By Ron Sokol

A short while ago, this column reported on the indefatigable Diane Tollefson. She is a 1960 Inglewood high grad who became a historian. Diane has been at the helm of an ongoing effort to create a wonderful time capsule of what she and her classmates did and enjoyed "back in the day". may be the birthplace of Inglewood. When built in 1834, the Centinela Adobe was the seat of a 25,000-acre land mass known as the Rancho Aquaje de La Centinela. Today that area would include the cities of Redondo Beach, Hawthorne, Inglewood, El Segundo, Lawndale, Manhattan Beach, and Hermosa Beach. Nice piece of property!

But accuracy is important: The time capsule is actually a trunk scheduled to be opened in 2042, when Diane and many of her classmates will be 100 years old. The contents of the time trunk – clothes, photos, newspapers, books, letters, among a variety of choice items -- is a way of reaching out to Inglewood high schoolers who are not yet even born. The goal is to share with them a bygone era and encourage them forward with great enthusiasm.

On October 26th just past, the time trunk was "buried" as part of a touching ceremony at the Centinela Adobe in Inglewood. Among those present with Diane were James T. Butts, the Inglewood Mayor, Diane Sambrano, President of the Historical Society of Centinela Valley, and a lot of energetic alum from Inglewood High.

Just what, you may ask, is the Centinela Adobe? It is the oldest residence in the Centinela Valley, part of the former residence of Daniel Freeman, who often is credited with founding Inglewood. In fact, it just 1 1 1 2

The Centinela Adobe is also known as La Casa de la Centinela. It is operated today as a museum by the Historical Society of Centinela Valley. In the late 1940s, it was threatened with demolition to make way for new homes, but preservation-minded citizens raised funds to buy the property. Thankfully they then deeded it to the City of Inglewood, which maintains the site through its Parks and Recreation Department.

Would you like to take a tour of the Centinela Adobe? It is open Sundays from 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm, but you can arrange a tour through Diane Sambrano (the Historical Society President). Her phone number is (424) 351-5145. You will find items that reflect yesteryear and that show such a rich history, including newspapers, jewelry, artwork, and furnishings. The trunk time capsule being held at the Centinela Adobe is of a similar nature: We want you to have a good sense of what it was like in our unique time.

I hope to be there in 2042 when the time trunk is opened. Several people hold the

New Picture Book Roundup

By Kristina Kora-Beckman, Senior Librarian, El Segundo Public Library

Browsing through the new picture books recently, I couldn't choose which title I liked best so I'm reviewing my top four.

Seasons by Hannah Pang, illustrated by Clover Robin is a gorgeous, melodic book that informs, inspires and entertains. Different environments are pictured, with flaps depicting nature in each season that invite comparison and provide helpful information about the habitat's animals, insects and plants.

Seasons by Hannah Pana.

Similarly, Plant Secrets by Emily Goodman, illustrated by Phyllis Limbacher Tildes depicts lifecycles of various plants with lyrical prose, accessible language and beautifully realistic drawings.

On the other end of the life spectrum, Chihiro Takeuchi's Whose Bones Are Those? leads readers on a hunt to literally piece together depicted bones of animals. Assembled skeletons and live animal pictures follow each spread, which lends a lovely pacing reminiscent of a paleontologist discovering fossils, assembling them to determine how long ago animals lived. My son loved using the clues to figure out which animal and the fun facts at the end of the book about each animal including: "Did you know that giraffes and humans each have only seven bones in their necks? The giraffes' bones are just longer.'

by Emily Goodman

Lastly is a hilarious, interactive non-fiction exploration of the microscopic world of organisms living in our bodies, Do Not Lick This Book, by Idan Ben-Barak and Julian Frost. Microbe characters take readers on a close-up adventure to visit teeth, skin and the organisms that live there. High resolution, color photos lend an otherworldly feel while wacky comments from the characters keep readers engaged.

Film Review

Good Night Oppy Tells an Unexpected Love Story Between Man and Machine

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

If the rock scene from Everything Everywhere All at Once unexpectedly brought a tear to your eye, make sure you have your box of tissues handy for Good Night Oppy, now streaming on Amazon Prime Video. Having its world premiere at the Telluride Film Festival before playing at TIFF, this documentary tells the true story of two NASA robots who defied the odds by surviving nearly 15 years longer than the viewer. Imagine the *Criterion-selected* film Wall-E come to life – if that film tugged at your heartstrings, be prepared for a similar feeling with Oppy. Featuring photo-real special visual effects and animation by Industrial Light & Magic, the visual effects company founded by George Lucas, Good Night Oppy has that classic Star Wars look: rich and stunning.

The story at the heart of the film is the quintessential American Dream. A team expected. See how I used the word "surviving"? I almost wrote "living" which, as we all know, inanimate objects cannot be considered living things. But director Ryan White gives us reason to pause as we can't help but form an emotional attachment to these autonomous rovers throughout the course of the film.

In 2004, the Mars Exploration rovers Opportunity and "twin sister" Spirit landed on opposite sides of the foreign planet. The goal coming out of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, CA was to determine once and for all if there was neutral water on Mars, furthering the possibility of life. A team of scientists and researchers spent years developing rovers that could investigate the Red Planet and communicate back to Earth through complex tech systems. Opportunity and Spirit were built to have a life expectancy of 90 days. So, imagine the excitement when both rovers made it to day 91 and the disbelief when they hit the one year mark, and so on of scientists from around the world come together to propel US space exploration into the future, quite literally reaching for the stars. Good Night Oppy offers audiences old-fashioned, feel-good optimism and stands as a testament to just how powerful inanimate objects can be when personified by humans. •

Feeling The Stress Of High Energy Bills? New Programs Help Lower Costs

(BPT) - Soaring energy prices equate to rising energy bills for households nationwide. This is a burden in particular for low-income people on a tight budget. No one should have to go without the energy necessary to heat and power their home, and now, thanks to numerous programs and incentives, there are more options to keep costs down for those that need it most.

This fall, you can make a change for yourself and others on ENERGY STAR Day, an annual celebration of the benefits of energy efficiency, including saving energy, money and protecting the planet. Consider these opportunities to make energy efficiency upgrades and help lower your energy bills and save money. Learn about these and other ways to save energy and money at energystar.gov/SaveForGood.

Rebates and Tax Incentives

Support from local utilities

Local utilities may offer energy efficiency upgrade support for low-income customers. When available, these programs typically include a home energy assessment accompanied by direct install of energy-saving devices including ENERGY STAR certified smart thermostats. Eligibility is usually based on household size and income in relation to a percentage threshold above the Federal Poverty Level or Area Medium Income (AMI). Depending on where you live, these programs may be working with state agencies who provide low-income services more broadly.

Weatherization Assistance Programs

Each U.S. state offers a Weatherization Assistance Program (WAP) available for households that qualify (such as those that already qualify for Supplemental Security Income, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and other income eligibility criteria). This program includes a home energy assessment and help with weatherization upgrades, like attic insultation, and fixing or replacing old water heaters.

Through rebates and tax incentives, EN-ERGY STAR certified products like heat pump water heaters, clean heating and cooling, and household appliances are becoming more affordable while enabling customers to save on their monthly energy bills. For example, ENERGY STAR certified heat pumps are eligible for a $300 federal income tax credit for residential energy efficiency, plus rebates and incentives from local utilities in many areas.

Ultra-Efficient Upgrades

When upgrading heating and cooling elements of the home, look for options with superior efficiency. Heat pumps, for instance, are more efficient than furnaces or boilers and serve double duty with heating and cooling, making them usable year-round. Combine heat pumps with other high-impact energyefficiency improvements for an ENERGY STAR Home Upgrade to achieve significant energy and cost savings while transitioning from fossil fuels to a cleaner, healthier, more comfortable home.

Low-Income Assistance Programs

The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) offers help with home repairs and upgrades based on household size and income. For example, a four-person household with an annual income of $39,750 would qualify for LIHEAP and could get a replacement for a broken heating and cooling system through this program.

The typical household spends nearly $1,900 a year on energy bills. With ENERGY STAR appliances, you can save 24% or about $450 in household energy costs while helping prevent climate change. Those savings are on top of assistance programs, rebates and tax incentives that help keep every home comfortable while staying on budget. Learn more at energystar.gov/SaveForGood. •

While flu seasons vary in severity, during most seasons, people 65 years and older bear the greatest burden of severe flu disease, accounting for the majority of flu hospitalizations and deaths. A flu shot is the best way to protect against flu illness and its potentially serious complications this fall and winter. This season, CDC is recommending that people 65 and older get one of three preferred flu vaccines that are specially designed for people in this age group.

However, if the higher-dose or adjuvanted flu shots are unavailable, people in this age group should get a standard-dose flu shot. In numerous studies since 2010, flu vaccines have helped protect older adults against influenza by reducing their risk of getting sick and being hospitalized. There is also more evidence that flu vaccines can make illness less severe in people who get vaccinated but still get sick from the flu. CDC recommends people get vaccinated before the end of October, if possible, because flu activity can start increasing in parts of the country during this month, and it's important to get vaccinated before flu starts spreading in your community. However, vaccination after October can still provide protection against flu because flu most commonly peaks in February and significant flu activity can continue into May. A roaring fire, a comfy chair, a cup of hot cocoa...and a purring, content cat curled up in your lap. What could be better this holiday season? When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Thelma is a sassy little dumpling whose people at home most of the time. He needs consistent company and might start talking out loud when he is left alone. He has tested positive for FIV (Feline Immunodeficiency Virus). FIV is not a big deal; given proper care and attention, an FIV+ cat will live the same expressions will make your heart smile. A proper lady to the core, Thelma does not kiss on the first date and prefers when humans do not come on too strong at first. Once she has given you the once-over, her decorum disappears: she'll flop over for treats, beg to be brushed and lean into pets. Her perfect home would provide ample snacks, plenty of pets, and a calm environment where Thelma can luxuriate in the good life as a sweet, gentle, quirky companion. She prefers to be your one and only but could potentially be a boss lady to a passive, chill kitty or a small, cat-friendly dog.

Hot Apple Cider is a beautiful, sweet, and snuggly kitten who is quick to cuddle and has a loud purr. Her favorite spot to relax is in your lap or laying down with you at your shoulder. She is very easy going, and gentle with adults and children alike. She would do best being adopted with one of her littermates and with someone who would love a sweet natured kitten.

Simba is the most loving and affectionate kitty you will meet! He is a happy cat who always wants some attention from you. If you like to pet cats, it's your lucky day because Simba loves being touched. He will nuzzle his head into your palm to get closer. He loves playing with the teaser feather wand and has amazing jumping abilities. He needs to play to activate his mind. Simba is a great fit for you if you work from home or have lifespan as an FIV negative cat. The disease is extremely hard to transmit from cat to cat, requiring direct blood contact (typically from a deep puncture wound). It is not transmissible to humans. chill boy but he does get startled easily, so a nice quiet home is best for this sweet boy.
