A Bright New School Year Begins with One For All and LA Bowl

Since 2001, One For All has provided backpacks, school supplies and scholarships to Inglewood and families to prepare students and their families for the academic year. LA Bowl, a yearly college football bowl game planned to take place at SoFi Stadium, has partnered with One for All to provide support in One For All's initiatives throughout the year. In addition to donating school supplies, LA Bowl has donated 200 boxes of fresh produce, which along with the school supplies were handed out to 200 pre-registered families identified by One For All. ## ESPD Officer Kaitlin Ross Makes History in the South Bay

By Duane Plank

Oregon transplant Officer Kaitlin Ross recently made history, becoming the first female officer to patrol the pavement of our city astride a motorcycle in the nearly 100 years that the ESPD has been in existence. She joined a cadre of four other motorcycle officers, all who are veteran law enforcers with wide-ranging experiences.

Ross was born and raised in Oregon. After completing high school, she attended Western Oregon University in Monmouth, Oregon. She received a degree in criminal justice and interned at the Washington County Sherriff’s department. While she was completing the hiring process with the WCS department, she discovered through a college criminal justice career fair that there was a law enforcement opportunity in El Segundo. She applied, passed the initial testing, then was asked to fly down to El Segundo to take a physical test and participate in an in-person interview session. She aced the interviews and testing, then down the road, took off to Europe for a backpacking excursion.

She initially received a conditional job offer from the ESPD. The recent college graduate was traveling through Europe when she was again contacted by a representative of the ESPD and asked to return to El Segundo and finalize the hiring process and complete required testing.

Ross hopped onboard a flight from France, said she passed her testing requirements on a Friday, and started her new patrol job on a Sunday, and has not looked back since.

Ross said she became interested in pursuing a career in criminal justice while she was attending middle school. She said she took courses that continued to pique her interest, finally narrowing down her career ambitions to law enforcement. She said she was looking for a career where she could “make an impact and help people.”

So how does a young woman from Oregon end-up patrolling and safeguarding the streets of El Segundo and making history? Well, emailed ESPD Chief Bill Whelan, a lot of the credit should go to now-retired ESPD Sergeant Ed Villareal, who was at the time supervising ESPD personnel and spearheading recruitment efforts.

With many police departments all over the country struggling the last few years to attract new officers, and retain current officers, Villareal tapped into a connection that he had in Oregon, and Whelan OK’d a recruiting trip to the Beaver State, something he said that the ESPD had not tried before.

Whelan said that upon meeting Ross, department personnel recognized that she was “an outstanding candidate.” He said Sgt. Villareal “immediately recognized she possessed the mindset and the attributes we are looking for in El Segundo.”

The ESPD moved expediently to button-down Ross’s hiring, a process that led to the soon-to-be-ESPD officer to quickly return from her backpacking trip to jet to the South Bay and seal the deal.

Whelan marveled at the fact that Ross was unfazed, in fact, relished, the whirlwind recruitment process. “This is no small undertaking, to be fresh out of college,” he said, “and relocate away from family to begin an incredibly stressful police academy.”

Whelan said that Ross immediately stood-out at the academy with her “academic prowess, physical fitness, and ethical courage.” After graduating from the academy, Ross aced the requisite field training program, which, Whelan said, is “equally if not more stressful” than the police academy. She began her tenure with the department with an assignment to the patrol division.

Whelan said Ross’ “work ethic is unparalleled,” and that, early in her career, had set her sights on becoming a motor officer and was determined to develop the skills necessary to achieve her goal. He said that when it came time to test and select for the motorcycle officer position, “she was an easy choice.”

Because of the pandemic, Ross, who has been with the ESPD for two years, had to postpone her motor school training, but finally found a motor school in Anaheim that was accepting students. Ross said that the motor school comprised three weeks of “intensive riding” with cone-patterns and training in the canyons and local freeways.

“I am very proud of her, not just for

Chemical Hearts Will Get You In Your Feelings

By Ashley DeFrancesco
for cinemacy.com

When we fall in love, our brains are flooded with dopamine and serotonin, also known as the “love drugs.” This chemical concoction makes attraction addictive. For Henry Page (Austin Abrams) this reaction happens almost immediately when he and Grace Town (Lili Reinhart) are partnered as Editors in Chief for their school newspaper in Amazon Studios’ new film Chemical Hearts. Like many teenage to quickly erase it and sigh an admittance that that tactic is the worst. It’s realistic and relatable, not to mention cueing my own memories of doing the same. Reinhart gives Grace layers and depth that show the intricacies and nuances of grief, and how depression can be incapacitating. She has been open about her personal journey with depression making this performance not only grounded but phenomenal.

Although the stereotypical teenage clichés are sprinkled throughout, Chemical Hearts romance films, this story is based on the Young Adult novel Our Chemical Hearts by Krystal Sullivan and the title refers to the chemical reactions in the brain that result from love.

What sets this romantic drama apart from the rest is writer/director Richard Tanne’s use of adolescent struggle and pain. Through Henry and Grace, we see that you cannot force your love on a person if they aren’t ready. Tanne uses the idea of brain chemistry and chemical connections to heighten Henry’s attraction and tireless desire to be with her. But for Grace, the attraction is a welcomed distraction from the everyday reminder that her great love is gone forever.

Abrams and Reinhart’s carefully crafted characters are the most addicting part of this film. Abrams uses small, perfectly timed gestures and pauses to show Henry’s indecisive nature and eagerness to be with Grace. Nothing was more relatable than watching Henry try to craft a perfect text to send, one that would get Grace to respond, only captures the fiery nature of teenage feelings. Though we want our love story to be perfect and simple, Tanne reminds us that we all have cracks, and the hard part isn’t finding love but accepting ourselves.

Distributed by Amazon Studios, Chemical Hearts is available to stream on Amazon Prime Video. •

Huber’s Hiccups

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

PREDICTABLE OR DIRECT?

One of my many critics commented after reading last week’s ramble that this weekly undertaking has become oh so predictable. These are his exact words: “The HH columns are so predictable and have become bland. 1. Make stupid comments about situations in the news. 2. Admonish all to drink beer. 3. Throw in a little Jesus and Scripture. That’s it every week. Time to hang it up.” Well, that’s pretty accurate; I have to agree that this loyal critic hit the preverbal old, rusty, bent nail on the head. So, maybe instead of beating around the burning bushes and tip toeing through the muddy waters of life, as we know it, just maybe I’ll be direct in my approach to things that matter. Will I get fired if I say that ALL lives matter? Will I lose a majority of my loyal readers if I say that I’m voting for Trump? Will I receive some nasty emails if I say that kids should go back to real school and teachers should be “essential workers” and deal with “in person” teaching? I may not be woke enough. I may be viewed as a white privileged racist but I really do care about all of my neighbors regardless of their ethnic makeup, I do care about the unborn babies who are murdered each year, I do care that our communities remain safe and law and order be enforced. It hurts me to see young people getting shot by police, but why do we have to go around burning buildings and rioting to protest a police involved shooting? Does more violence bring about justice? Thanks to cell phone cameras and social media, every incident is immediately broadcast to America. I saw this first hand several years ago when Max, a German Shepherd dog, was shot when he started attacking one of Hawthorne’s finest. The worldwide outcry was amazing and was just a warm up to the reaction to George Floyd and other police shootings. This is serious stuff. I can’t make fun of any of it. I can’t say stupid things so we all can laugh it away. We all have to deal with it all in our own way. I share my views, if you agree or disagree, so be it. I know some of you may not like me any more. Of course, a lot of you never liked me to begin with. Isn’t it still legal in America to express one’s views without fear? Of course, I put all of this into prospective with my view of Christian citizenship. We are all citizens of two kingdoms. One is a spiritual kingdom and one is the kingdom of this world. Christian citizenship will advance the cause of movements that strengthen the

Japanese Farmers in El Segundo

By Dr. Don Brann

In the mid-1920s, there were immigrants from Japan living and working in El Segundo. They farmed the land in the agrarian sector and didn't venture west of PCH (first Arizona, then Sepulveda) into El Segundo.

There is a false story in El Segundo that has been circulated for decades. It's about the Japanese and their impact on the boundary line between the El Segundo school district and the Wiseburn school district. The boundary line is and has always been PCH, never Aviation, the City's eastern boundary.

The story that goes around El Segundo is that the school boundary was established at PCH to prevent Japanese students from attending El Segundo schools. The Japanese resided east of PCH near El Segundo Blvd. So, these children went to the Wiseburn School that served families living east of PCH.

Here's what's wrong with that tale: the district boundary was set in 1911, but the first Japanese student enrolled in Wiseburn in 1924. Case closed!

Japanese people were not popular in America in the first half of the 20th Century, even less so in late 1941 after the Pearl Harbor bombing. In 1942, they were taken away and placed in rural internment camps across the U. S. But, the story that these students were deliberately prevented from El Segundo schools by establishing the boundary, where it remains today, is not true. That line was determined in 1911, many years before the Japanese arrived at a truck farm in El Segundo. When the Japanese were finally released from the camps, many of them settled in Gardena, Lomita, Torrance and Palos Verdes. They annually met for decades to celebrate their positive experiences in "Western Hawthorne."

So, why is the eastern El Segundo school boundary (PCH) different than the eastern El Segundo City boundary? When the El Segundo Land Improvement Company laid out the town, they placed the east boundary at Aviation. They limited the residential section to stop at PCH on the east. More than 20 years before El Segundo was incorporated as a City, the Wiseburn School District began in 1896 and went west to the Pacific Ocean. So, when El Segundo annexed land to begin its own school district, it was only interested in setting the east line at PCH since no residential uses would be east of there. Also, without any families to serve, the County ruled that the Wiseburn western boundary would be shifted from the beach to PCH. When El Segundo schools appealed the boundary to Los Angeles County in the early 1930s, the County rejected their arguments. Who knew the eastern portion of El Segundo would eventually develop into the aerospace capital of the world? •

Officer Ross

trailblazing as the first female police motor officer,” Whelan said, “but also for who she is as a person, and who she is as an El Segundo Police Officer.”•

The first combustion engine, petroleum fueled motorcycle was invented in 1885; motor officers have supplemented police departments for more than 100 years, with the police departments of Detroit, Michigan, and Lansing, Illinois, claiming to be the first adopters, in 1908, of a new form of policing, mounting officers on Harley-Davidson motorcycles to make their cities safer.

Of her motor school class, Ross said that “Motor school must be one of the most challenging courses a law enforcement officer can take... many attendees do not pass, at least the first time.”

Officer Steve Paulsen was tasked with training Ross as she prepared for motor school. He said when he met Ross, he did not know a lot about the Oregonian, was unsure how motivated she might be, and how she would respond to training.

Any doubts Paulsen may have had were quickly assuaged. Paulsen said that the motorcycles, the beast-model BMW R 1250 RT-P, considered one of the most technologically advanced motorcycles in the industry, that the ESPD motor officers mount weigh more than 800-lbs, and that “almost everyone falls off of the bikes hundreds of times during training,” noting that “it hurts when you hit the concrete with the bike.” He said that “there are many people (who) try, fail a few times, and quit. Paulsen said that there is a “high failure rate” for the attendees who attempt to conquer the basic motorcycle academy, calling the training “repetitive, tedious, painful, and can be physically and mentally draining.”

He said he “got a glimpse of Officer Ross’ determination when she showed everyone that she could pick-up an 800-plus-pound bike off the ground during the testing and the interview process. The process could have been over right then and there, but she gave it her all and didn’t quit.”

Paulsen noted that Ross had never ridden a motorcycle before, and that, during their six months of training, they had to start from the beginning. He said she was “just like everyone else who trains for school, and fell on the concrete hundreds of times, but she got-up each time and kept going. She never complained, never questioned her ability, and always kept riding.”

Paulsen, noting Ross’s trailblazing achievements, said he “knew she would be the one to do it. I am so proud of her accomplishment. She did the work. I know that this is just the start of much bigger and better accomplishments for Officer Ross. I have a feeling she will break a few more records in her career here at ESPD.”

Asked about for her aspirations in the law enforcement field, Ross said that she is “solely focused on being a motorcycle officer, see where it takes me,” realizing that there are multiple opportunities in the law enforcement field.

It is well-known that motor officers favor tinted sunglasses while they tool around town, attempting to keep the peace. To paraphrase a lyric from Timbuk 3’s 1986 hit tune that may apply to Ross, it appears her “Future is so bright, she’s gotta wear shades.” •

Notice To Potential Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale.
