South Bay Resident Linda Johnson Gives Back to her Community

By Duane Plank

Connecting with El Segundo resident Linda Johnson for a phone interview had proven to be a challenging task for this Herald scribe. She has been busy working from home, fulfilling her duties as the Member Services representative for the El Segundo Chamber of Commerce, and mastering the magic of Zoom teleconferencing with local business leaders. She had also been busy volunteering, with other members of the El Segundo Woman’s Club, to make the now ubiquitous protective facemasks for essential personnel, and now, all of us, in the area as the COVID-19 pandemic rages-on, including supporting hospitals, pharmacies, and markets. When this story was initially filed, Johnson and her cohorts had artfully stitched and delivered more than 700 facemasks. The mask building has now reached about 1,500.

And then three days before this story was to run back in April, Johnson notified the Herald that she had been furloughed from her job with the El Segundo Chamber of Commerce (COC), another victim of the COVID-19 scourge. Because the Chamber is classified as a 501c (6) organization, they were not eligible for the government’s PPP money, so the budget was squeezed.

Chamber CEO and President Marsha Hansen is eager to get Johnson back on the payroll as soon as possible. “We hope with the next round of the relief package, Chambers will be included,” Hansen emailed. “so that we can get Linda back in the office soon. We are a true team.”

When we were able to speak initially, Johnson had shared her recent attempts to stay business and socially connected. “Zoom is the best,” she said, alluding to a recent El Segundo Education Foundation (Ed!) meeting that was held as people bunkered at home. “Great way to engage.”

Johnson, who has been a Woman’s Club volunteer for the past four years, said she was just “a tiny cog in a big wheel,” of volunteers trying to help in these trying times. She noted that the mask-making idea was germinated by the Woman’s Club, but had mushroomed, as others got wind of the project, and were eager to volunteer their time. She said part of her duties is not only to sew the masks but deliver them. She called her work as a delivery driver for the mask distribution, a “life-changing experience.”

She had gleefully said she made a mask for an autistic child who makes frequent trips to the hospital. She said that the Woman’s Club efforts were a “grassroots program,” seeking to fly under the radar, with all needed supplies being corralled by donations. “I have the best part of it,” she said, alluding to her delivery driver drop-offs to grateful essential workers. “Even if they do not use (the masks), people are just so touched that someone is thinking about them.”

Johnson, an El Segundo High School graduate, has done much more for the community than volunteer at the Woman’s Club. She has served on the board of the El Segundo Education Foundation for more than a decade and is also a pivotal ambassador for the El Segundo Museum of Art (ESMoA).

Barbara Boehm, ESMoA Director of Operations, said Johnson is “one of our rock-star volunteers and friends of ESMoA since day one. I cannot picture an opening without her. She is an advocate and a true friend of ours.”

“Linda enriches ESMoA on so many levels,” emailed Boehm. “She is a wonderful, loving, caring, generous and fun person you can always count on. Her involvement and support at ESMoA are a gift to us and to our community at large.”

Johnson said that she relishes her work with ESMoA, calling it “an amazing educational place,” and that it gives her another opportunity to make a difference and utilize her passion for the arts.

She believes that the ESMoA fills a gap for creative students looking to broaden their horizons and that the groups “art educators are phenomenal.” She feels the vibe of a collaborative El Segundo community that values the support of the arts and science, saying, “supporting our kids is something that I need to be involved with.”

Another passion for Johnson, who graduated from Long Beach State, is her long-standing support for education, which she gets to fulfill by pitching-in with the Ed! Foundation as they attempt to fulfill their pledge to the El Segundo Unified School District for the current school year, a task that has become infinitely more challenging with the implementation of distance-learning.

“I believe that education strengthens you as a person,” Johnson said. “Education gives you opportunities and options.” She said that she has “had a wonderful life because of education.”

Local business owner Neil Cadman, who served multiple years as the Ed! Foundation chairman said Johnson is a pivotal cog in the fundraising group’s success. “She might be the nicest person that I have ever met,” Cadman said. “She is such a positive force, a beautiful person.”

Johnson, who lives in El Segundo with her husband of nearly 40 years, Bob, hopes to

Boys State’s Mock Government Perfectly Simulates Our Democracy–Which is Both Fascinating and Frightening

Ryan Rojas for Cinemacy.com

When Tom Hanks’ Greyhound released on AppleTV+ a few weeks ago, I didn’t feel the need to sign up for the streaming service in order to watch it. Yet after an advanced screening of the new documentary Boys State (available to stream this Friday on Apple TV+), I feel compelled to tell everyone I know that they should absolutely sign up for the streaming service, which is the film’s exclusive distribution platform (and which I

Robert, the political “bro”; and the quiet, yet inspiring Steven—each of whom bring different ideologies and politics to their part of camp. All bright and scholarly, the fun in the movie is watching them all jockey and campaign to win the votes of their respective campers, making for suspenseful, funny, and by the end, moving moments.

While it might be sad that we’ll know that some of these young men will inevitably become corrupted in their road to politics, might have to do just to watch it again, and then maybe check out Greyhound).

The new release from A24, Boys State first premiered at the Sundance Film Festival earlier this year and was awarded the Grand Jury Prize for Best Documentary. An annual event put on by the prestigious American Legion (a national institution that’s included members such as Dick Cheney and Rush Limbaugh), Boys State shows a week-long camp of 1200 teenage boys—all politically aspiring in their own ways— whose primary objective is to “run for office” of their respective Federalist and Nationalist parties, and win the votes needed to secure desired positions. What ends up being captured is an incredible simulation of our very own American democracy, if it were run by children (I won’t put too fine a point on thoughts if this is how our political system feels like it’s currently being run).

There are a few characters that Boys State follows—including Ben, the political junkie;

Boys State also brings the hope that we are truly witnessing new voices in the next generation that will lead us to a brighter future and better state.

Distributed by A24, ‘Boys State’ is available to stream on Apple TV+ this Friday. •

Borders & Boundaries

By Dr. Don Brann

This is the first of my occasional columns around topics pertinent to El Segundo and its surrounding cities or areas. I’ll cover a variety of issues or observations such as boundaries/borders, residential life east of Pacific Coast Highway (PCH), the historical Japanese presence in El Segundo, comparing/contrasting local schools and so on.

Before I begin topic one, I want to dedicate these columns to my infamous great grandfather, William Cowper Brann. Brann’s “The Iconoclast,” was a newspaper published in Waco, Texas, and had more than 100,000 subscribers west of the Rockies in the 1890s. Brann was very opinionated, possessed a large vocabulary and was bombastic in his writings and oratory. He was fearless and willing to take on established powers. Eventually, Brann was attacked and then killed in a downtown Waco duel. He and his work continue to be studied in Texas to this day.

I want to address the borders around El Segundo.

First off, the boundaries of the City are roughly the Chevron Refinery or Rosecrans on the south, the sand dunes between Imperial and Grand, and then the Pacific Ocean on the west, Imperial Highway on the north, and Aviation on the east.

Remember, or know, this town started when Standard Oil located their second (El Segundo means the second in Spanish) California refinery here, so we have blue-collar roots. Actually, despite the nature of that business operation, the southern border may be El Segundo’s most attractive one due to Chevron’s community consciousness. Also, mostly thanks to Continental Development, the Rosecrans section, east of PCH, of the southern border has really been enhanced by the replacement of ugly industrial complexes with attractive retail and office developments east to Aviation.

On the west side of El Segundo, along Vista Del Mar, there is one industrial blight after another between Imperial and Rosecrans—Hyperion and Scattergood Steam Plant (DWP) in the City of Los Angeles with Chevron and Clearway Energy (NRG) in El Segundo.

Would a desalination plant really stand out in this cluster? Perhaps, in its relative beauty. El Segundo has a beach, but is not a “beach city” partly due to the disconnect caused by the industrial plants. Certainly, the Pacific Ocean is the best feature of the west border, but the ambiance does not measure up to the three beach cities to the south. One fairly recent improvement near the west border occurred when the nondescript tank on the south side of Grand was “wrapped,” creating a welcome artistic flair.

El Segundo’s northern border is Imperial Highway and LAX, a major source of noise and air pollution, as well as massive traffic problems visited on El Segundo. The division between the City of Los Angeles and the City of El Segundo is a median strip running east-west in the middle of Imperial Highway from PCH to Pershing Drive.

It is unkempt and ragged, making the view of El Segundo from the north unattractive.

This condition has persisted for years due to neglect by the City of Los Angeles. Typically, the City of LA (LAX) creates a problem for El Segundo like the median or early turns over El Segundo by pilots and then promises to remedy the conditions in exchange for concessions related to airport expansion. LAX is the big, bad “neighbor,” no city should have to tolerate.

The eastern border, roughly Aviation Blvd., from Imperial to Rosecrans, is as ugly as possible, a real eyesore, moving south to El Segundo Blvd. It’s loaded with construction equipment, dirt/debris piles, lumber, etc. related to Metro and LAX projects to the north. It’s been a blight for years, much to the chagrin of Del Aire residents.

On this border, there is some hope caused by the Greenway proposal to create a beautiful walk/jog/bike path that eventually could tie into a network of safe bike paths across El Segundo. The only real remaining obstacle to transforming the east border is a railroad, the BNSF, now unwilling to cooperate (not a surprise!).

On El Segundo Blvd., there is a decrepit railroad bridge spanning the street. Instead of a mural or, at least, a “Welcome to El Segundo” on the east face and “Thanks for Visiting” or “Come Again” on the west face, there is a beige paint period, a wasted opportunity to enhance the east entrance to the City.

So, there you have it, a great City surrounded by four “world-class” borders and bad “neighbors” like the City of LA, LAX and Metro. However, at the same time, average residential market values in El Segundo now have surpassed $1.5 million, so these borders don’t seem to impact or undermine real estate values. In fact, the borders do provide a relative geographical isolation for the City of El Segundo.

With the surrounding boundaries protecting the town and causing the majority of entrances and exits from the east, it’s a choice to visit El Segundo. Unlike travel through surrounding cities, you just don’t drive through El Segundo, as LAX, the Refinery and the Pacific Ocean discourage such a route. •

Neighbors from an Old Guy
named Norb Huber

GOING BACK STRIVING FORWARD

Like so many American who have been in lockdown mode the past few months, my dear wife, Linda, wanted to get out of the house and take a short vacation before the grandkids started back to their virtual, online schooling experience this week. So, we took a spur of the moment trip over to the North Coast this past weekend. We rode the Skunk Train in Fort Bragg and then traveled up the coast to Humboldt and Del Norte Counties ending up in my old hometown of Crescent City. I spent 10 of my formative years right there in the middle of the redwoods and on the beautiful rocky shores of the Pacific Ocean. This weekend, I had the opportunity to show my grandkids my old, stomping grounds. The high temperature was all of 65 degrees, which is typical for CCC, Crescent City California. It is right on the coast and has more foggy, damp and overcast days than not. The redwood groves are incredible. These 300-foot tall trees with 40-foot diameter bases are amazing to walk amongst. It makes you think really how small we are as humans compared to the greatness of God's creation. We drove around the small town to see my old house and the church where my father was the pastor at. I took the family past my schools and the beaches that we would ride our bikes down to. It really wasn't that sentimental or emotional. I had been back once before many years ago. It has been 50 some years since I called Crescent City my hometown. We can't turn back time even if those days were happy ones. We can't go back and relive our pasts. Even if we could, most of us would not like to repeat our past. Would

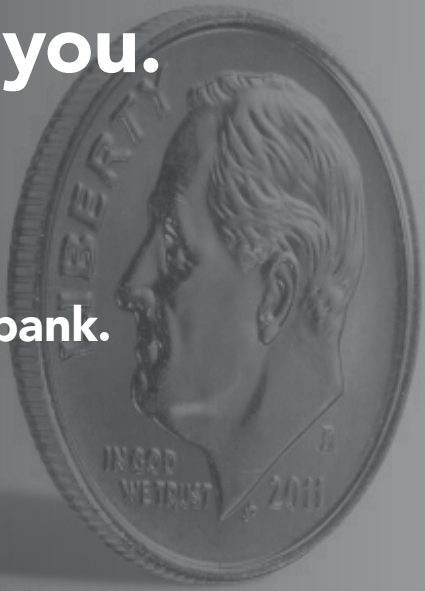

I do things differently? Would I change things now that I can look back on them? Sure, I made some wrong choices. I think I worried way too much about things that really didn't matter. We all live worrying about how others feel about us. The past is the past. God gives us memories to remember what is important. He gives us minds to cherish our family times. He teaches us lessons so that we may learn from our mistakes and not repeat them. We are who we are. We can't live in the past. We can't change our past. We live now and we live looking forward. Every new day gives us another opportunity to live life to its fullest. What the heck, why not have a cold one? Why not love our families, neighbors and friends? Why not spend some of that stimulus money and enjoy life? Why not tell your old lady or old man that you love them? Why not do something stupid and laugh at yourself? Why not just forget about all this virus, social justice, political fighting, looting, rioting, protesting, social distancing, mask wearing regulations and worry less, love more, drink more and relax. If you are reading this junk, you are alive. Why live sad or miserable? Life is too short to die sad or mad. Thank you loyal readers for allowing me to share my story with all 32 of you. I am just one life, one story to share. All of you have stories to tell. All of us are unique. We all have lives that have been amazing. We read in Philippians 3:13-14 "Brothers, I do not consider that I have made it my own. But one thing I do: forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead, I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus." Press on folks, press on with joy, have a cold one, relax and don't look back.

THAT'S IT FOR THIS WEEK

I didn't preach too much. I didn't get political on you. I only used one Bible passage. I only told you to have a cold one twice. I know I have more than 32 readers. Some of you are like secret Trump voters, not wanting to be counted. You are closet readers, you really don't want to admit that you spend 5 or 10 minutes speed reading through this mumbo jumbo, blog-a-trasha. Admit it, come clean, don't hide behind that germ filled mask. You really can't find a worse, newspaper blog like this that tugs at your taste buds like this one advocating drinking to drown away all of your worries. So there, I'm exhausted, that's all I have to give. Be well my friends.

go back to filling her days at the Chamber of Commerce doing whatever tasks are necessary. She was helping promote members through social media, planning community events, like the state-of-the city luncheon and the Main Street car show, fine-tuning myriad community mixers, as well as taking care of the nuts-and-bolts activities like paying invoices, billing COC members, and showing her prowess wielding a vacuum when the need arises at the Chamber's Main Street office. She works in tandem with Hansen, in what Johnson said is "a great partnership, we just love working together."

Prior to beginning her stint with the Chamber, Johnson spent nearly three decades working for El Segundo's Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC), where she rose to the post of senior manager, corporate communications. She was instrumental in developing communication content, working in consort with executive teams to manage all aspects of design and event production. She called her time with CSC "an amazing experience. I am forever grateful for my career with them." She said it was exciting being part of a group that was pioneering technology, and that she "learned something new every six months."

After CSC relocated to Virginia in 2011, Johnson worked as a freelancer for about nine months. She then went to work in Westchester for Otis College of Art and Design, serving as the executive assistant to the president for three years. During her tenure at Otis College, Johnson managed all administrative duties for the office of the president, interfacing with major donors, Board members, community and arts leaders and college leadership. Once Otis selected a new president, Johnson found herself looking for another challenge, and quickly found work at the COC. Timing, it is said, is everything.

When not working or volunteering, Johnson said she likes to paint, draw, exercise, fancying ballet, and fly-fishing, but has not been able to do much fishing in the past few years because of the effects of the long-term drought in California.

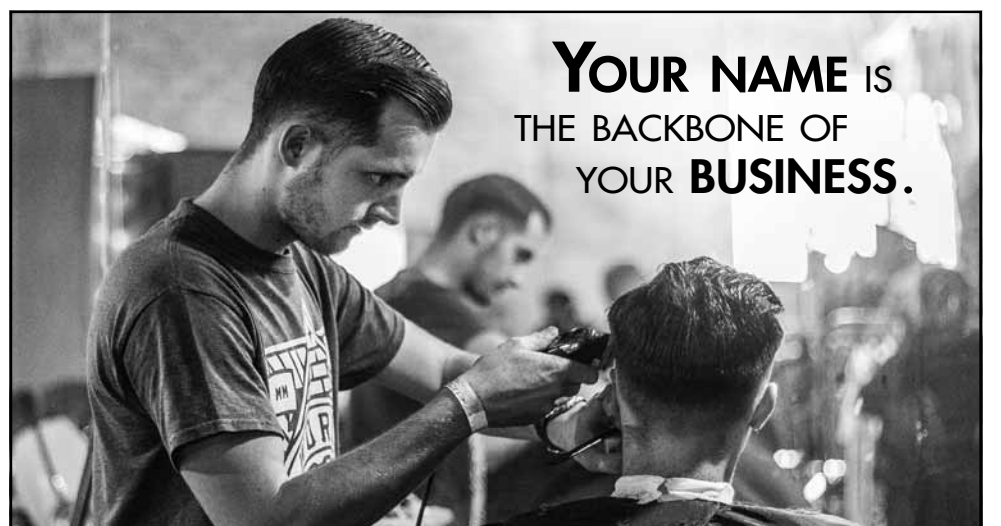

Despite being cooped-up, waiting out this pandemic, Johnson puts a hopeful spin on our current situation, noting that there are valuable "lessons learned" from telecommuting work opportunities and that "you have to try to look at the positive."

Not overly excited about sharing her story with this reporter, Johnson quipped that "I am very reserved about this, can you tell? I do not like to have the focus on me because I am not doing anything special." Many El Segundo community members would beg to differ!

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 09/18/20 at 8:30AM in Dept. 29 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250.
