School Board Approves Participation in South Bay Promise Program

By Cristian Vasquez

During the first meeting of the year, members of the Torrance School Board approved a request for Torrance Unified School District (TUSD) to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with California State University, Dominguez Hills (CSUDH), El Camino Community College District (ECCCD) and South Bay Workforce Investment Board (SBWIB) in order to participate in the South Bay Promise Program.

"We are really excited about this new partnership," TUSD Chief Academic Officer Dr. Kati Krumpke said Tuesday night. "I want to thank our administrators, our high school administrators and our college coordinators for being here tonight in support of this. They are very excited about this MOU."

Through the MOU, TUSD will work as part of the South Bay Promise Program to increase the amount of students attending college and being successful. South Bay Promise is committed to uniting the efforts of TUSD, ECCCD and SBWIB with CSUDH so that the road toward academic, personal and professional success for students is streamlined.

"College Promise is a nationwide movement right now and prominent in that movement is Long Beach City College with its promise agreement with Cal State Long Beach and the Long Beach School Unified District," Vice President Academic Affairs at El Camino Dr. Jean M. Shankweiler said during the Board meeting. "In the summer [Los Angeles] Mayor [Eric] Garcetti also announced a promise program with the Los Angeles community colleges and the students there."

The promise programs are designed to assist students within a targeted demographic to attend community college and not have to pay a large sum, if any, of their enrollment fee. El Camino is currently partnered with CSUDH and the SBWIB in a three-year agreement with Centinela Valley and Inglewood School District for the South Bay Promise.

"South Bay Promise is supported by the El Camino College Foundation, and the foundation will support the enrollment fees for students who participate in this promise," said Shankweiler. "Students will be encouraged, if not required, to apply for financial aid and if possible obtain a board of governor fee waiver. If those venues don't provide the financial assistance the student needs, then the promise will step in and fill in the need."

In addition, the Board's staff report states that South Bay Promise "offers TUSD students that meet the admission requirements to attend

U.S. Skies Remain a Call-Free Zone - For Now

By Rob McCarthy

As if airline travel wasn't stressful enough for cramped passengers, there's talk about allowing phone service on domestic flights. The Department of Transportation (DOT) is floating a trial balloon--which is what government agencies do to gauge public reaction to policy changes--about lifting the nation's restriction on phone service on U.S. commercial flights. The DOT envisions that Wi-Fi phone service could be safe enough to install on commercial U.S. jets, but also admits there could be passenger backlash if the perceived ban on air-talk is lifted.

Cell phone service is only banned on commercial flights because of concerns that the signals will interfere with navigation and communications in the cockpit. The Transportation Department and the Federal Communications Commission are rethinking call-free skies, in effect since 1991. The ban does not cover Wi-Fi and other technology for making voice calls.

When transportation officials raised the possibility in 2014 of lifting the no-call rule, they heard back from 1,700 passengers, consumer advocates, and the airline unions. In response to a question of whether domestic flights should offer in-flight phone service, 96 percent of the emails and letters the department received said it was a horrible idea. Individuals

During after-hours storm emergencies only, Torrance residents may call the Torrance Fire Department at 310-781-7042 for information on sandbag availability. All Torrance Fire Stations have unfilled sandbags with a maximum of 25 per resident. Fire Station 1 on Carson Street and Crenshaw Boulevard has unfilled and filled sandbags during after-hour storm emergencies.

Coyote Management A Regional Approach

In early January the South Bay Cities Council of governments (SBCCOG) hosted a Coyote Management Task Force to discuss a regional approach to the coyote issues that almost all South Bay cities are experiencing. Representatives from 10 cities and about 50 people attended the meeting for the full agenda of speakers who gave presentations on the need to educate residents that they should not be leaving ‘attractors’ out for the coyotes such as food or water for cats and dogs. Also, there was an emphasis on respecting the coyotes and managing the problems that occur.
Speakers included Kent Smirl, Department of Fish and Wildlife, and one of his volunteers for the Wildlife Watch Program, Dave Dodge; Bob Wieder, Pest Management Division, Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner/Weights & Measures, Hoang Dinh, Wildlife Specialist officer with LA City Animal Services; and Dan Fox, Owner, Animal Pest Management Services Urban Wildlife Biologist.

City representatives will be attending some important workshops in February put on by State and County agencies and after those take place, the SBCCOG will hold another meeting which will focus on how to extend the Torrance Management Plan to other cities since they seem to be the farthest along. All agreed that the regional approach was extremely important. The speaker from the State Fish and Wildlife Department said that this was the first meeting to develop a regional approach that he had heard of thus far.

Victory at North Keeps West Flawless in Pioneer League

By Adam Serrao

Don't look now, but the West High Warriors may be the favorites to win the Pioneer League championship this season. After a 10-17 record and a fifth place finish in the standings under Neal Perlmutter in his first year as head coach of the team one year ago, the Warriors boys' basketball team seems to be getting quite comfortable with each other on the hardwood. A 66-63 victory on the road at North High last Wednesday night not only kept West undefeated in league play this season, but also gave the team its fifth win in its last seven games. With an 11-6 record on the year, the Warriors appear to be hitting their stride and putting together the momentum that it will certainly take to come out on top in a highly competitive Pioneer League.

It hasn't been easy for the Warriors--but with two straight wins on the road to start this year's league play, the team is in the driver's seat of the Pioneer League title race. After trailing big in the first half to a Saxons team that was 11-6 on the year heading into the game, Perlmutter gave his team a shot of adrenaline in the locker room. "When you play North, you have to play your tempo," he explained. "If you play their tempo, they'll get easy three-pointers." North had no problem playing at its own pace and sinking those three-point shots in the first half. Shea Eddington was the star of the first two quarters, putting up a total of 13 points to help the Saxons maintain a 10-point advantage at halftime. Eddington finished the game with 16 points.

It was a tale of two halves in this one as North dominated early, but West came out on fire late. The Warriors began the second half with a 26-7 run to overcome their 10-point deficit and finally take a slim lead a little over midway through the third quarter. Alex Mishaw outpaced North's Eddington to lead West and all scorers with 20 points on the night. Mishaw hit key shots during his team's third quarter run and was aided by the play of fellow teammates Noah Carroll and Brandon Thomas, who each put up 10 on the night. Once the Warriors finally took the lead, the team was able to maintain its momentum, turn up its defense and hold on for the win.

The Warriors' slim three-point victory was their second close win in as many games. In West's first game of Pioneer League play, the team took on its rivals from Torrance and came away with a one-point, 46-45 victory on the road versus the Tartars. "Winning two games in hostile environments is a huge confidence-booster heading into the rest of league play," Perlmutter said. West will certainly have a lot of confidence to carry with it now as it moves on to play at home game against its rivals from South High. North, on the other hand, will be relying on more solid play from Eddington as it travels to Centennial to take on a tough Apaches team before facing off against the Torrance Tartars late in the week.

Torrance High

The Torrance Tartars are trying to keep their collective heads above water after coming out of a stretch in which the team lost five in a row and six of its last eight before the start of league play. Centennial was first up on the schedule for the Tartars as the team attempted to get out in front of their rivals from the Pioneer League and somehow get a hot streak going. Unfortunately for Torrance, the Apaches used their home floor to squash any hope that the Tartars may have had of gaining any momentum in the game and in the season.

Centennial began the game on fire, putting up a whopping 23 points in the first quarter. If that wasn't good enough, it put up 25 in the second to go up by 20 points at just halftime. Richard McMichael was able to tear the Torrance defense to shreds. Centennial's shooting guard hit 50 percent of his shots and put up 31 points on the night. Despite a strong 24-point quarter in the third for the Tartars, the Apaches were able to use their offensive explosion to hold on for a 81-65 victory. Torrance will look to get back on track this week when it travels to North High for a divisional battle and inner-city rivalry game with the Saxons.

South High

The South High Spartans were on fire heading into league play this season after coming through with a five-game winning streak and taking seven of their last eight games before a Pioneer League opener with North High. The Saxons were able to extinguish the Spartans' hot streak, handing South a 78-72 loss two weeks ago.

South has been attempting to ride the hot hand of its senior guard Jordan Tang all season long. Tang was on fire against the Spartans' next divisional opponent, the Leuzinger Olympians, leading all scorers with a total of 34 points. South put up 58 on the night, but fell victim to a poor defensive effort once again. Behind 19 points from Damani Washington and 17 from Marquese Cook, Leuzinger was able to put 73 points on the scoreboard and eventually come away with a 15-point victory, handing the Spartans their second league loss in a row. South will look to get back to its winning ways this week when it takes on a pair of rivals in Torrance and West High, respectively.

TerriAnn in Torrance

Jury Ready

Story and Photos by TerriAnn Ferren

Almost everyone, at one time or another, receives that very official letter in the mail with the return address from the Superior Court of California including the red capital letters on the front saying, “Official Jury Summons Enclosed.” A couple months ago, I received my notice to appear. My heart sank into my stomach, knowing I was about to enter the legal world again. Maybe it is the word “summons” that makes me cringe...but every time the courts require my participation, I remember the time I actually served on a jury. Luckily, my jury service was fulfilled locally, right here at the Torrance Courthouse. A large group of perspective jurors, I being among them, were ushered into one of the courtrooms after being called to serve. I think the courtroom for the case was on the second floor. I remember being directed into the jury box where lawyers asked us questions in front of the judge. Shortly after, 12 of us were chosen and the case began.

The courtroom atmosphere was new for me, as I had never been inside the Torrance Courthouse, and being seated as one of 12 jurors was a surprise. The case before us was a sordid one about a woman charged with prostitution, pandering and pimping. The woman, who was accused of these charges, entered the courtroom in a business suit with her hair in a bun and without a whisper of makeup. Her attorney was very competent, as was the prosecuting attorney. The case against her was extensive, long, and, dare I say, enlightening. Who knew? The attorneys made use of charts, which showed maps, photographs and timelines. I can remember deliberating in the jury room as we studied the evidence and meticulously discussed the case. Everyone was serious about the job entrusted to us and we painstakingly worked until we had a unanimous verdict.

Sitting on that jury gave me a renewed respect for our judicial system and I felt I had done my civic duty. So why is it that I cringe every time I receive another summons to appear? Does anyone else feel as I do? I decided to find out what others think about jury duty.

Anita Kenyon told me she served on a jury once. “It was a three-week case in Santa Monica,” she recalled. It was a real estate civil litigation and I was very honored to be on this case because...I was on a jury with lawyers, engineers, a pharmacist, a writer, and it was wild. It was fun to see lawyers in action ‘cuz I’ve never experienced that.” Anita went on to tell me that she made two good friends while serving on this particular jury. Each day, during their one-and-a-half-hour lunch, they visited and got to know each other and they are friends to this day.

Kris Lynch told me that around, 2000 he was called for jury duty at the courthouse in Downtown Los Angeles. “I did not want to be there at that time,” he said. “It was during the time when Stanley ‘Tookie’ Williams was being tried. I was scared to be Downtown. I was there for two days, but didn’t get chosen for a trial.”

That evening, I called my brother and he told me he was chosen as part of a jury for a trial that lasted nearly a month. “It was a sexual assault case... I don’t want to go into the details... we were on the case a month. It was a calendar month I served. Even though it seemed like a long time, I knew I had to do it. I did my civic duty,” Tommy said.

The next morning, I happened to ask a stretch exercise class if anyone had ever served on a jury and two people immediately spoke up. Ron Schroeder told me he remembers when he served long ago when you had to be available for two weeks. He told me, “I had one murder trial one week and another listening as the recorded voice informed me I did not have to report to the courthouse in the morning. I have been calling each evening, entering my numbers and listening for the murder trial the next.” What startled him was when he looked out the courthouse windows, he actually recognized and spotted the house where one of the murders took place! Then, Bonniegay Bacon told me she was contacted by telephone by an attorney in another state who happened to be gathering information for a court case. That sounded odd to me, but she assured me the inquiry was legitimate and she answered all the questions.

That afternoon, Gail Shota told me she was called to serve on a jury on the last day of her eligibility. Allen Teng said, “I was on a jury about five years ago and overall the experience was okay.”

From my research asking people if they served on jury duty, I was surprised that most people had been summonsed, but not everyone had been chosen to participate on a jury.

This evening, I again called the 800 number listed on the Summons for Jury Service I had received in the mail--punching in my jury ID number and pin number when asked, and then directive. So far, I haven’t been ordered to the courthouse, but who knows if this week I will be sitting on a jury or not? My civic duty, as I see it, is to be available to serve, and I am. It used to be easier getting excused from jury duty, but no longer. A Torrance resident and well-known judge told me that the idea behind requesting so many people for the jury pool was to secure a cross-section of the public for juries--making each trial as fair as possible. That makes sense. Whatever happens this week, if I am required to report to the courthouse or not, I feel I am now “jury ready.”

Update: Just as I was finishing this column, I took a break and called in to the automated check-in and guess what? I have to report to the Torrance Courthouse tomorrow morning at 9 a.m. sharp in enough time for a security check. I am ready and consider myself a citizen well-prepared to serve. I won’t know if I will be seated on a jury until tomorrow, but in any event, I am ready...jury ready! • cited their loss of privacy, while aviation safety groups said the additional noise would make flight crews’ jobs more difficult. One commenter said terrorists might find a way to exploit the technology.

People used “strong language” to describe their dread about being confined on a domestic flight with nowhere to escape a phone conversation in the next seat or row, the department said. International carriers do allow passengers to make and receive voice calls, but not within 250 miles of the U.S.

It’s widely understood that Americans like the cabin quiet and free of loud talking. Allowing Wi-Fi technology aboard planes would “create air rage incidents by disgruntled passengers, place additional strains on flight attendances, and intrude on privacy and opportunities to sleep,” passengers and organizations warned the federal transit agency.

Despite the almost unanimous opposition by the flying public and pilots and attendants, the Transportation Department has come back with a more nuanced proposal that reads like in-flight phone conversations are a foregone conclusion.

Like before, the DOT is asking for public comment. Transportation officials say they’re aiming to protect passengers with a new proposal to require domestic airlines to tell customers before they book a seat that phone service is going to be available. The cost of in-flight phone service is expensive, yet regulators believe that Wi-Fi operators will find ways to lower the costs as technology is introduced.

Even the Federal Communications Commission, which hasn’t wavered on the restriction of nearly three decades ago, says it will reconsider.

This more-nuanced rule would regulate voice calls on an aircraft as a “matter of consumer protection, rather than ... ensuring aviation safety or preventing cellular interference with ground networks,” the DOT explained. It leaves open the possibility the public and unions again will reject the idea without specifying if the department will be

Blueberry, Mango, Kiwi

Run to save homeless animals! Join "Team Kitten Rescue" in the 5K of the Los Angeles Marathon on Sunday, March 19 (a link to more info is available on the home page of our website...www.kittenrescue.org). Check out this week's kitties and adopt your favorite today!

The “Fruit kittens,” Blueberry, Mango, and Kiwi, were taken to the shelter at the age of two weeks without their mama. Kitten Rescue saved them from certain death (shelters don’t want to kill tiny kittens, but they simply can’t bottle-feed around the clock). They were raised in the nursery at the KR Sanctuary, and when weaned went to their foster home. Bottle babies tend to be extra affectionate with people, and these three gorgeous kittens certainly are! They love everybody and all are wonderful cuddlers. They’re very playful and have welcomed their foster brother Lawrence into their family. Blueberry, Mango, Kiwi and Lawrence play, sleep and cuddle together. These siblings are also accustomed to adult cats and small dogs. Blueberry is the male, and Mango and Kiwi are the females. They look so much alike that we’ve had to color-code them with dots on their ears. Their personalities are similar: love, love and more love! It’s best for the four kittens (including Lawrence) to be adopted in pairs—though if you have a playful cat, two of these kittens could be adopted singly. Lawrence really needs one of them in his forever home.

Lawrence and his sister were found in a backyard at the age of one day. An experienced Kitten Rescue bottle-feeder took them. The female kitten died, which is not unusual for newborns without a mama. Lawrence survived! After weaning, he went to a foster family with other kittens. That was his first experience with other cats and they taught him how to be a real kitten. Now he fits right into his family of three other kittens--playing, sleeping and cuddling with them. Lawrence is also accustomed to adult cats and small amazing backflips while she tries to catch it! She also loves to run around with her sister, like they were a herd of gazelles. It's cute to hear the pitter patter of eight little feet. Venue loves to end her day by jumping up onto your bed when you are about to go to sleep, and purr on your chest. Then she usually finds a more comfortable place at the foot of the bed for a long catnap.

Mandy is a sweet Calico kitten with gold-colored eyes who was hand-raised with her sister, Venus. She's completely comfortable around people and is gentle and fun. Mandy has an easygoing personality and a very cute mew, which she uses to manipulate you into giving her treats. But she also loves to rambunctiously play with her sister. They chase each other and love racing up and down the stairs. Her favorite toy is a pink fuzzy ball that she bats around. Mandy is very tolerant of bathing and nail trimming--unlike her sister, who likes to let everyone know that she doesn't appreciate baths. After a couple of mews, Mandy usually just relaxes in the tub.

Cappy is an affectionate, smart, energetic cat who is playful and fun. Absolutely devoted to playtime, Cappy will happily bat around spiral toys as if playing ice hockey. Up and down the hallway he'll slide, using his left leg and then his right to score a goal. He'll jump. He'll fall. He'll fearlessly throw his body against a wall. Then shake it off and get back into the game. In fact, Cappy would rather play than eat—which keeps him on the slim side. He is a curious kitty who explores on his own, as if hunting or in search of his next adventure. When Cappy misplaces his pucks (oops, his toys), he and his foster parent hunt for them together. The furniture is moved and Cappy runs behind each one to check. It's almost a game in itself. Cappy's wide-eyed expression is sure to make you smile. Scoop him up and kiss his belly. He'll purr and snuggle and then be off again. Arrange to meet Cappy soon. He's everything you are looking for in a kitty.

These kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kittens are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Boulevard, #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

On Saturdays, we have adoptions from noon to 3:30 p.m. in Westchester at 8655 Lincoln Boulevard, just south of Manchester Avenue, and also in Mar Vista at 3860 Centinela Avenue, just south of Venice Boulevard. Our website lists additional adoption sites and directions to each location. •

CSUDH upon graduation, guaranteed acceptance to the university and offers El Camino students guaranteed acceptance to CSUDH upon the completion of 60 semester credits including full general education certification.” An added element of the MOU is for the SBWIB to help students prepare for their post-secondary education by providing after-school enrichment such as SAT preparation, tutoring, college workshops and mentoring and work-based learning activities.

“The State Chancellors Office for Community Colleges is supporting these promise programs, so we are applying for a grant worth $750,000 to launch this program,” El Camino College Vice President Student and Community Advancement Dr. Jeanie M. Nishime said. “We are hoping this will be successful-but regardless, our college is committed to expanding this program. To help with that effort, our President Dr. Dena Maloney is going to be speaking with all the mayors of the cities that feed into El Camino College--as well as chambers--along with our foundation director to help raise the money for an endowment to help make this program a reality.”

Interested students would be required to participate in the First-Year Experience, a successful program that provides substantive counseling for students embedded with the programs. Currently there are pilot programs for students who might be one level below the transfer requirement for Math and English. The students in FYE have to take an English class and another class as part of the program, as well as meet with counselors. The foundation is also committed to purchasing any books needed by the students to be a part of FYE.

“The idea with the promise is that 30 students, as currently configured, from each school district are invited to apply for and participate in the promise and FYE program,” Shankweiler said. “This would include Torrance Unified School District next year with 30 students. Our Office of Outreach and outreach counselors will work with the high schools to get the students to apply for the programs and meet the requirements, who are interested in the program.”

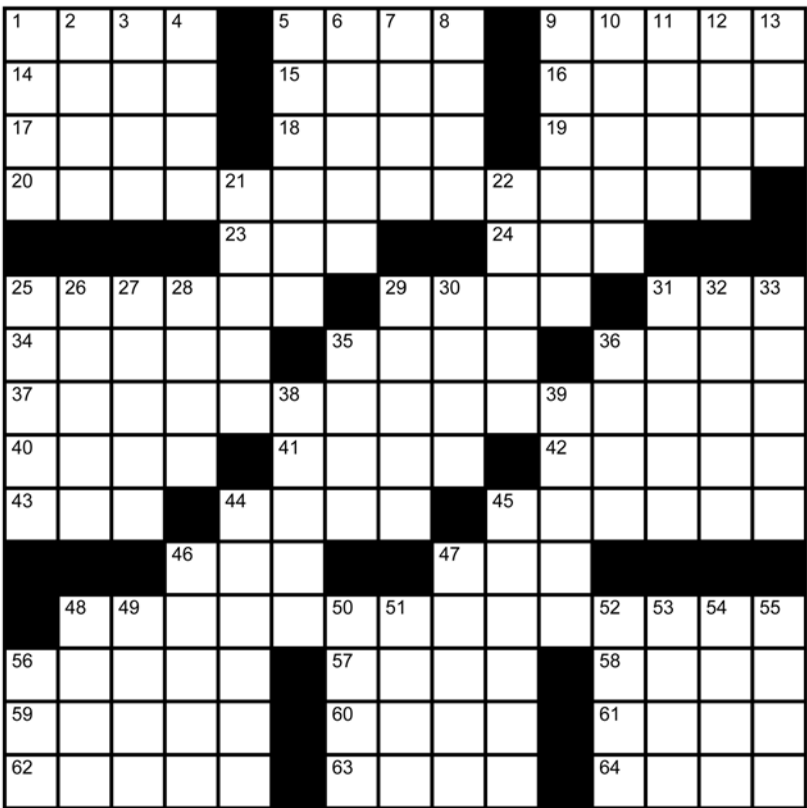

At the moment there are 30 students participating from each school district, but the goal has been set to enroll 500 students through the partnership by 2018-2019. South Bay Promise is designed to create and strengthen the college-going culture while making sure that students are prepared for college. The program will allow students to receive early advising on the required courses for admission to CSUDH. In addition, students will also be granted the opportunity to engage in events hosted at the CSUDH campus so that they become familiar with college life while still in high school.

“We are committed, regardless of whether the state provides funding or not, to this promise program,” Nishime said. “We want to ensure that the South Bay has a college-going culture and that our students benefit from coming to El Camino for two years, or going to a four-year institution. If they come to El Camino, we will pay for their college fees and put them into a cohort program so that they have the support system that they need to be successful.” •
