Santa Flies into the South Bay

Santa surprised more than 2100 local students when he flew into #LAX for the virtual Santa Fly-In. The event began with Santa making a special call to LAX Air Traffic Control to let students know that he would be arriving soon. Students heard from the Hawthorne Police Department, learned about therapy dogs from LAX's PUPS program, enjoyed a special aviation-themed presentation from musician Kiddle Karoo, and learned practical safety tips from the Los Angeles Fire Department. Santa finished the program with a reading of "Twas the Night Before Christmas." Emily Lavelle: Restoring Cars, Demolishing Buildings

By Duane Plank

El Segundo's Emily Lavelle may not be the only young woman in town who likes to restore vintage cars and demolish and rebuild structures, but I think that she might be at the top of that probably brief list of local, young lady DIYers.

The 20-year-old Lavelle, who rose through the El Segundo Unified School District, went from being a Richmond Street School Blue Butterfly to graduating from El Segundo High School in June 2020 as an Eagle. During her years attending ESHS, Lavelle landed on the prestigious honor roll during three years of her schooling and amassed a 4.2 GPA her senior year while completing the AVID program's four-year Engineering Pathway offerings.

Lavelle said she has always been a "hands-on person," learning from her family members who were "builders." She said that when she went to high school, she was intrigued by the engineering program. "They had a shop there," she said, "so I got to build radios," and veered into tackling electrical and aerospace challenges. "That was the best part of high school," she said. "We got to build spaceships (beam me up Scotty!), rovers, and we built a lot of cars. For my senior project, we were going to build an electric wheelchair," but that project had to be scuttled because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

"I have been in love with old cars since I was in elementary school," Lavelle said. "I would take pictures of them and started creating an album with many of the cars that I have seen in town." She is a devotee of the car show on Main Street that annually takes place in the summer and the Zimmerman Automobile Driving Museum located in town east of PCH.

She said that a couple of years ago, she really started noticing classic cars. Her boyfriend, Shane, and Emily spied a 1967 Mustang parked in town. "We went on a whim and bought it," Lavelle said. "That is where it started. We both started learning the engine together, and I branched off from there and started buying my own cars. I help him with his (cars), he helps me with mine."

Lavelle has mined Craigslist to purchase vintage cars to restore, including a manual transmission-equipped Ford Bronco. "It is everything I wanted," Lavelle said, mentioning that she is learning to tool-around in that manual transmission vehicle and is hoping to change out her Ford Falcon to a manual transmission set-up.

Lavelle is currently enrolled at El Camino College. So, Lavelle's basic educational trajectory does not seem all that unique for an El Segundo gal, right? Rise through the ranks of the renowned school district, snag a diploma from the high school, and then enroll at El Camino College.

But what does make Lavelle's journey unique is that she already has her educational future completely mapped out, focusing on her goals at El Camino and beyond. We will let her tell the story. "I am currently achieving my certificate of completion for engineering technology along with my associate's degree in Mechanical Engineering," she said, "with a background in Carpentry and Machine Tool Technology," she writes. "I will have my certificate of completion in a year or so. This is all thanks to El Segundo High School and my teacher Mr. Horvath, for having a four-year program in Engineering, (with) dual enrollment with El Camino. Eventually," Lavelle continues, "I want to transfer to Cal State Long Beach or California Polytechnic State University to receive my bachelor's in mechanical engineering."

The Horvath who Lavelle name-checked is ESHS engineering and physics instructor Daniel Horvath. "I have known Emily for two years," he emailed, "when she took Aerospace Engineering (junior year) and Engineering Design and Development (senior year)."

"She was really inclined towards mechanical engineering," Horvath said, "always trying to solve problems and figure out how things work. She was also very determined and never gave up."

"I think it is more common for boys to be mechanical engineering inclined," Horvath said, noting that it is "not completely uncommon" for young ladies to catch the engineering bug. "I have two girls this year that are also following a similar path as Emily. It varies from year to year, but it is getting more popular among girls lately." Concluded Horvath: "Emily was a great student who always knew what she wanted to accomplish and what her goals were. She never hesitated to ask for help if she needed it."

Lavelle said that mechanical engineering "is my dream career," and that one day down the road, she wants to utilize her mechanical skills "to build my own home," maybe in the Midwest, where she figures that land is more plentiful, and she could have space for her car restoration projects. She dreams of someday "building my own cabin," with a substantial chunk of land for her cars. She is constantly looking for more cars to restore but is hamstrung by the lack of space to park and store cars while living in a city environment.

Film Review

Flee is a Breathtaking Recount of Survival

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

Remarkably moving in both its story and delivery, Jonas Poher Rasmussen's animated feature Flee is a must-watch. Expanding our idea of what a documentary can be, Flee's depiction of an Afghan refugee's decades-long plight for survival and, most importantly, self-acceptance, is a deep well of emotional fragility.

Executive produced by Riz Ahmed and Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, Flee begins with a title card informing us that what we are about to watch is based on a true story, but some names you're forced to live a day at a time. Especially as a gay man, Amin's fight for survival was his only goal.

Set against a haunting score by composer Uno Helmersson (The Painter and the Thief) and powerful uses of the tracks 'Breathe In' and 'Help Me' by the American-Icelandic artist Low Roar, Flee will put you through your own emotional journey. Mesmerizing visuals span throughout Amin's life; from childhood to the present day, living in Stockholm with his partner, and even though it's drawn in 2-D and locations have been changed to protect identities and avoid persecution. For the next hour and a half, we become wrapped up in the life story of Amin Nawabi (a pseudonym) as he tells his harrowing journey of life as a young gay man who was always on the run from the police, the government, and his own feelings.

In a very poised, yet hesitant way, much like he is talking to a new therapist, Amin describes his earliest childhood memories as a three-year-old in Kabul, Afghanistan in the 1980s. A-ha's 'Take on Me' plays under b-roll of live-action footage— a jarring reminder that despite the film's mostly animated look, this is not make-believe. After his father mysteriously disappears and Amin and his brother risk getting drafted into the military — which might as well be a death sentence — the family flees Afghanistan with hopes and prayers as their only way forward.

What follows is horrifying abuse and multiple life or death situations while constantly crossing borders to cover their tracks. Forever in flux, it is hard to plan for the future when animation, we feel his pain. We see the tears well up in his eyes and sense the tension and anxiety he has carried around his entire life. And that last shot... just brilliant.

Flee is a remarkable feat for the entire filmmaking team and one of the most profound films I've seen in a long time. Now playing in theaters. •

In a Winter Wonderland— Travel in the Off-Season

Article and photos by Ben & Glinda Shipley

Maybe it's an aberration, but we love stormy weather. And the stormiest place in all of the British Isles is a tiny fishing village by the name of Porthleven on the south coast of Cornwall. For anyone who has spent a winter in Britain, this is no insignificant claim. The Ship Inn on the harbor is plastered with notices from a recent squall, when its clientele was stuck all night drinking in the pub before they could safely tipple home. There's a breakwater of sorts, but nothing you'd want to rely on through more than a mini-tsunami. So we consulted our calendars and weathermen and wandered in on a gloomy, bitterly cold January afternoon.

As it happened, apart from the temperature, the weather gods were in an unreasonably good mood. But we secured the nicest room at the oldest inn on the harbor without calling ahead. With most of the restaurants shuttered for the season, we were treated like pretendroyals at the handful still open. And everyone we met had nothing better to do than chat with the only oddball strangers in town. Had we shown up in the summer high season, we would have been swarmed and battered and elbowed aside in the sweat-stained lunge for the latest iPhone photo op.

If that doesn't roll your motor, try (what Albert Einstein might have called) this thought experiment: Imagine you're the only gondola-crazed tourist on all of San Marco Island in Venice. If only to keep warm, your gondolier belts out his finest Enrico Caruso arias, one after another, while you pass from canal to canal and bridge to bridge without crashing into a single competitor. Afterwards, Enrico tells you his life story and his father's life story and his grandfather's life story (all gondoliers, of course) and so on.

When you ask for restaurant suggestions, Enrico doesn't just pass you off to the gaudy (and shuttered) tourist traps on the Piazza. Instead, you end up with a few relaxed locals at the best little seafood diner in the neighborhood, secure in the smug knowledge that everyone is being so nice because you're the only tourist game in town. Probably not logical, but it feels like a peculiar kind of power.

We didn't set out to travel in the offseason—it just worked out that way. Our employers crowded holidays into the Christmas weeks, and that coincided, not surprisingly, with our slowest personal workloads. Our children were grown, so there were no school vacations to match up to. The result: For a good twenty-five years, we took off the three weeks from Christmas through mid-January to go a-wandering.

And yes, the off-season in Telluride or Salzburg, much less in Hawaii or southern India, doesn't match up to the off-season in Stockholm or London. But generally, our winter migrations have produced cold weather travel in out-of-the-norm circumstances. And those circumstances have included:

Crowds:

Travel

As in an utter lack thereof. You hardly need an appointment for anything, including hotel rooms and especially restaurants. The line into the Louvre or the British Museum evaporates. And when you do find tourist crowds, they normally consist of locals taking advantage of the shortage of foreigners to visit their own capitals and monuments. There's something truly refreshing about being jostled around the Trevi Fountain without a word in any language but Italian.

Dr. Daniel Urrutia, who is our new Board Clerk. We are thankful and grateful for our outstanding and dedicated teachers, administrators and staff. Photo courtesy Centinela Valley Union School District.

Clothing:

Silk and cashmere long johns and underwear. Cashmere sweaters and scarves. Ski jackets, hats, and hoods. LL Bean and Meindl boots (from Maine and Germany respectively) are a godsend. So are Uggs and Mephistos. Lots of thin layers are the secret, easily peeled off when necessary. After a while, you hardly notice the weight, and when you shed them at night for bed, it feels soooo good. You sleep like babies.

Closings:

Any vendor who depends entirely on the tourist trade closes in the off-season—and good riddance to them! Anyone who remains open has to deal with the same customers year-round. They can't throw a bad, over-everything perfect. Just for you, of course.

Conversation:

People have time on their hands, even people in the restaurant trade. They'll explain what that odd purple sauce is on your fish (understanding them is another matter, of course—'tis the season where languages might come in handy). They'll explain why you want the chicken dish today, rather than the lamb or the veal. Civilians and police will sometimes even walk you to your next museum, instead of just vaguely pointing off into the ether.

Snow:

Your pick of Venetian gondolas: Yes, it's as cold as it looks.

them, the staffs are more than happy to make

priced meal or service at you just because they know they'll never need to face you again. And with fewer customers hounding

We can't deny that there are drawbacks. One winter night in Bruxelles, the blizzard grew so fierce, that the city closed down not just the roads and buses, but the entire underground Metro. Around 11:30PM, we still had four miles to go, when the guards apologized profusely and booted us out into the empty streets anyway. Fortunately, we'd dressed for the worst (see above). But the best thing was, by the time the authorities got around to kicking us out, the storm had nearly vanished.

So if you've ever walked through a major world city when it's utterly shut down—when every sane human being has already taken to bed—when the packed mountains of snow drown out the slightest peep of urban life when the white, high-rise streets resemble vast, empty canyons of silence—then you'll understand the meaning of "magic in the air".

No, we can't deny there are drawbacks. But in twenty years, we've been stranded exactly once—in a storied village called Mutters on the slope of a postcard-perfect Austrian alp. Three days of wandering about from spa to Bierkeller to spa to sumptuous country cooking from our lovely hostess. We probably could have escaped sooner, but who wanted to take the chance? The working world was still there when we got home.

skills restoring vintage cars, including a 1961

Emily Lavelle

Ford Falcon, 1988 Ford Bronco, 1965 Ford Ranchero, 1967 Ford Mustang, and 1987 Toyota 4Runner.

"My first purchase of a classic car is my 1961 Ford Falcon, named Eddie after my beloved Uncle, Edward Walter Lavelle," she said. "I have been restoring it now for (more than) a year. I redid the interior myself, repainting it all its original turquoise, adding cedar wood door panels, and painting my own "white wall" tires. I have also been working on a bigger inline six engine (Ford 250)," she added. "I am currently assembling the engine with my boyfriend's uncle, and my mentor, Alan M. Shane, and I have the same love for cars, so we can chat away and work on them together. I have helped Shane work on his 1965 Ranchero, 1967 Mustang, and 1987 4Runner. Alan M. has an awesome past with cars, so he helps us improve our knowledge. About a month ago, I bought a 1988 Bronco II," she said. "Shane and I drove up to Sacramento to check it out. I fell in love and shipped it down. It is my first manual car. Learning at first was a struggle, and I am still trying to fully get the hang of it. But I know I will not be going back to automatic anytime soon. I am starting to build drawers in the back that can transform into a platform for a bed so I can start traveling the states! Cars are something I love to work on for hours!"

When Lavelle is not attending classes at El Camino or restoring older cars, she also likes to bust things up, and then renovate them. She speaks of a "demolition and rebuilding" project that she is tackling that includes a new barn and kitchen.

"Another project of mine has been helping Alan M. transform his barn into an amazing workshop," she said. "Together, we took off the fallen framework that functioned as a roof, cleared out the inside, eventually moving all of his machinery and tools in to create a car shop/workshop. We have also been working on his kitchen," continued Lavelle, "placing new custom cabinets up and tearing out the old tiles to place his new terracotta tiles to transform it into an Italian-style kitchen. I am very thankful for Alan M. because he is teaching me so many skills that I have always wanted to know. Hopefully, down the road, I can use the knowledge he has given me to build my own home!"

Lavelle likes the "reverse engineering" of tearing down a structure and then rebuilding it. Alan M., she said, agreed that if he shared his vast knowledge of re-jiggering classic cars, she would help tear down and rebuild his Woodland Hills structures.

Lavelle said that the work demolishing the facility was laborious, but a labor of love "Super-cool," she said. "A really heavy-duty job," noting the 200-pound pieces of debris that Lavelle and Alan M. had to muscle around. "We are still doing it," Lavelle said. Emily says the goal is to make the rebuilt facility into "a car shop" because Alan M. is also a vintage car aficionado. Lavelle said that "we have so many plans in-store" for revamping the kitchen, including a bakery, greenhouse, and other amenities. Lavelle relishes the work. "It is so much fun," she said.

For his part, Alan M. said that Lavelle is a "very mechanically oriented person. We have worked together on many projects," he said, noting that he helps with her car restorations, and she helps him "build stuff." Alan M also provides Emily and Shane space to work on their restoration projects. "Emily has a deep drive to learn things," Alan M. said, noting he taught Lavelle to weld, a talent that Lavelle applies in myriad ways. Summed up, Alan M. noted Lavelle also possesses people skills: "Emily is a very pleasant person; people like to be around her."

Restoring cars was not always on Lavelle's radar. "I never really thought that I wanted to make a career in cars. I always wanted to do treehouses, she said, referencing a television show "Treehouse Masters," that she enjoyed watching at one time. But at this point, "It would be really cool to own my own car restoration business," she said.

When not restoring classic cars or demolishing things, Lavelle likes to rock climb and strums an occasional guitar. She describes her bedroom as decorated as if "an artist threw-up everywhere," plastered with posters of Elvis Presley, bands like Pink Floyd and Lynyrd Skynyrd, and, of course, renderings of classic cars.

Lavelle currently works at Rock & Brews, which allows her to grab a paycheck to apply to her next car purchase, meet myriad El Segundoans, and sate her musical whimsy. She likes that El Segundo is "really safe and that I can walk everywhere. No matter where I go, I know somebody," she said.

As Lavelle continues down her chosen pathway, do not bet against her displaying a restored vehicle or two at an upcoming Main Street Car Show or buying acreage somewhere in the Midwest to build her dreamhouse cabin, store her car collection, and even build that treehouse! •

Purrrfect Companions

Will you be home for the holidays? Extra time on your hands? This might be the purr-fect time to welcome a new feline family member into your home. When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Ana is a petite grey and white beauty! Her hair continues to grow longer and longer. We are not sure what she will look like when she's done growing, but her fur is luxuriously soft. Even better than her luxurious coat is her mild personality! Ana has never hissed or swatted despite being a street girl. However, she is not comfortable when approached while she is on the ground. When Ana is on her cat tree, she is loving and so sweet! We know that personality is there, and it's just a matter of comfort. Ana spends most of her time up high, except when it is time to eat, make many biscuits, or play with a wand toy! Ana will absolutely need a taller cat trees or cat shelves to be comfortable in her new home

Pierre is a handsome cream-colored tabby who is very active, lively, playful, and affectionate. He plays hard with all the kittens and adult cats in his foster home, yet also is very loving with them. Pierre is groomed every day by the resident senior orange tabby. He purrs to the touch and is very affectionate with people. He does need another kitten or young cat to play and develop with. The best choice would be his littermate Claude, a handsome grey tabby with orange eyes or Pierre would work well if you already have another young cat in your home.

Ginger was given to a Kitten Rescue foster by lady whose cat had kittens in her backyard. Ginger was quick to jump into her arms and purr. She is a gentle, humble, and extremely sweet kitten. She gets along well with other cats and is used to friendly dogs. Ginger will sleep on the bed with you and hope for morning cuddles. She also loves to stretch out and watch TV with you. Ginger tested positive for FIV because her mom had it; she should be tested again in six months. Ginger is 100% healthy and safe being around other cats. Ginger would be fine in a home as an only kitten, with other cats, or with a friendly dog. Although she has tested positive for FIV (Feline Immunodeficiency Virus). FIV is not a big deal. Given proper care and attention, an FIV+ cat will live the same lifespan as an FIV negative cat. The disease is extremely hard to transmit from cat to cat, requiring direct blood contact (typically from a deep puncture wound). It is not transmissible to humans.

Penguin is a sweet, affectionate, and talkative cat with plenty of love to give. He purrs instantly when you touch him and is content to sit in your lap and make biscuits. Penguin is friendly and curious with other cats. We believe he was abandoned, as he started showing up suddenly at our back door at all hours, begging for food and asking to come inside. As Penguin is still transitioning from his stray days to indoor life, he does cry wanting to go outside. This is improving over time, but he will require patience, as well as plenty of playtime and attention.

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www. kittenrescue.org.

Saving one animal won't change the world, but the world will surely change for that animal. •
