West High to Host Annual College and Career Counselors Fair

By Cristian Vasquez

On Saturday, Feb. 21 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. students from the entire Torrance Unified School District are invited to attend College Fair 2015 at the West High School gym, located at 20401 Victor St.

The 2015 College Fair, sponsored by the Torrance Council of PTAs and Torrance Unified School District, brings together the district's students with college representatives from all over the country.

"We have a list that we use every year [to organize event] and most of the people on the list are local people who are alumni and come to represent their school," Torrance Council PTAs President Janet Tajii said. "However, this year we for the first time each high school will have a college and career counselor on site. We have actually used them as a resource since they have connections to a lot of the colleges all over the country. So we got a lot of contacts from them for people to invite to the college fair and represent their schools."

Tajii has been president for two years and was president of the West High School PTA last time the college fair was hosted at West High. All together she has been at six college fairs and has experienced how beneficial the event is to the city's students.

"A lot of it we are gearing toward the sophomores, juniors and seniors at the high schools but there are a lot of middle school kids that come," Tajii said. "We want to expose them to the idea of college and let them know that there are so many different options. There is not just UCLA, and El Camino or Cal State Long Beach. There are so many schools all over the country and this is really to get them exposed and have them start thinking about their options."

The Torrance Council of PTAs is a collaborative effort between the cities four high schools, eight middle schools, one preschool and 17 elementary schools. All PTAs, or unit as they are referred to, is dedicated to providing "leadership training, coordination of the efforts of the units, cooperation in promoting the common interests of the units and conference regarding common problems." The 2015 College Fair is just one example of the type of work that the Torrance Council of PTAs engages in for the benefit of students.

"This is only the second year that I have been president of the organization that runs it," Tajii said. "This fair runs for four hours but last year we printed 500 programs and ran out of them about half way through the event."

This year there will be an estimated 80-100 representatives from different colleges, universities, trade schools and from the military. In addition there will be test preparation organization representatives available to answer questions. Along with the information booths and large number of representatives, there will be information seminars for students who decide to attend.

"We have about 15 to 20 seminars that take place in the classrooms throughout the day," Tajii said. "The seminars include topics such test prep, scholarships, topics such as the arts or technology. It all depends on what the college reps who will host seminars on several topics. It is mostly booths and reps but it is such a variety that the students can walk around and pick and choose who they want to talk to."

There will be three sessions of seminars that run 45 minutes each. In addition, there are four seminars during each session, which students can pick from based on a schedule that will made available. Representatives at the event will have additional information available to students and parents regarding their institution.

Unlike past years, the 2015 College Fair this year's College and Careers Counselors from the high schools will be assisting with the event.

"We do have a table where there will be high school counselors available to answer questions from the students," Tajii said. "Usually there are three counselors and if students have questions they can go there and ask."

The college fair is open to everybody, it is free and no reservations required. Persons interested or with additional questions can visit <http://torrancecouncilofptas.org>, email College Fair Chairman Martha Deutsch at CollegeFair@tusd.org or at torrancecouncilofptas@gmail.com or by calling (310) 720-3893. •

New Specializations Are Changing Long-Held Industry Perceptions

(BPT) - Optimistic job forecasts for trending specializations in accounting are making the field more appealing than ever for recent graduates. Accounting jobs are projected to grow 13 percent between 2012 and 2022, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, with select specializations projected to grow even faster.

Emerging opportunities in the field call for new and diverse skill sets that have not been required in the past. Today’s accountants are being asked to go beyond number crunching to help companies make important business decisions that impact their bottom line, impart technologically-driven insight and even solve white-collar crimes. In fact, each of these assignments represents a hot, new professional specialization in the accounting field.

Financial analysis, business systems analysis and forensic accounting have emerged as exciting opportunities for job-seekers to fill in-demand business roles in almost every industry.

Financial Analysis

Accountants who can analyze financial information and identify key trends are in high demand. These financial analysts weigh company risks and rewards by assessing the current state of the business, how the market is expected to perform and how the business will be impacted by a potential deal. Companies rely on this type of accountant to interpret financial data and turn it into insights that can be used to make investments and offer background information around mergers and acquisitions. Employment of financial analysts is expected to grow 16 percent between 2012 and 2022, faster than the national average, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Business Systems Analysis

Many companies are looking for accountants who understand information technology (IT). Called business systems analysts (or sometimes computer systems analysts), these professionals use their knowledge of IT to determine the best way to implement and upgrade the use of technology to maximize business performance and profit. As cloud computing, cybersecurity and mobile networks are further integrated into everyday business, demand for business systems analysts will continue to increase. The field is expected to grow 25 percent between 2012 and 2022, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Forensic Accounting

Forensic accountants combine traditional accounting with investigative skills to help companies sniff out fraud and white-collar crime. Past high-profile fraud cases involving Bernie Madoff and Enron prompted stricter regulations and public calls for greater transparency. Large companies now routinely employ forensic accountants to protect them from similar activities. Nearly 40 percent of the top 100 accounting firms in the United States now have a forensic accounting department and the field is expected to be one of the top 20 job markets in the next few years.

Students interested in pursuing these career opportunities in accounting will first need a bachelor’s degree in the field. Graduates can enhance their career potential by earning a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) designation to demonstrate their high level technical skills, advanced knowledge and high ethical standards. A student can earn a CPA designation through 150 semester hours (typically 30 more than a bachelor’s degree), passing the CPA exam and then applying for licensure. Eligibility requirements for the exam vary by state.

Many schools now offer degree programs that address the growing demand for these “new” accountants. DeVry University, for example, offers a bachelor’s degree in accounting, and accounting specializations within its bachelor’s degree programs in business administration, management and technical management.

Upon completing their degree, students can begin training in the field for a specialized accounting career. Some companies offer applicants a self-selection test to help them determine the right specialization for their qualifications and interests. In general, finding the right specialization comes down to personal preference. Financial analysts require a more in-depth understanding of business markets, business systems analysts need a solid IT background, and forensic accountants require knowledge in law enforcement and criminal justice.

“The days are long gone when all accountants did was manage financial statements and taxes,” said Beth Rolison, accounting professor at DeVry University. “Today’s complex business environment requires accountants to be the eyes and ears of a company and demands that they possess a variety of soft and hard skills to live up to the role of trusted advisor.”

Trending specializations open the door for students with diverse backgrounds and interests to enter the field. Demand for accountants will continue to rise as they play an increasingly important role in helping businesses navigate the financial landscape in our dynamic marketplace. •

Hearing Better Thanks to Smarter Technology

(BPT) - Technology has made dramatic improvements in the lives of people of all ages, and the improvements made in hearing technology may be some of the most advanced to occur in the last several years.

Just a decade ago, hearing aids were basic amplifiers. Now they're completely connected with other technological devices, making everyday life easier for the wearer.

For example, have an iPhone and want to listen to music, or answer a call and hear the person on the line? Starkey's Halo hearing aids, and the companion TruLink app, allow the hearing devices to connect directly with an iPhone without the need for any other intermediary device.

There are more than 36 million Americans with hearing loss, yet only 20 percent of those who could benefit from a hearing aid actually wear one, according to the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders. The hope is that the rapid improvements in technology mean that more people with hearing difficulties will opt to undergo a simple hearing test and find the perfect hearing aid, allowing them to return to the lifestyle of their choice.

Many people avoid getting hearing aids because of the perceived stigma attached to them. People worry they'll look older or that they will be perceived to have a disability. This is where technology improvements have made great strides. Devices today are much smaller than the hearing aids your parents or grandparents wore. In fact, many are barely visible to others. For example, the Halo is an in-the-canal receiver, making the entire device very discreet. Other devices are so small that no one will notice you are wearing them.

Hearing loss affects Americans of all ages. Sometimes it's caused by age, but frequently for younger adults, it can be caused by a disease or by over-exposure to loud noises. Improvements in technology are changing the perception of hearing aids, so if you think you are experiencing hearing loss, get your hearing tested. If it's determined you could benefit from a hearing aid, check out all the latest benefits you can enjoy due to these technological improvements. •

What is The Best Way to Protect Against Viruses?

By Sid Kato, Array Systems, Inc.

Viruses are computer programs written by malicious programmers to infect your computers. Most people aren't aware their computer has contracted a virus because a virus can come from an email (usually at attachment), website, social media site like Facebook, or even your phone.

The best way to protect your computer against viruses is by using anti-virus software. There are several software companies providing good solutions. I did a search for the "Best antivirus software" and the top three on the website www.top10antivirussoftware.com are: 1) McAfee, 2) Kaspersky and 3) Bullguard. I currently use the free version of AVG on my computer but there are higher rated software companies available. I did another search on "Best free antivirus software" and the top three on the website www.pcmag.com are: 1) Malwarebytes 2) Panda free antivirus and 3) Bitdefender antivirus free version.

Anti-virus software works by scanning your computer for viruses and can run in either an active or passive mode, based on settings you control. When the setting is passive, you need to schedule the scan or manually click the scan. The scan could take several minutes to complete. Using the active setting means your computer is constantly scanning for viruses. I recommend the active setting, which will slow down your computer, but provides the best defense against viruses.

Good antivirus software will detect the virus and then ask you to delete or quarantine the virus. Sometimes, the virus can't be deleted without impacting the operations of your computer. For these types of viruses, the anti-virus software will isolate the virus into a separate "quarantine area" of your computer where it cannot cause harm.

Antivirus software is critical to maintaining the health of your computer, so make sure to do your part to defend your computer from attack. I wish you the best of luck and remember to always use protection!

Men are from Mars: Women, Not so Much

By Gerry Chong

If you thought it strange that Men are from Mars and women are from Venus, be grateful, because they're at least in the same solar system. By contrast the political Left and the Right are not within hailing distance of each other's galaxies.

A few weeks ago, while sitting in a doctor's waiting room for my wife to emerge from her exam, I picked up a magazine entitled YES!. It's a magazine of the Left and espoused all the usual propaganda, among which was the belief that the U.S. is so wealthy it can and should support all Americans, regardless of their skill level, degree of effort, or any other differentiating characteristics of their being. I am assuming that same level of generosity would apply to any immigrant capable of crossing the Rio Grande. Think about it, a universal wage without reference to effort, skill, or contribution to society. That astounding magazine got me to thinking about the differences between Left and Right.

It would seem to me that the Right is composed of naïve boobs who believe a government should act in a country's overall best interest following both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. The Right then, takes a global and encompassing view of governance.

The Left, however, has a different approach. Using its access to both government and private databases, the Left slices and dices the population into different groups, emphasizing their differences. This process called "data mining" gives Liberals the ability to separate issues by race, age, sex, wealth, education, and immigration status, forming different coalitions based a commonality of their best interest. The best interest of the country seldom enters into the process.

For example, raising the minimum wage helps those at the bottom of the social scale, but it will cause the compensation of everyone higher up the salary scale to escalate also. That would cause employers to raise their prices and bring about inflation. When the cost increases have run their course, everyone will be in the same relative position, but we will be worse off internationally. Catering to one segment of the public hurts the rest of the country.

A corollary to this approach to governance is the understanding that the groups that are not directly affected are content to let others get their share of the spoils system. For example, a Gay person my not pay particular attention to the raising of the minimum wage; and a minimum wage earner may not be concerned about a Gay person's civil rights. Each takes what he wants from the system, allowing others to exploit the system to accomplish its own ends.

In a statement of unusual bluntness, Barack Obama told Hillary that she would have to form her own coalitions, since he had no intention of sharing his with her. This, then, is the legacy of the Left, a system in which one takes what he wants at the expense of the whole. How sad is that? •

Execution Near Chapel Hill Is Nothing Less Than A Hate Crime

By Cristian Vasquez

Last week a Chapel Hill man executed three students of the Muslim faith in North Carolina. Let's not kid ourselves: this was a hate crime. As soon as news about the horrendous crime made its way to our media outlets, the debate was ignited about the nature of the crime: was it really about a parking dispute among neighbors? Or does this break down to a hate crime by an intolerant individual?

I'll start by saying that any murder is fueled by hate and anger. Any person soulless enough to kill someone when their life or the life of a loved one isn't in danger, is acting out of hate and/or rage. In addition, as much as we may try to get along with our neighbors and be accommodating to everyone within the vicinity of our homes, disputes and disagreements will surface on occasion. That does not mean that we shoot and kill our neighbors to find a much-desired resolution.

Now, in this case the man responsible for the murders took the time to shot all three victims in the head. Three people shot in their home, in the head is an execution. Such an action can only be fueled by unreasonable anger and blind hate. This 46-year-old man killed three people! He killed three-college students execution style. This wasn't a spur-of-the-moment crime; it was not an isolated incident that somehow got out of hand and ended in tragedy. This is a cold, calculated act where three people, all of the Muslim faith have lost their lives in one of the most cowardly of ways and I am supposed to accept it's because of a parking dispute? Malarkey! Lies! This is a nauseating case of denial.

I can't help but think that if the roles were reversed the rhetoric would be very different. What I am about to say is speculation but given the history of our media, it's a safe assumption. Had this execution involved a gunman with a Muslim background and three victims of a non-Islamic faith, every news outlet on television and radio would label this an act of terror. If the aggressor's name was Deah Shaddy Barakat and one of the victims was identified as Craig Stephen Hicks, this would be an act of terror for FoxNews, CNN and MSNBC.

Yet, the reality is that the victims are Deah Shaddy Barakat, 23, his wife Yusor Abu-Salha, 21, and Razan Abu-Salha, 19, while the aggressor's surname is Hicks. As a result the national media and a segment of our society is deciding to sugarcoat this incident and not call it an act of terror, or a hate crime. They are minimizing the tragedy to a dispute regarding parking. It's heartbreaking and frustrating to think that there is a good possibility that this savage, who killed three people and destroyed an unknown amount of lives, will not be charged with a hate crime. It is unfortunate that there are media outlets with anchors that foam at the mouth demanding accountability from our leaders, the downtrodden and average criminals but who refuse to hold this murderous beast to the same standards. I refuse to let anger and frustrations drain me of energy. Instead, my prayers and love go out to the victims and their families. •

It's Time for Dodger Baseball – Or Is It?

Boys Regular Season Comes to an End

By Adam Serrao

It's still simply the offseason and the Dodgers roster has already been overturned to a great extent. Bye-bye Matt Kemp; he'll be playing for the team's rivals down in San Diego. Bye-bye Hanley Ramirez; he's gone to the Boston Red Sox. Those two players changing locations should make for some interesting story lines themselves in the upcoming 2015 baseball season. But guess what? You won't be able to see those storylines. Time Warner Cable thought that they had a grand idea when they created SportsNet L.A. alongside the Dodgers in January 2013 as part of a 25-year, $8.35 billion deal. It may have been a great idea before the inspiration became too expensive for any other local networks to pick up. Now, instead of all Dodgers, all the time, approximately 70% of the Los Angeles market will be forced to succumb to no Dodgers, none of the time until something gets itself worked out.

To set things straight off the bat, Time Warner Cable SportsNet LA, otherwise known as just SportsNet LA, is a regional sports network jointly owned by the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Southern California division of Time Warner Cable. The reason why that must be clarified is because you may not have seen the network yet if you don't own Time Warner Cable. Time Warner, with their $8.35 million, outbid Fox Sports West as the regional rights holder for the team two years ago now. Oh how the fans miss those Fox Sports West days. Maybe the Dodgers play better while in hiding. They've won the National League West for two seasons in a row now and the fans? Well the fans haven't been able to see their favorite team succeed until its playoff time where the major networks pick up the games and the team's major stars falter under pressure.

Certainly, it seems almost impossible to have even reached this point with the network. Imagine, coming up on another brand new season after a full offseason of supposed negotiating yet still, nothing even resembling a resolution on the horizon. Ed Desser, a veteran sports television consultant and negotiator recently expressed his thoughts on the issue to the L.A. Times. "I don't think anybody really knows how it's going to play out," he explained. "Anybody who tells you for certain what's going to happen, I think, is staring into a crystal ball."

If you look deeper into that crystal ball, you'll see the beginning of the Major League Baseball season two months away and notice that the MLB itself is attempting to stay as far away from the issue as possible. While Bud Selig gave fans optimism on the topic at hand, new commissioner Rob Manfred, a longtime negotiator for the league in his first year as MLB 'commish,' has other ideas. "Distribution issues are fundamentally issues between the rights holder and the distributors. I have no role or leverage in terms of inducing anybody to do anything in that process. We stay in touch with the Dodgers. The Dodgers are very concerned and obviously want to have distribution, as do we, but we just don't really have a seat at that table." In other words, good luck in your negotiations with other networks, Time Warner Cable.

The deal with the Dodgers is contingent on the fact that Time Warner will give the organization $8 billion over 25 years in exchange for exclusive marketing rights for the new SportsNet LA channel. Well, Time Warner is going to have a problem coming up with that money if they don't reach deals with other Southern California distributors soon. The other distributors currently want no part of Time Warner because the cable network insists that SportsNet LA be carried along with other mainstream premium channels, rather than on an "a la carte" basis or in a separate sports tier of programming. Well, that; and, quite frankly, the high cost of the channel that Time Warner has set is simply driving away potential buyers.

Factor into this whole big equation the pending mergers between Time Warner Cable with Comcast and AT&T with DirecTV. Both of these mergers need approval from the FCC before they can officially happen. AT&T and DirecTV have a March 23 deadline for a decision on the approval while TWC and Comcast have a March 30 deadline. You can certainly bet that until those mergers either do or don't happen, no negotiations for the channel will be taking place. If you've noticed by this time, March 30 is just six days before the season opener. If you're a fan of the Dodgers or even a fan of the game of baseball in general, you may want to run into room, grab the nearest pillow, and just start screaming into it now. The outlook is bleak, at best.

Without the channel being televised to most of Los Angeles, we aren't just missing out on a game between the Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds in mid-May. We're missing out on a baseball team that is currently at its best since arguable the 1988 World Series days. We're missing out on Clayton Kershaw, perhaps the best pitcher of his time or all-time even. Most importantly though, there's Vin Scully. Sure you can still catch him for a few innings on the radio. But that golden voice that has become the voice of the Dodgers and the voice of baseball has only a few years left behind the microphone. Is Time Warner really going to take that away from the people for yet another season? •

By Adam Serrao

If you were to ask the North High boys' head basketball coach, Luke Dupperon, the best way to describe his team's league season this year, he'd probably use the word "rollercoaster." That's precisely what it has been. After a promising start to league play in which the Saxons beat both Centennial and West High to start at 2-0, the team then went on an up-and-down string and dropped consecutive games to Torrance, Leuzinger and South - all in a row. Dupperon and his team rebounded by winning their next three games, putting them in prime positioning to take a top spot in the Pioneer League standings to close out the season. That was, however, before Leuzinger and South came back to town. With consecutive close losses to both the Olympians (70-69) and the Spartans (93-90) to close out their regular season, the Saxons not only fell to a 5-5 record in league play, but also fell into third place in the Pioneer League standings to close out the year.

Some may have expected Leuzinger to roll right over the Saxons in last Tuesday night's affair at North High. In their first matchup at Leuzinger, the Olympians won by 11 points and outscored North 18-8 in the fourth quarter alone. This game, however, was different. The Saxons stayed in it and trailed by only four at the half. "I told the kids at halftime that they needed to be more aggressive," Dupperon said. "I just told them that they had to execute, play, and have confidence in themselves."

Dupperon's halftime speech worked, as the Saxons went on to start the quarter on a 12-3 run and led by as many as five points. Leuzinger took the lead back by the end of the third, however, and the see-saw game was neck-and-neck in the final seconds. With only three seconds remaining in the game, Leuzinger's Darrian Williams was at the line with a one-point lead and a chance to put things away. He missed both free throws. Eric Baker took the rebound for North and raced down the court, trying to beat the clock. He launched a shot up towards the hoop from half court. As the seconds ticked down and the ball flew through the air, but home crowd watched as it bounced off the backboard and missed the rim. The Saxons players all sank in dejection as they succumbed to a one point, 70-69 loss on the night.

North's game against South High didn't exactly end much better. Despite owning a 14 point lead at halftime, aided by 21 points from Ryan Burnett and 20 from Aaron Ogata, the Saxons relinquished their lead and ultimately took a 93-90 loss. Going into the game, North (12-13, 5-5) had the opportunity to lock up second place in the league should they have beaten South High (15-10, 7-3). Jordan Tang's 29 points accompanied by 22 from Michael Yost and 20 from Ajeya Kukreja made sure that didn't happen as the Spartans, themselves, came away with the win and the second place position in this year's Pioneer League standings.

En route to their second place finish, the Spartans didn't only edge out their rivals from North High with a massive second half. They also took care of their rivals from West. With a five point lead at the half, head coach Leo Klemm and his team used the second half to slowly extend their advantage and pull away from West. 15 points in third quarter followed by another 15 in the fourth allowed the Spartans to ease into a comfortable 52-40 win last Tuesday night at West High, on the heels of clinching the second place position over North two days later.

West High vs. Torrance High

The West High Warriors' disappointing season came to an end last Thursday night at home against the Torrance Tartars. Though they had lost their previous five games in a row, the Warriors were looking to come out strong and finish the season off on a winning note.

The Tartars used a big second quarter to pull out to a 9-point lead at the half after leading the entire way. Everyone expected the Warriors to simply give up and fade away at that point, but instead they battled back and cut into the Torrance lead behind 16 points from Christian Jackson. The Warriors (7-19, 2-8) trailed by only four points down the stretch in the fourth quarter, but big play from Jake Hirayama (13 points) held West at bay. A 15-point fourth quarter output was too little, too late for the Warriors as they ultimately dropped a nail-biter by the final score of 51-49.

While West had their problems this season, Torrance and head coach Paul Nitake were happy to see their schedule end with a matchup against the Warriors. Three league losses in a row to Leuzinger, North, and Centennial pushed the team down to fifth place in the Pioneer League standings, better than only West High who they edged out by only two points last Thursday night. In addition to Hirayama's 13, Oscar Parada added 10 points to make sure the Tartars (11-15, 4-6) sealed the victory down the stretch. With the win, the Tartars avoided ending their year with a 1-5 record over their last six games of the season. With only three seniors on their roster, Torrance figures to bring back almost a full squad of young players next season to bully around the Pioneer League when the time comes. •

Quilting in Torrance

By TerriAnn Ferren

Have you ever slept cuddled up with a snuggly special quilt? I have treasured quilts in my home from my late husband's Aunt Betty that make me smile each time I get them out. My visitors have the privilege of sleeping with them. One of my godsons, Nolan used to have a special blanket that he wouldn't let out of his sight. You know - the kind little ones wait by the dryer to claim after a much-needed wash. I asked him what ever happened to that blanket, which as I recall ended up in tatters, and he laughingly reported that he still has it! Married with three little girls, I doubt that, but I am sure his girls all have their own blanket.

Did you ever make a quilt? Blankets that are made with such thought, care, and artistry are rare. But there is still a core group in Torrance that meet to exchange ideas, patterns, and stories about quilts. The South Bay Quilters Guild is celebrating thirty-five years of quilting this year. I met with Sue Glass, who told me about the guild and how she got interested in quilting. "I've always sewn from the time I was a young girl. I made clothing and that sort of thing. My mother [taught me] and I took 'Home Ec' in school - I don't think they teach that sort of thing much anymore. But I started sewing probably when I was in the seventh grade. I didn't start quilting until about my mid-twenties when I moved to Northern California and it was cold and I needed something to sleep under, so I started to make a quilt." Sue told me that that first quilt gave her the 'bug' and she has been quilting since 1980. "The first quilt I made was out of blue jeans. I had a stock [pile] of old blue jeans because I had made a suit for one of my sons. It was a patchwork pattern - it was during the old hippie days. He wasn't old enough to object - he was about five or six," said Sue. Sue went on to tell me that first quilt was made for her sister, Marilyn. That experience with her first quilt taught her a lot about quilting. Sue shared, "I took a class about 1982. I lived above Yuba City, California and there was a little quilt shop up there where I took a class. Then I moved to Southern California in 1983 and took a class in 1984 at a little shop that is not there anymore in San Pedro. It was called Quilt Sales and that was my first class where somebody really knew what they were doing." After that class Sue was well on her way. She told me she enjoys learning from talented teachers who share their knowledge about quilting.

Sue was born on the Oregon coast, lived up north for awhile and then moved down to the South Bay in 1983. She saw an advertisement for the South Bay Quilters Guild, which had just formed in 1979. Sue attended the meeting and that was it. She became a member in 1986. Thirty years as a member of the South Bay Quilters Guild! But Sue didn't just join, she became an active member. She has been past president of the Guild four times, and Quilt Show Chair a number of times. But most of all, Sue enjoys meeting and talking with old friends and meeting new ones that enjoy quilting. "I enjoy it so much. I learn a lot from everybody. Somebody always has a tip or little trick they do and they are eager to share and help. It is just a lot of really wonderful people," said Sue.

I asked Sue what else does the Quilters Guild do besides have a yearly show and have meetings? They do quite a bit! First, they are part of the Comfort Quilt Project. For this particular project the members make hundreds of smaller lap quilts every year to be given to police departments who in turn give them to children who have been taken out of homes, etc. The quilts are also given to senior citizen centers, to hospitals, and to nursing homes. Those quilts are distributed all over the South Bay area. The next project very important to the quilters is called Read Me a Quilt, which was the brainchild of member Julie Maas about ten years ago. Julie works at CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates). CASA workers accompany children into court that have been taken from their parents, or for other reasons, and the CASA worker advocates for the child's rights and good, making sure the child isn't in court alone. The children have little. Julie Maas suggested the guild buy books and make age-appropriate quilts for each child. What a wonderful and special project! Sue told me, "Over 10 years, we have made hundreds of them [quilts]." But that is not all these talented women do. They also send quilts to the military hospitals in Afghanistan for use by our wounded soldiers in the hospital who sometimes are transferred to Germany. The blankets are sized exactly for the stretchers the soldiers are lying on, so they can be warm and cozy as they are being transported. The planes are cold and the blankets keep our men snug and warm during the flight. This group gives loving quilts to our boys. The guild named this project, Quilts for Wounded Soldiers.

Sue told me about three special exhibits which will be featured at the upcoming quilt show. The first one is called, 'The Hoffman Challenge' because it is sponsored by the fabric company of the same name that sends out a once a year challenge to quilters. The company designates three or four fabrics that participants are required to use and you can make whatever design you wish and if they accept it - then it moves around to different quilt shows all over the country. The show will feature a section of 'Hoffman Quilts' made by quilters from all over the United States. That will be fun to see. The second special event held on Sunday afternoon, March 1 will include a special appliqué exhibit from two of the best 'appliqués' in the guild; Marilyn Pound, who was the first president in 1979, and Julie Maas, who served as fifth president. "The third special exhibit will include Ike the Quilting Cowboy," said Sue. I asked her what she was talking about and then she told me the story about Ike Winner. "Ike was our first male member and he also worked for a time for a long-arm sewing machine company and would go around and demonstrate his quilting machine at all the shows and he would wear his cowboy hat and had on a gold lamé shirt. Ike Winner was a real character and he talked to everybody about quilting and he got to be known as Ike the Quilting Cowboy," said Sue. Four of Ike's quilts will be on display at this special show coming up next weekend. Ike was part of the guild for a number of years but is sadly now deceased.

Sue will have two quilts on display this year: one is a Christmas quilt called Winter Dance, and the other one which is a piece quilt that came from a pattern from French General, a fine quilt shop. Sue told me there will be 113 quilts displayed at the upcoming show. I can't wait!

The show will feature a large display of beautiful and intricate quilts in addition to featuring 20 vendors who will be selling fabric, notions, books, and the tools needed for quilting, in addition to a food court. Maybe you will be inspired to design your own special quilt memory. There will be a special raffle for a quilt. Can you imagine winning such a special prize for a one-dollar raffle ticket? I for one will definitely buy a ticket.

This 140 member strong group of talented, giving, loving women will host their 35th Annual South Bay Quilters Guild Show: Square Root of Nine at the Torrance Cultural Arts Center on Saturday, February 28, from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. and on Sunday, March 1, from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Admission is $8 at the door. I can't wait for this very special show! See you there! •

Purrfect Companions

Rascal loves to chase toys and cuddle!

Looking for your purr-fect match? Kitties of every color and size waiting to meet you.

Rascal is an adorable little boy with a ton of energy and plenty of goofy antics to go along with it. From the tip of his adorable tail to the end of the hair curling out of his ears, this mildly fluffy boy is a silky bundle of love and cuddles. He loves to romp and play with the other kitties, batting at their tails, and chewing on their ears until they give in and love him back. Confident and outgoing, he's unsure of dogs but might adjust to one if given time and space with a cat friendly, calm dog. Rascal loves to chase toys, explore every nook and cranny, and then collapse on top of you for a blanket.

Aurora was left in a box with her sister on her foster mom's porch. They were very tiny and it took them a while to catch up to the correct weight for their age. Aurora is super soft and loves to cuddle. She lives with small dogs and other cats, so she would do great in just about any home. Aurora loves to play with toys and enjoys romping about her foster home. Since she loves to snuggle and play with her fellow foster kittens, Aurora needs to be adopted to a home with another cat whom she can be best buddies with.

NaNa was found walking down the street in Long Beach as a very small kitten. NaNa is still a bit timid with humans moving around, likely from her time spent on the mean streets of Long Beach. She loves to snuggle on your legs when you are on the couch, and will even ask for pets when you are in bed. NaNa loves to play with toys, so if you sit down and get out a wand toy she will come right over for some fun. She also really likes treats and will just about take them from your hand! NaNa loves other cats, but would be ok as an only if you are home a lot as well as she is very independent. Teenagers who are calm and understanding of her timidity would be ok, but she likely would do best in an adult home. NaNa is a very special, sweet girl who deserves a loving home who will cherish her.

Aurora is looking for a home with other cats.

NaNa needs a calm environment.

These kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All of our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kitties, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

Your tax deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Blvd. #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

On Saturdays, we have adoptions from noon to 3:30 p.m. in Westchester at 8655 Lincoln Blvd. just south of Manchester Ave. and also in Mar Vista at 3860 Centinela Ave, just south of Venice Boulevard. Our website lists additional adoption sites and directions to each location. •

Expert Tips for Choosing the Right Window for Your Kitchen Remodel

(BPT) - What are the hottest updates for homes in 2015? The kitchen is one of the most popular rooms in the home to remodel, and for good reason. According to HGTV and Trulia, a kitchen update is one of the secrets to selling your home.

When it comes to remodeling your kitchen you must consider many aspects - cabinets, counters, floors and appliances - but you may not have thought about windows. According to Remodeling.com's 2015 Cost Vs. Value Report, window replacement - whether wood, vinyl or fiberglass - provides a good return on investment compared to other replacement projects, increasing the value of your home financially and aesthetically. So whether you're making small updates or completely gutting your old kitchen, including window replacement in your project is a smart addition.

Here are three key elements to keep in mind when choosing a window for your kitchen:

STYLE

Kitchen windows are often placed above counters or sinks, making them hard to reach and prone to moisture. Choosing a window style that is easy to open and close, such as an awning, sliding or casement, is a smart move.

Awning windows - which can be pulled in or pushed out - are perfect for ventilation, which can be especially helpful in a hot kitchen. Since hot air from the oven or stove typically rises, awning style windows perform the best when placed close to the ceiling or above eye-level.

Sliding or casement windows, which use a crank out method for opening and closing, are two good options for hard to reach areas, like above the counters or behind the kitchen sink.

MATERIAL TYPE

With window placement above counters or sinks, moisture and staining can occur, so choosing an easy-to-clean material like vinyl or fiberglass, is equally important. Fiberglass windows can withstand extreme heat and cold, are energy efficient and can have the same quality look of painted wood. Vinyl windows are easy to care for, don't require painting or staining, and stay looking great for years.

However, if wood makes more sense for you and the style of your home, then make sure to select a finish that will hold up against stains and moisture, and be prepared to do a little more cleaning and up-keep.

FEATURES AND OPTIONS

Whether your new kitchen is traditional, modern or rustic, your new windows should complement the space. Window designs offer a variety of features including colors, hardware and grilles. With so many options to choose from it's easy to design a window that's unique to you and the style of your kitchen. •
