he can make.

I truly wish I could erase my memory of these films so I could once again watch them for the first time. •

Your Neighborhood Therapist

By Tom Andre

Welcome to a new column supporting emotional and mental well-being. My name is Tom Andre and I have been working with families, couples and individuals as an Associate Marriage and Family Therapist for the past three years on Main Street in El Segundo. Before that, I worked in entertainment advertising, and in a former life I produced a music festival in South America. I am delighted to be here, and I hope you will find this space both helpful and engaging.

We have a lot to cover. Times are tough for many people.

For some, the stress is financial. One income is not enough for most families. Sometimes two incomes are not enough. With the prices of property, education, and healthcare (and childcare, and groceries, and coffee, and parking...) skyrocketing while salaries muddle along, wallets are squeezed. So is free time.

For others, it's school. If it feels like the only path to a decent life is a great job; and the only way to a great job is a great college education; and the only way a great college education is a great record in high school, which begins with study habits at a rigorous elementary school; and certain elementary schools are "fed" by certain preschools... then if you don't get your child into the "right" preschool and on the "right" path, her life is doomed.

Meanwhile, we are bombarded with messages telling us that our bodies should be better. Our relationships should be better. Our personal brand and our social media presence should be better. It's hard to go outside without a billboard exhorting us to work harder on our imperfect body so we can fit into clothes made for models.

Our mobile devices constantly remind us that other people cook like chefs, take exotic vacations with gorgeous partners, raise delightful children and lead generally flawless lives. It's no wonder that many people feel deeply alone - even when they are in a relationship - and that loneliness is harder to endure during the holidays, when we are besieged by calls to shout out our gratitude for all the world to hear.

And of course, too often in the face of stress and anxiety, alcohol and other substances promise us welcome relief but end up leading us away from the people and the things we care about.

This is by no means an exhaustive list. For many people, it's all of the above.

My hope is that in this space, we as a community will take a hard look at the problems many of us face while also looking compassionately at one another.

In order to do that, I would like to invite you to write to me at tom@tomandrecounseling.com with any questions you may have about handling what is affecting your life, your family, the community or the world. I will answer as many questions as I can privately, and with your permission we will publish the most appropriate for the public. No names will ever be published, and details will always be changed for anonymity.

See you next week.

Tom Andre is an Associate Marriage & Family Therapist (AMFT96089) supervised by Chris Thomas (MFT78020). The information in this column is for educational purposes only and nothing herein should be construed as professional advice or the formation of a therapeutic relationship. •

In 2019, Which Films Felt Spiritually Connected?

By Ryan Rojas, Cinemacy

While it's no doubt that every film is its own singular, unique vision expressed by that filmmaker, it can be seen that certain films circle larger ideas that multiple directors are subconscious of circling. In looking back at the films I watched in 2019, several stood out as feeling more than similar - but spiritually connected.

Below is an excerpt from the original article in which it ran. For a full list of all films, visit cinemacy.com.

The Irishman & Once Upon a Time... in Hollywood

While Martin Scorsese's decades-spanning crime epic does follow the life of a hitman, the film is not just another celebration of criminals like Goodfellas. In The Irishman,

Parasite & Us

Sometimes, the more uncomfortably real a problem or issue is, the more that idea needs to be disguised through something more allegorical so that it can be better understood. It was so refreshing and revitalizing to see each of these next two films in theaters, as both audiences were electrified while watching.

I saw Bong Joon Ho's Parasite after it had been around for a little while, and yet I didn't know anything about it going in (which is exactly how you should see it if you haven't yet). The outhorean film starts as a whip-smart comedy about a low-income family that dupes a more affluent family into hiring each of them in their home, then becomes a head-spinning twisty horror that reveals another level to this concept. Ultimately, it becomes a politically charged piece (like all of Bong

Leonardo DiCaprio in Once Upon a Time... In Hollywood (Sony), the cast of Us (Universal), Robert DeNiro in The Irishman (Netflix), and the cast of Parasite (Neon).

Scorsese, now all of 77 years old, seems to be very much consciously reflecting on the end of his filmmaking career. He chooses to depict the story of Frank Sheeran (Robert DeNiro) through Sheeran recounting his life's end in an assisted living facility.

So too does Quentin Tarantino reflect on a similar sense of displacement in a shifting culture, as Once Upon a Time... in Hollywood shows former leading man Rick Dalton (Leonardo DiCaprio) struggling to admit that his best days are behind him and that he's eclipsed from relevancy. Tarantino's and Scorsese's films both act as meta-tributes to the things they're known for doing best (Scorsese making a "gangster" film, Tarantino making a showy Hollywood romp).

However, both directors imbue a piece of tragedy in their leading men's futile attempts to preserve a time that they know, or knew. It's heartbreaking that both Irishman and Hollywood end with each of their leading men - after having endured a lifetime of battles and achievements, and who should feel triumphant for it - being very much alone. After a lifetime of great accomplishments between Scorsese and Tarantino, these films feel as if even masters can feel a sense of emptiness and longing.

Joon Ho's films) that highlights the divide in the world through economic inequality.

Jordan Peele's follow up to Get Out - Us - uses a classic horror set up to show a film about a family and their doppelgängers who seek revenge in the world by taking their place all across America. Peele has proven that he's aware of the meaning of every shot, and every piece of what goes into a film so that horror can be effective in informing people of real-world issues. •

6 Simple Steps to Take Control of Your Finances

(BPT) - As we say goodbye to the holidays and hello to a new decade, it comes as no surprise that money is the No. 1 driver of stress for many of us in the Midwest. That's according to the inaugural Midwest Money Mindset Survey conducted by Huntington.

The survey found that 50% of participants cited money and finances as the top driver of stress, ahead of family and personal relationships, employment and health. The survey also dug into the reasons for that stress and found a silver lining: many people are taking steps to take control of their financial well-being. Take a look at these stats:

- Compared to a year ago, 68% of participants are either saving more money or the same amount.
- More than half of participants (56%) have a retirement account.
- Almost two-thirds of survey participants (64%) have established a "rainy day fund."

Andy Harmening, senior executive vice president, Consumer and Business Banking director for Huntington, says personal finances don't need to be overwhelming. He offers the simple ways to better understand and manage your personal finances in 2020 and beyond:

Look at the complete picture: Find out who you owe, interest rates, late fees and timing. Then determine how much is coming in and out each month and understand your investment opportunities and tax picture. Talk to your partner, dependents or other family members and get on the same page.

Track your behaviors: Cashless and one-click spending can make it hard to see where your money is going, especially those small purchases that compound quickly. Sophisticated online banking solutions, such as Huntington's new Spend Analysis tool, can give you an eye-opening look into how your spending adds up so you can make smart adjustments.

Automate as much as possible: Direct deposits and automatic bill payments ensure nothing gets overlooked or falls through the cracks in spending and saving. Not to mention, paying bills on time every time helps you maintain a good credit history and boosts your credit score.

Make a plan for debt: From basic control of your budget to plans for consolidating debt and negotiating with creditors, there are many ways to handle debt. Decide which works best for you and take steps to bring debt down. Then, make changes to avoid additional debt. A tool like Huntington Heads Up helps you do this by alerting you about areas where you've over spent and might want to pull back.

Set goals: It's never too early to begin your long-term planning for retirement, which should be top of the list for most Americans. Near-term goal planning is essential as well, so keeping your attention on a down payment for a home or reducing credit card debt can help to keep you motivated - as long as you're balancing your short- and long-term goals.

Stay focused: Money can be complicated, and it's easy to slip up here and there. If you make a mistake, don't throw in the towel on the progress you've made. Regain your focus and stay on track. Your momentum will benefit you in countless ways, from reduced stress and improved confidence to a bigger bank account and more.

"With our Midwest Money Mindset survey, we not only know that managing personal finances is a top concern of Americans today, but we're pleased to see people taking action to help manage this incredibly important part of their lives," Harmening said. "We're glad Huntington can be part of the solution people are looking for as they improve their financial health." •
