The Thing About Houston

Article and photos
by Ben & Glinda Shipley

To the outside world, Texas can sometimes seem like an over-sized cast-iron skillet—flat, hot, dry, and spilling over with big-talking Texans in cowboy hats and bolo ties. Drop a bowling ball on the ground in the Panhandle and watch it slowly and steadily roll past a ranch, an oil derrick, and a pile of money clear across the state to the sea. Ask a Texan, and per their reputation, everything here is bigger, better, faster, tougher, stronger, louder, taller—and on and on—than anywhere on Earth.

Yet, unlike most clichés, which bear some grounding in reality, these prejudices couldn’t be less descriptive. Houston, on the Gulf of Mexico, lives a world apart from Dallas, much less Midland, Lubbock, or El Paso. As the fourth largest urban complex in America, it belongs to the eccentric, charismatic seaside culture that curves around from New Orleans through Galveston to Corpus Christi. Texas was born here in 1836, at the eighteen-minute Battle of San Jacinto, but the offspring grew into a vibrant fountain of activity.

In the summers, Houston sends surfers and sun worshippers to the nearest beaches to escape the thick blanket of seaborn humidity. In the autumn, it braces with the rest of the Gulf for floods and hurricanes—and sends rescue workers by the hundreds to help the less fortunate. As one of the most diverse cities in America, Houston was the only major metropolis to get through the 1960s without a race riot. In 2009, with a vibrant LGBTQ community, it elected the first openly lesbian mayor of a major US city. It is a mecca for space exploration and medical research, and home to some of the best educational facilities in America. And yet, when Glinda first brought Ben here to meet the folks, the first thing he wanted to see was the Houston Ship Channel.

The Channel in question was dredged out of the Buffalo Bayou and Galveston Bay in an operation that started in 1836 and continues to this day. If you’re interested in industrial tourism—and admittedly, not many people are—this is one of the great anthropological sites of the world. Petroleum refineries, chemical plants, steel works, paper mills, grain elevators, high-tech plants and laboratories, construction companies—along with the docks, wharves, warehouses, engineers, and roustabouts to service them. Admittedly, it’s no environmental paradise, but if you want a true feeling for the scale of American ingenuity and organization in our first two hundred years, look no further. And at a time when former mega-complexes like Detroit, Pittsburgh, and Buffalo have dialed back their industrial ambitions, the Ship Channel and the city it serves are bringing in the largest expansion in their history.

Oil and its gusher of exports might have financed the explosion of growth in Houston, but they don’t necessarily define the place. Glinda’s family were rice farmers in the wet expanse of land to the southeast that made this and Louisiana two of the richest granaries of the world. The damp weather also made the ground hospitable for sugar and cotton, and those crops ushered in one of the bleaker periods in the city’s history, as the hub of a short-lived slave state that joined the Confederacy. After the Civil War, Texas did its worst to suppress its Blacks and poor Whites, but with the western frontier and Mexico so close, and with a chronically tight labor market, the region never quite fell into the ignorant slumber of the Deep South that so distressed Mississippi’s William Faulkner.

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965—both brought to fruition by the Texan Lyndon Johnson—transformed America, and nowhere more so than in Houston. Attracted by their growing power base and quality of life, Blacks flocked here in ever-increasing numbers, followed in the 1970s by Mexicans and Asians. For the traveler, this increasingly urbane heterogeneity is reflected in the eclectic local offering of arts, culture, and cuisine.

If you’re from California, with its Sonoran and Baja Californian influences, Tex-Mex cooking is an acquired taste—think enchiladas and Stretch, That’s It, Stretch For The Sky!

By Ron Sokol

Joseph Pilates was born in Germany in 1883. He was not well as a child, suffering from asthma, rickets, and rheumatic fever. Joseph would dedicate his life to improving his physical strength, write several books about it, and gain a very devoted following that included many dancers. Pilates today is a well-recognized method of coordination of body, mind, and spirit. The methodology is enhanced by equipment in which Joseph also had a guiding hand.

This leads to Eva Texido Font, who hails from Catalonia, Spain (about 9,611 kilometers from Hawthorne, where she resides). The City of Hawthorne has some 87,000 diversified residents, nice parks, good schools, Space X, and is centrally located. I would also dare say Hawthorne includes some of the most unique and remarkable people on earth.

Eva (pronounced Ava) was one of six children. As a young girl, she liked to dance and became quite accomplished at it. So much so that in 1994 she contracted to perform in Japan as part of a Spanish-Japanese show. When that ended, she auditioned for a show to be performed in Las Vegas, Nevada (also quite a distance from Catalonia, Spain). She was told she was just too short and would never find a job in Vegas. Not only was she hired, but typically she was the shortest dancer hired for the show.

Eva would spend 17 years there as part of very popular magic shows and dance

The Importance of Planning Your Own Funeral

(BPT) - At some point, most of us will need to make final arrangements for someone we will miss. Coupled with overpowering grief, making even the simplest decisions about a funeral or cremation service can be confusing and overwhelming, especially since those decisions often need to be made in the days immediately following a death. Occasionally, decisions are made in haste and leave loved ones feeling like they didn't do enough to truly honor and celebrate a unique life.

By working with a funeral professional to plan your service ahead of time, you give your loved ones peace of mind and comfort, as well as remove a potential financial burden. Here are four reasons to plan your own funeral or cremation.

Your loved ones can focus on healing. When you pass, you will leave behind people who are deeply saddened by your absence. The days and weeks right after your passing will be emotionally difficult. Having all your arrangements in place and your final wishes documented will help relieve some of the stress involved in planning your memorial service and allow those who loved you most to concentrate on coming together and comforting one another.

It's a good financial decision. The cost of

How Many Couples Make Long-Term Financial Decisions Together?

(BPT) - Should married women and men be equally involved in long-term financial decisions? Your answer is likely a resounding yes! The problem is, although everyone agrees a joint financial approach is best for spouses, it's rarely happening in reality.

According to the 2021 “Own Your Worth” report from UBS, the world's largest global wealth manager, nearly 100% of women and men believe women should be more involved in long-term financial decisions, such as investing, financial planning and estate planning. What's more, women and men overwhelmingly believe that unless women are equally involved in these decisions, there will never be true gender equality.

Despite these strong beliefs, in heterosexual marriages, men continue to manage most of the finances. Seven in 10 men say they take the lead on long-term financial decisions, often believing they know more about long-term finances than their spouse. But there's good news: Among men who take the lead, nine in 10 wish their spouse was more involved in long-term financial decisions.

Both women and men agree that making long-term financial decisions together would increase their confidence in the future, minimize financial mistakes and reduce anxiety about money. Currently, only about 20% of couples make long-term financial decisions together.

Surprisingly, this is even more common in younger couples. Prior to marriage, 88% of millennial women plan to share long-term financial decisions equally or take the lead.

living has increased over the years, and so has the cost of the average funeral. By planning ahead, you can lock in today's pricing. A burial space in a beautiful, serene section of your local cemetery could increase in value before the time of your passing. When you pre-arrange your final arrangements that burial spot will remain the same price as it was when you bought it, protecting your loved ones against rising inflation.

You can plan almost every detail in advance. Prepaid funeral plans typically include almost every aspect of your final arrangements, from the services of the funeral director to the casket of your choosing to the venue you select and more. Often, you can even select flowers and mementos for family and friends. And, by documenting all of your wishes, your family will know to incorporate additional special touches, such as song selections, special readings or videos.

Your final wishes are recorded. Perhaps you would prefer a small, intimate memorial service, but your loved ones envisioned a flashy, expensive send-off. Planning final wishes ahead of time takes the guesswork out of the equation and could alleviate feelings of guilt your loved ones might have down the road if they second-guess their decisions about your memorial service. Instead, they will take solace in knowing that your final arrangements were "exactly what mom wanted."

But after marriage, only 15% of millennial women make these decisions together. Fifty-one percent defer to their spouses - more than any other generation.

The importance of equal spousal participation is something that became clear the moment that John had an unexpected heart attack at age 34. Fortunately, John survived and he and his wife, Chris, learned an important lesson. They now communicate regularly about finances and have everything documented in writing. This gives them both confidence in the future no matter what happens.

John and Chris’s story is part of “Real life, real stories,” an Own Your Worth video series found at UBS.com/women which shows how real people manage money, what’s at stake and lessons learned.

“Participation is the key to change,” says Carey Shuffman, Head of the Women’s Segment at UBS. “It’s critical for women to take their seat at the ‘money table’ so they can actively design the life and legacy they want. Men can be instrumental allies in removing barriers so active participation is possible.”

George, a retired Baby Boomer and husband to Bonnie, agrees. “With us discussing all the financial decisions that we made, it helped us to make the best decisions because two heads are always better than one. My wife has a good handle on all the finances, so when I’m gone I have peace of mind she will do the right thing.”

First steps for equal financial involvement Every couple’s situation is unique, but the most important thing is to get started together. Schedule regular conversations about where your finances are currently and your vision for the future. Be open, honest and value each other’s opinions. To help share long-term financial decisions equally, ask each other some questions:

- What do you want to accomplish in your life?
- Who are the people that matter most to you?
- What do you want your legacy to be?

- What are your main concerns?
 - How do you plan to achieve your life’s vision?
- “When couples participate equally in long-term decisions, they feel greater confidence in achieving their goals, greater satisfaction in their financial situations and less stress about money, so this is a very powerful step in any marriage,” said Shuffman. “The importance of participation in long-term financial decisions doesn’t just apply to women in couples - women who are not in a partnership can ask these questions of themselves, or speak with other trusted loves ones, peers, or a financial professional, to help them get started.” •

describing the measures taken to alleviate the condition which led to the adoption of Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05; and
WHEREAS, on March 15, 2022, the City Council held a duly noticed public hearing and took testimony regarding Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05; and
WHEREAS, after considering the Report from staff and hearing public comments, the City Council finds that the causes for adopting the Interim Ordinance have not been alleviated, and that there is a current and immediate threat to the public health, safety, and welfare of the City to justify an extension of Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 for an additional ten (10) months and fifteen (15) days (or to the effective date of a City adopted short term rental ordinance, whichever is first), commencing on March 15, 2022; and
WHEREAS, an extension of Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 requires a four-fifths vote of the City Council for adoption.
NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF INGLEWOOD does ordain as follows:
SECTION 1. The City Council hereby finds and determines that the recitals set forth above are hereby adopted and incorporated herein as a portion of the City Council’s findings in support of the extension of Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 including all the reasons set forth in the staff report and all other documents prepared in connection with this Interim Ordinance, which are hereby expressly incorporated as though fully set forth herein, and for the following additional reasons:

A. A shortage of affordable housing still exists throughout the State of California, including the City of Inglewood; and
B. Advances in technology (AirBNB, VRBO, HomeAway and other similar websites, collectively “Online Platforms”) have made it increasingly popular for persons to engage in the short term rental of dwellings as a business and thereby removing home ownership and long term rental housing from the City; and
C. The City must preserve its available housing stock for long term renters who contribute to the City’s cultural and ethnic diversity, and economic revival; and
D. If left unregulated, the short term rental of dwellings can increase demand for public services, negatively affect the character of residential neighborhoods and weaken community bonds that are vital for a city to flourish; and
E. The City believes it currently has hundreds of short term rentals within its borders with the commensurate lack of neighborhood and community grounding normally associated with homeownership and long term rentals; and
F. The large number of short term rentals within and around the City of Inglewood contribute to an overall negative aesthetic image and do not promote complete neighborhoods, active living, neighborhood interaction, or economic development; and

G. The City needs to continue to gather and process short term rental data in order to draft an effective but balanced approach to regulating the industry.
SECTION 2. Based on the above findings and all evidence in the record, there is a current and immediate threat to the public health, safety, or welfare, and that the approval of use permits, variances, building permits, or any other applicable short term rental entitlements would result in a threat to public health, safety, or welfare. It is therefore a need to extend Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 maintaining a moratorium on all new short term rental within the City of Inglewood.
SECTION 3. During the time that Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 is in effect, the City shall not approve or issue land use approvals or permits, including but not limited to, use permits, building permits, variances, zoning code amendments, tentative subdivision or parcel maps, site plan approvals, design review approvals, or other permits or entitlements, whether administrative or discretionary, for short term rentals.
SECTION 4. Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05, adopted by the City Council on February 1, 2022, and extended by this Council on March 15, 2022, is hereby extended, following a duly noticed and conducted public hearing, for ten months and fifteen days, or the effective date of a City adopted short term rental ordinance, whichever is first.

SECTION 5. This Ordinance, extending Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05, shall be introduced, passed and adopted at one and the same meeting and shall become effective immediately.
SECTION 6. If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, phrase or word of this Ordinance or Interim Ordinance No.: 22-05 is for any reason held to be invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of either Interim Ordinance. The City Council hereby declares that it would have passed and adopted both Interim Ordinances, and each and all provisions thereof, irrespective of the fact that one or more provisions may be declared invalid.
SECTION 7. The City Clerk shall certify that this Interim Ordinance was passed, approved and adopted by the City Council of the City of Inglewood at a regular meeting thereof held March 15, 2022.

overstuffed burritos made with flour tortillas and loaded down with cumin, yellow cheese, and refried beans. Restauranteurs like Felix Tijerina (of Felix’s, since closed and reopened as Uchi, a gourmet Japanese eatery) and the Anaya brothers (of Don Jose Mexican Restaurant) have led the way in adapting Mexican cuisine to mainstream American palates.

If you crave true Mexican, the uber-imaginative, award-winning Hugo’s on Westheimer is our favorite outside of Mexico City. Think of goat, pork, barbacoa, scallops, and shrimp, in all manner of vegetables and exotic sauces (especially their mole poblano and salsa terasca), with pyramids of flavored rice. Our favorite drink at the bar is la Tricolor, named for the Mexican flag—three narrow sipping glasses of white tequila, spicy tomato, and lime juice.

But as noted, the Mexicans came late to Houston. Long before them, the city was famous as a center of soul food (Esther’s, This Is It), seafood (Christie’s, Caracol), Cajun (Cajun Kitchen, Ragin’ Cajun), BBQ (Corkscrew), and various in-betweens. And in recent times, the influx of Vietnamese and other Asians has infused the restaurant scene with all manner of new aromas and flavors.

Along with Hugo’s, Don Jose, the Cajun Kitchen, and the Houston National Cemetery—where Glinda’s mother and father (a veteran of Okinawa) lie at rest—our regular stops in Houston include Galveston, the nearby beach town that has no business existing. Hurricanes have repeatedly tried to blast this historic community into the Gulf. Every decade or so, the locals evacuate to safer ground, then crawl back for yet another round of re-building. Our favorite marker on the Galveston Seawall recalls the Balinese Room, a nationally famous speakeasy we used to frequent, where the bartender invented the Margherita for the visiting Peggy Lee. In 1951, when Galveston County Sheriff Frank Biaggne was asked why he hadn’t raided the club’s casino, he complained that, as a non-member, he wasn’t allowed inside.

But most of our time in town is spent visiting with scores of family and friends from the last half-century. And this is the “Thing” about Houstonians and maybe Texans in general—they make friends quickly, and they mate for life. To a longtime wanderer like Ben, the intense mutual gratitude and loyalty shown by nearly everyone you meet—not just to other individuals, but to the state and the country that nurtured them—can be a bit disconcerting. Until you make your own relationships and realize that they’ll be with you forever. Sounds like the human-scale paradise many Houstonians like to think it is.
