LA Kings Help to Renew a Roller Hockey Rink in the South Bay

The City of El Segundo and the Los Angeles Kings partnered up to renovate the city's roller hockey rink. The renovation project was made possible through the LA Kings support and $75,000 donation. On hand for the Ribbon Cutting Ceremony was El Segundo Mayor Pro Tem Chris Pimentel, LA Kings President and Hockey Hall of Famer Luc Robitaille, and President of the El Segundo Inline Hockey Association Jeff Tiddens. Kings former forward and team radio analyst Daryl Evans emceed the ceremony. El Segundo's New Development Director Has His Sights Set on the Future

By Duane Plank

Although Michael Allen has been on the job for less than three weeks, the new El Segundo Development Services Director is already casting his gaze at what our city may look like in 50 or 100 years. And how he can positively influence the future.

Allen's first day on the job was August 16. He survived a highly competitive recruitment process, and after recently working as the Culver City Planning Manager, he was looking for an opportunity to advance his career, which landed him in an office in the Main Street El Segundo City Hall.

El Segundo City Manager Scott Mitnick said of his new hire: "The City Council and Executive Team are excited to welcome Mr. Allen to the city's leadership team. His expertise and knowledge about land use and zoning will be a valuable asset to the organization, especially as the city continues to attract exciting new developments."

As Mitnick noted, Allen brings extensive land use, zoning, and community development experience to his new job, having worked in several municipalities, and even traveling overseas for a work stint in the Mongolian capital city of Ulaanbaatar, where he provided urban planning and design support to government officials.

A resident of nearby Mar Vista, where he lives with his wife Jane, Allen was raised in Northern California, in the small town of Sebastopol, an hour north of San Francisco, which is in Sonoma County, a region known for its cultivating of apples and plums, and currently, according to my typical brief research, wine grapes.

He said that he has always had an interest in "design, in general," noting that, in high school, he was very involved in taking drafting, architecture, and design-related course offerings. He said this was the genesis for his interest in "urban design and city planning."

Allen obtained his Bachelor of Science degree in urban and regional planning from Cal Poly Pomona in 2006. He furthered his academic credentials by receiving a master's degree in organizational management and administration from Iowa's Ashford University. He has also achieved certification with the American Institute of Certified Planners.

Allen said that when he matriculated to Cal Poly Pomona, he was keenly focused on what he wanted to do for a living, and then, "many years later," burnished up his resume by attending the hybrid online program at Ashford.

Allen was eager to join Team El Segundo when he landed the job. "I am thrilled to be joining the team as Development Services Director," he said. Noting how he was "drawn to the intimate, small-town atmosphere among an incredibly flourishing business community, I am looking forward," he said, "with collaborating with those who live and work here to continue the success and evolution of El Segundo."

Allen spent the last 4 1/2 years as the city Planning Manager in Culver City, where he, among other duties, managed the day-to-day operations of the Current Planning Division, where he said he spent "90% of my time working with the major developments currently happening in Culver City." He said he worked with multiple "major developers" during his tenure there while noting that many of those same developers are working on projects in El Segundo. Which he said will hopefully lead to a "seamless transition" in his new position because he will be tasked to work with many "familiar faces" in the industry.

Lukas Quach was one of Allen's colleagues in Culver City. "I met Michael when I came to work for Culver City as the Building Official two years ago," Quach said. "I was the Building Official for El Segundo for about three years before that."

"Michael is a friend and a colleague. Michael and I were in the same Community Development Department in Culver City, where he managed the Current Planning Division, and I manage the Building Safety Division. Being that Building Safety and Planning go hand in hand operationally, we

Standout Films From This Year's Fantasia Fest

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

For those who don't know, Fantasia Fest is a Montreal-based film festival that pays special attention to highlighting Asian and Anime films from around the world. Since starting out in 1996, they've also long held the reputation of being "the most outstanding and largest genre film festival in North America," with past premieres including Quentin Tarantino's Inglourious Basterds, Edgar Wright's Shaun of the Dead, and aspiring thespians from Dorset, a small coastal town in the southwest of England, who are given the opportunity of a lifetime: to perform their humble stage play adaptation of Alien to a 400-seat, sold-out crowd at the Leicester Square Theatre in London for one night only. For context, Dorset is 2 1/2 hours south of London, and their audience count was roughly around 20 people per show.

the iconic horror film Final Destination 5. Cinemacy was able to attend the multi-week festival virtually this year, and while we saw a number of great films, we consider these to be the standouts of the fest.

Dreams on Fire: An Electric Underground Dance Drama

Waiting on the sidelines of a dimly lit dance floor in an otherwise neon-soaked Tokyo club, a Yume (Bambi Naka) is about to live out her biggest dream and face her biggest fear. By stepping out onto the dance floor, she is quite literally taking her first step towards becoming a professional dancer. But with little formal training and no money to her name, Yume is prepared to give her blood, sweat, and tears to turn this dream into a reality.

Canadian-born, Japan-based filmmaker Philippe McKie's underground dance drama Dreams on Fire is a fascinating character study of a young woman's stalwart ambition to succeed. Mesmerizing choreography and heavy-hitting music from IC3PEAK, S.P.Y, Hospital Records, and Shogun Audio contribute to the film's vibey EDM aesthetic and electrifying narrative.

Alien on Stage: Amateur Actors Remake Ridley Scott's Classic

Alien on Stage is a heartwarming story about an eclectic cast of bus drivers and come to life. There is a consistent flow of cringe-worthy and charismatic moments throughout that make for quietly hilarious and lighthearted entertainment. Led by army veteran turned theatre director Dave Mitchell (with heavy Michael Scott-like qualities), he is tasked to bring Alien to theatrical life. Directors Lucy Harvey and Danielle Kummer found a needle in a haystack when they stumbled into this low-budget production of Ridley Scott's Alien at a local theatre, and we're all the better for it.

Huber's Hiccups

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

WHAT ELSE NEEDS TO BE SAID?

After last week's rant, anything I write this week is going to be met with a sigh or a big fat yawn. It's back to boring stuff like writing about golf, or my dear ol' lady or my travels to the Midwest. I sure woke up the restless natives last week. Seven or eight of you loyal readers responded with a "right on brother!". There was just one slightly negative response of "you talk too much". Now that I have gotten my opinions and beliefs out into the open, we can forge on together. Life goes on for us. We take it a day at a time. Some days the world seems like it is falling apart. We know that bad news will be with us forever. There will always be bad people doing bad things in very bad ways. All of the conflict, bombings, killings, and strife come out of man's sinful nature. Our faith is what must keep us going. We may live in this sin filled world, but we are called to a heavenly realm. There are two kingdoms, a worldly kingdom and heavenly one. We are both sinner and saint simultaneously. Born a sinner, but forgiven and made a saint through the work of Jesus. Do I do bad things? You bet I do! We all must admit that our thoughts, words and deeds are not what they ought to be. But, we trust in God's grace and mercy to forgive us when we screw up. By faith, we live as forgiven children of God, in God's eye we are saints. Wow! God looks down and sees me as one of his children. He wants us to live happy, peaceful lives. He gives us all that we need. It's time for a cold one, it's time to relax! The world might be crazy and screwed up, but we don't have to be. Should we care about the things going on in this world? Should we stand up for what we know is right, based upon God's Word? Should we care for others who are being torn apart by this life? The answer to all of this

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I have been going through a lot lately and I am interested in seeing a therapist or talking to someone about it, but I have not called one because I am afraid of being diagnosed with some "mental illness" that will go on my permanent health record and could affect me in ways I don't know in the future. I don't feel like there is anything wrong with me at all; I just want a little bit of extra support during this time when I happen to have a lot going on in my life. Is there anything I can do to avoid getting caught up in the system?

– Annoyed But Mostly OK, El Segundo

Dear Annoyed,

Your question stood out to me because it points to a major problem with the way we think about the work of counselors and therapists.

You are right to be miffed at the emphasis on diagnosis. This is a systemic problem that stems largely from the field of psychology trying to imitate the field of medicine. Many insurance companies expect therapists to identify a diagnosis, in the same way doctors do.

But it's not the same. Part of the problem is the term "mental health," and the fact that we tend to think of "mental health" as a personal responsibility. By doing so, we ignore the enormous impacts that our surroundings have on how we feel. Are there times when simple actions we take could positively or negatively affect the way we feel? Absolutely. But in the same way that sometimes people get sick because they are breathing polluted air, or get injured when they are in an accident, people can be made to feel miserable by the culture around them and the things that happen to them.

On top of that, popular culture tends to

worked together on many projects. Michael is great to work with because he is smart and can grasp complex ideas and concepts quickly, and he has a strong work ethic.

“Michael is a forward thinker, who can build consensus,” continued Quach. “He is also a very effective communicator, who can convey his ideas and persuade his audience to share his vision and manage not to alienate those who do not. At the granular level, aside from his mastery of Current Planning, he is also very knowledgeable of the other Community Development Services functions and has a solid operational understanding of the various components, including Advance Planning, Building Safety, Code Enforcement, and Economic Development.

“Michael is a genuinely nice guy and easy to get along with,” Quach added. “He was well respected by all of his coworkers here, those that worked under him and those that worked above him as well. People say nice things about him behind his back.”

Before his tenure in Culver City, Allen spent five years working for the city of Cudahy, wherever that is. Allen toiled as the Community Development Manager. He said that Cudahy is a small city and that he and other city employees, because they were short-staffed, were tasked with wearing “many hats” and overseeing operations in several departments.

Of his time in Cudahy, Allen said that “depending on what was going on that day, dictated which hat you were wearing.” Allen’s wearing of many job-related hats has provided him with a solid background to further his civic planning and development career.

Allen said that “I have always been in the planning world,” whether it be consulting in the private sector or working as a city employee. “Planning is something that I have always wanted to do; something that I live and breathe and sleep...always been my passion.”

As mentioned earlier, Allen served a short stint working in Mongolia. “I was always envious of many of my colleagues who either studied or worked abroad,” he said. When he got the chance to work in Mongolia, he jumped at the opportunity. He coordinated and worked for the government bureau that oversaw land-use planning for the entire country. He was part of a community outreach team that was tasked with developing protocols to regulate land use. He said that Mongolian’s still clings to “nomadic” culture. He and his team were tasked to develop new land-use policies, frameworks, and recommendations while respecting the country’s historical culture.

Said Allen of his short stay in Mongolia, “It was a life-changing, eye-opening experience,” which he credits to this day, of reimagining how he engages with the local community.

He said that while the County of Los Angeles has a vast sprawl, each community, including a city like El Segundo, has unique needs and its own identifiable culture that differentiates it from neighboring towns.

Allen was interested in the Development Services Manager in town for a couple of reasons. One was that the post “was an incredible career opportunity for me. And I love being on the ground in the development community where you get to create developments and experiences,” he said while exploring quality of life issues and looking to improve upon them.

He is looking forward to shaping the direction of “what El Segundo is going to be in 50 or 100 years,” noting that the city is “one of the oldest cities in Los Angeles County.” He sees the opportunity for him and his team to “redefine or continue defining what the city will be in the next century. “This is an exciting opportunity,” he said, citing the developmental growth possibilities available in many corners of the city.

Allen said that the job interview process went well. “It seemed rather quick and efficient,” he noted, giving kudos to city administrators. “I am thankful for that, because sometimes you can get burnt-out” when the interview process lags. The vision and values were aligned, he said, between himself and the City Hall administrators led by Mitnick.

Allen said he is initially “trying to wrap my head around the array of developments that are (currently) in the pipeline” and provide troubleshooting expertise, if necessary.

In the initial part of his tenure, one of his top priorities will be to informally audit the processes and procedures emanating from his department, including building permit and planning processes.

“How can we do this in a more efficient way, if possible, to maximize efficiencies,” he said. He has been doing a lot of “observing and absorbing” during his first few weeks on the job, meeting coworkers, and learning the intricacies of working at City Hall.

While not planning and developing what El Segundo may look like in the next century, Allen likes to take advantage of the SoCal sunshine, visit the beach, hike in the Malibu mountains, and make every other month camping excursions. He is also a DIY guy, tinkering around his domicile, working on various home-based projects.

And, Allen said, he has become a supporter of the LAFC soccer club. “A new, avid fan,” he said, citing that he attends “about 80%” of the team’s home matches.

Allen gets the last word or words. “I am really thankful for this opportunity, to get to know the community and the stakeholders, and collaborate with the business community and the residents,” he concluded. “It has been an extremely warm welcome. I couldn’t ask for anything more. I am excited to hit the ground running, get ‘into the weeds,’ and hit the go button. I am looking forward to what we can accomplish here.”

assume that being “mentally healthy” means feeling good most of the time. I think that’s not just wrong, but ridiculous. That definition of healthy would mean that a person who is bullied at school should just stop feeling so awful. It would mean that women in Afghanistan would only be mentally healthy if they started feeling good about living under Taliban rule. Other people find it is more stressful to try to be happy than it is to live with some sadness or discomfort. We should respect their wishes, not pathologize them. (If you are one of those people, you are not alone!)

We need to find language to replace the terms “mental health” and “mental illness.” A therapist helps a person respond to a set of circumstances and problems in their life. That is not the same as being healthy or ill.

The short answer to avoiding a diagnosis is to avoid the insurance system. While not all insurance companies require a diagnosis in order to reimburse for mental health services, many of them do. I’m sure I don’t have to tell you that avoiding the insurance system can make therapy unaffordable, and that this is a real flaw in our system (yet one more example of systems that cause people problems). The good news is that there is quality, affordable counseling out there. Please feel free to reach out to me and I will give you some referrals.

Did you know that a group of bunnies is called a fluffle? Our current fluffle couldn't be fluffier! Brioche, Rye, Baguette, Bagel, and Pumpkin are 8 months old and available for adoption. Pictured...Brioche is an 8 month old male looking for a home. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-696>

Vindaloo is a sweet little 2 month old domestic short hair male kitten who came to spcaLA with his mother and siblings. You will love his cute little face and kitten curiosity. If you are thinking of adopting, kittens do great in pairs! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-721>

Alice came to spcaLA in a litter of seven! She is a 3 month old domestic short hair elusive female orange Tabby – most orange Tabbies are male, so she and her sister, Rosalie are very special. Alice is a sweet little kitten ready for a home of her own. Adopt Alice or another cat/kitten for $25 until the end of August. Kittens do great in pairs! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-813>

Sweet boy Charlie is a 7 year old German Shepard Mix who appreciates a good brushing! So far he's been very tolerant of bath time, and has shown us to be a friendly and attentive fellow. He's relatively easy to leash and is working on his basic training. He likes to explore first, and may even coax you into a game of fetch. Once he's worked on his "zoomies" he is ready for sit, find it and the name game. Charlie is a strong, happy dog so someone with big breed experience would be ideal. If you are thinking about adding to your family, think about Charlie! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-540>

Last week, a one year old 75 pound German Shepherd mix named Hailey found her forever home. It was best that she be the only dog in the household and she found the perfect family with this couple. She had been at the spcaLA South Bay Pet Adoption Center since June. During that time, the spcaLA trainers worked with her daily to keep her happy and engaged with training and play time. The shelter goes through lots of dog toys to provide enrichment for the dogs while they wait for adoption. spcaLA is low on dog toys, and if you would like to help, donations may be dropped off at 12910 Yukon Ave., Hawthorne, during business hours (Wed-Sun 10am-5pm). Thank you for your support! •
