Serving Up Some “Good Stuff”

Story and Photos by Chase Maser

As the weather in the South Bay shifts to rolling fog and gray, misty breezes, restaurants in town find themselves dealing with another major challenge to serving customers throughout a global pandemic: outdoor dining.

Good Stuff, a local breakfast restaurant and favorite among townfolk, is certainly feeling the pressure. On the corner of Grand Ave. and Richmond St. (131 W Grand Ave.), you can see couples and families sitting outside on the weekends—seemingly normal in the early morning hours. But as the weekend passes, the sidewalk gets emptier. By mid-week, only a few outdoor tables host workers on a lunch break, and every hour or so, a customer walks inside to pick up a to-go order, then rushes back to their car and drives off. The slower pace is a big challenge for Chase Bennett—the newly appointed general manager of Good Stuff’s El Segundo location.

“We’ve definitely noticed a slow-down in business,” says Bennett. “On the weekends, at all of our locations, it gets pretty busy with local customers, but during the week, it’s pretty light. It’s something we’ve never seen before, and we opened in 1979.”

Owned and founded by Chris Bennett, Chase’s father, Good Stuff originally kicked off in Hermosa Beach. As a South Bay native, Chris dreamed of one day owning a restaurant where he grew up, and when an opportunity arrived for him to do so, he quickly cemented his dream as a staple of the surrounding communities.

Growing up as the son of a restaurateur, Chase found himself working at the Hermosa location throughout high school. He’s an alumni of Bishop Montgomery in Torrance, and unlike his five other siblings, working in hospitality just made sense for him. “I tried a lot of other things in my life, but working in the restaurant has always been something I love. I love the business side of it, working with people, supporting the community, and right now, we’re facing some of our hardest challenges. We actually lost the previous general manager here in El Segundo right when COVID hit, so it’s been tough, overall, for me to adjust to a normal life. Nothing about running a business right now is normal.”

Bennett also shares that Good Stuff is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year, and although there may not seem like much to celebrate, he feels that it’s important to honor their history—especially their customers.

To ring in their 40 years of good food and good service to the community, Good Stuff is hosting a range of new promotions to not only benefit customers but to also drum up new business. For instance, one of their most popular promotions is their gift card kickback that they’re offering from Black Friday throughout the rest of the year. Plus, starting in December until the New Year, Good Stuff is hosting a mimosa special that features four different types of mimosas. It’s a perfect pairing for their pumpkin spice pancakes that’s new on the menu for the rest of the fall season, too. “We want to give our customers a fun, beneficial reason to get them coming back. Obviously, the chilly months ahead make that tough to do with indoor restrictions, but hopefully, we can make things festive and enjoyable for everyone.”

And much like every other restaurant in town, Good Stuff has noticed a huge focus on to-go orders. Traditionally, the chain has always been a sit-down venue and still is for loyal customers in the morning, but Bennett has noticed a major trend in ordering habits and revenue for the restaurant as a whole. “I’d say that roughly 40% of our revenue, at the moment, comes from to-go orders. We don’t make it a huge priority because it’s never been our main model, but we definitely recognize the shift and have been

'My Octopus Teacher' Shows the Connection That We've Lost and Long For With Our Natural World

By Ryan Rojas for cinemacy.com

For some of us, the dizziness of these times has us feeling disconnected from our natural world. Perhaps that's why, in a need to escape from life on land, audiences are diving into the new documentary My Octopus Teacher (now streaming on Netflix).

My Octopus Teacher follows South African documentarian Craig Foster. After spending a career photographing wildlife and seemingly technologically-advanced time in history, we're turning for answers from silent ocean-dwellers (although its intelligence may rival our own—octopi have a brain in each of its eight tentacles!). My Octopus Teacher rings so powerfully at a time when some of our highest elected officials reveal a remorseless hypocrisy in the human spirit, that we re-direct our efforts to find answers to life's questions with one of life's most prehistoric creatures.

losing touch with the modern world, he leaves it all behind and takes up a new hobby: diving off of the South African coast. In the process, he discovers the presence of a female octopus—who he pursues and documents each day. Over time, she encourages him to think of life's bigger questions and lessons.

Comprised of just one character (well, two, if you count a certain tentacled co-star), we follow Craig singularly, which makes for an incredibly personal, diary-like experience. His solemnly spoken interviews are intercut with footage of him swimming alongside an ever-growing octopus (footage that he shot himself). All things combined, it's a very soothing watch: his peaceful and easily meditative speech makes for a calming narration of his underwater adventures.

Through Craig's journey, I was certainly able to feel a reconnection to nature (and I work on computers all day long). Even though the experience is a second-hand one, seeing Craig's footage is really quite transporting. Although he dives with a snorkel (meaning he's without an air tank, and therefore is unable to explore the ocean's deepest depths), his coastal dives capture a brilliantly colorful aquatic world that is amazing to behold. You won't need a scuba suit or diving license in order to be taken away to a whole other world.

I find it quite funny that during the most

But, be warned: like any nature documentary, you should prepare to see nature showing its less heartwarming side, in which the circle of life should be experienced without attachment.

I'm actually not sure what My Octopus Teacher left behind, in terms of the greatest lesson that Craig—or I—learned. But perhaps that's something that can only be answered by each one of us that watches it, as long as we look to take the plunge for the chance at finding peace with an eight-legged friend.

Swoon Over Some Moons: A NASA Essay Challenge

By Tommy Vinh Bui, MLIS Associate Librarian Inglewood Public Library

Sharpen those pencils and grasp for a fresh sheet of A4 paper. NASA's Scientist for a Day essay contest is in full swing and our eyes are uninterruptedly fixed on the moons of Uranus this year. So before you succumb to the inevitable brain lethargy triggered by an ever copious amount of consumed candied yams this upcoming Thanksgiving, let's give your noggin one last rigorous rev.

Scientist for a Day is an annual essay contest that challenges students to approach and realign their thinking. Impel them to evaluate critically like a scientist. Curious and crafty students are invited to explore three orbiting moons that the NASA Voyager 2 spacecraft careened by and visited during its historic sojourn trailblazing through the solar system. The assignment is a considerable undertaking and should provide aplenty of intellectual fodder for antsy paragraph-producing fingers.

Perform research on the three moons of Uranus: Ariel, Oberon, and Titania. And based upon your canny findings, write about which moon is the best candidate for a return mission by another spacecraft someday. Which lunar surface would justify a journey of billions of miles and further scientific scrutiny and yield the best data-driven results? We leave those findings to your able and capable discernment, steadfast students.

A little context on the mission, NASA's Voyager 2 spacecraft waded and reached the Uranus system on January 1986. The spacecraft came within 81,500 kilometers of the planet's cloudtops. Given the limitations of the mission, the spacecraft snapped as many pixels possible from a hampered vantage. The flybys were but all too brief and NASA scientists were only able to study one side of these far-flung and distant moons unfortunately. But progress forges ahead and one day we hope to make a triumphant return to the system and further advance our knowledge of the great cosmic mystery heretofore unknown in that particular corner of the universe.

The parameters of the essay? In a well-articulated and structured essay of no more than three-hundred words; which moon has captured your imagination the most? Support your claim with reinforcing justifications. What about this particular moon inspires you? What have we learned so far about this specific moon and why does it warrant further study? And what do you hope mankind will discover upon returning to this mysterious celestial body? It's a lot to chew over for a writing assignment. So this'll be an ideal brainy appetizer to build up to the cranial feast of the upcoming school semester.

So don't let the holiday break be an excuse to let the brain congeal and curdle like so much leftover Thanksgiving green bean casserole. Let that cortex conflagrate with a hearty writing assignment that involves both inquiry-based and problem-based learning. Essay-writers will be performing their own research and cobbling

AMERICAN SUCCESS: AN UNDOCUMENTED PERSPECTIVE
By Samantha Schmidt
INTRO

Hi Hawthorne! If any of you are familiar with my work, I consistently write articles about small businesses owned by people of color. It became a huge passion of mine to give these owner's businesses exposure but also getting to know them. However, I wanted to write this article about something different. We all know that based on English literature or history books, Americans are consumed by the term "American Success," meaning that to be financially stable, you must work and strive hard, and that is considered the minimum. The phrase became common during the 50's and is still relevant in today's modern time. Although I read many stories from American citizens trying to reach that "American Success," I hardly ever heard stories from individuals who've migrated to the United States. Thus, I decided to interview my best friend who came to the United States at 12 years old. In brief, she explains her perspective on what American Success is and how she is still confronting it.

INTRODUCING SOPHIA ALDABA

Sophia Aldaba is a 19-year-old Hawthorne resident who was born in Durango, Mexico. She came to the United States at the age of 11. She is currently a college student at El Camino College studying psychology and spends her time growing her lash business, Luxe Lashing Co. on Instagram.

THE INTERVIEW

Q: How did you adapt in the US knowing you were used to being in Mexico?

A: Although I was very young, adapting to change was not difficult. Because of my mom and brother's presence, and only focusing on the few changes that I liked was the reason I could adapt. For example, learning a new language did not become hard for me to learn. I went to a school in Inglewood where I was the only Mexican girl and started listening to the other student's conversations. Somehow, I put two and two together and learned the full language in a year. Listening to a lot of American pop culture music became a huge help as well. As for Google translate, it hardly helped.

Q: What was your first impression of the U.S.?

A: As a foreign, my first impression of the US was how diverse it is. I had never witnessed any race other than Latinos, except when I would watch TV. I was very surprised at how many people of distinct races and ethnicities would ride the bus. It was nice to learn about many different people, their cultures and traditions, and finding in common that they all migrated to the U.S. just like me. I did not feel lonely in that sense.

Q: Do you think American success is motivating or physically/mentally draining? Why?

A: I believe American success can be both motivating and draining. Someone else will always be doing better, and it can take a toll on an individual. We are used to wanting more and are never satisfied with what we already have. We are constantly competing with others rather than ourselves. Although one wants achievement, they may not hold the same resources as others do. Thus, making it a little harder and longer for someone like me to reach American success. However, it is motivating because witnessing others do good, will often inspire one do good. Seeing others succeed and their result inspires me to achieve my goals.

Q: Do you feel pressured because you don't have the same advantages as an American citizen?

A: Although there were some disadvantages to being undocumented, I never felt pressured. I always knew that sooner or later my family and I would receive the residency, which eventually we did. It became a huge blessing to all of us and I feel extremely grateful to go back to my homeland whenever I can now.

Q: What have you achieved so far?

together what little information is currently known about these three lunar bodies. Students will be expected to pursue scholarly exercises of observation, analysis, and predictive forecasting to summon a convincing argument for exploration. This endeavor is just replete with independent-learning opportunities. We have a paucity of available data pertaining to the moons of Uranus. And the little scientists have managed to verify ensures that these moons remain a most appealing target for further study. You'd be helping scientists make a quantifiable argument to peers and potential funders of future space missions.

And the cherry on top of this a la mode of a writing opportunity? The essays of winning students will be published in NASA's Radioisotope Power Systems website to much fanfare and acclaim. Furthermore, winning students and their classes will also have the chance to participate in a videoconference with a team of NASA scientists.

So before you don that kitchen apron this Thanksgiving, climb into a scientific lab coat and try your hand at this interstellar challenge. Get those essays in and help propel our understanding of the edges of the universe just a few more nudges. For deadlines and additional information, please visit NASA's website: <https://rps.nasa.gov/scientist-for-a-day/>

Let's all be thankful for science and bon appetite, voracious learners. •

A: Throughout my living here in the US, I have learned how to speak fluent English. I am also proud to say that I'm a first-generation student attending college and recently received my certification as a Lash Tech. My business is Lash Luxe Co. and you can search me on Instagram to book your appointment!

Q: Do you want to LOOK successful or FEEL successful?

A: I concluded that money comes and goes. I want to feel successful. Working on daily growth and evolving into a better person each day allows me to feel successful.

Q: Do you have someone that supports you regardless of your ability to be successful?

A: Yes, I have all my mom's support. She has taught me to take different routes regardless of the lack of success because it will build my independence and enforce my choice making. I also have my boyfriend who has stuck by every decision I've made. He gives me advice and the freedom to make any choice that makes me the most comfortable. I also have my best friend Samantha Schmidt who motivates me to do better for my future. I've seen her work hard these past two years at Santa Monica College. I love our friendship and know we will do amazing things in the future.

Q: Advice to someone who is in your shoes as an undocumented.

A: Although being undocumented is hard, it's not the worst. Become open-minded and value every single opportunity that may benefit you and when it doesn't learn from it. Although there are certain disadvantages, do not settle for them.

MY THOUGHTS

I've known Sophia since I was 14 years old, a freshman in high school. I find it ironic how she was the first person I met in our summer bridge, a seminar for incoming freshmen, and we did not become close until our senior year. From what I know through our friendship, she is the most charismatic and hardworking individual I know. She constantly cares for the feelings of others and cherishes the people around her. Our friendship is the best one I've had in almost three years. We check up on each other constantly and motivate one another to be successful. We celebrate our achievements rather engage than in jealousy. Because of her story, I hope to interview others like her, who want to use their voice to empower others and motivate them that the lack of some papers does not define their success. •

Turkey Chili-Stuffed Portobello Mushrooms

Provided by Brandpoint

Roasted Portobello mushroom caps are stuffed with savory turkey chili and topped with Cheddar cheese. Created by nutritionist and registered dietician Ellie Krieger, these healthy stuffed mushrooms are packed with flavor and nutrition.

Ingredients

- 6 large portobello mushroom cap
- 2 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 small onion, chopped (about 1/4 cup)
- 1 pound 99% fat free ground turkey
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 can (14.5 ounces) no salt added diced tomatoes, undrained
- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) Campbell's® Healthy Request® Condensed Tomato Soup
- 2/3 cup frozen whole kernel corn or fresh corn kernels
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/3 cup shredded reduced fat sharp Cheddar cheese

Directions

- Step 1: Set the oven to 450°F. Line a baking sheet with aluminum foil. Brush the mushroom caps with 1 1/2 tablespoons oil. Place the mushrooms onto the baking sheet, gill-side up. Season with the salt and black pepper.
- Step 2: Roast the mushrooms for 7 minutes or until tender. Remove the mushrooms to a wire rack and let cool for 5 minutes. Pour off any liquid from the baking sheet. Return the mushrooms to the baking sheet.
- Step 3: Heat the remaining oil in a 12-inch skillet over medium-high heat. Add the onion and cook for 2 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the turkey and cook until the turkey is cooked through, stirring often to separate meat. Add the garlic and cook and stir for 1 minute. Stir in the tomatoes, soup, corn, chili powder, oregano and cayenne pepper. Cook for 5 minutes or until the mixture thickens slightly, stirring occasionally. Remove the skillet from the heat.
- Step 4: Heat the broiler. Spoon about 3/4 cup turkey mixture into each mushroom cap. Sprinkle with the cheese.
- Step 5: Broil, 4 inches from the heat, for 2 minutes or until the cheese is melted.

I would prefer a quiet household that matches my sensitive nature. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=21-00541>

My name is Roxy, but you can call me a 100 lb. lap dog! I am a 6 year old female Rottweiler mix and I'm looking for an owner experienced in big breeds willing to continue training. I like getting head rubs and chest scratches. I would do best in a home with no dogs and kids 15+. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=21-00764>

My name is Kiwi and I am a pretty 4 year old female domestic short hair petite Calico feline looking for my Friend for Life! I was a lost kitten in a big, big world and a Good Samaritan brought me to the shelter. I would love to find a forever home. Am I the girl for you? <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=21-00810> •

You never know who is going to make their way to spcaLA South Bay Pet Adoption Center. As a shelter for many of the cities in the surrounding area, not only do we house lost animals, but any animal that is brought to spcaLA by animal control. While that usually means, dogs, cats, rabbits, snakes, birds, turtles, pocket pets (Guinea Pigs, gerbils, hamsters), occasionally the shelter receives more unusual animals like, raccoons, hawks, turkeys, pigs, chickens, and even farm animals. Recently the shelter received a bonded pair, Benny & Joon who happened to be a goat and a sheep! No matter the creature, spcaLA South Bay Pet Adoption Center will care for them until it is time to find them a more permanent residence. In Benny and Joon's case, they are now happily living at a farm animal sanctuary. Help us help them! Please donate to spcaLA to help care for ALL the animals that come our way at spcala.com/donate. •
