Election Results Consolidated, Officials Sworn Into Office

By Cristian Vasquez

Torrance Mayor Patrick J. Furey and the members of the Torrance City Council approved City Clerk Rebecca Poirier's recommendation of adopting a resolution to consolidate the results of the June 7 general municipal election. Poirier also conducted the Oath of Office for the three "duly elected officeholders" Councilman Mike Griffiths, Councilman Geoff Rizzo and Councilman Milton Herring.

"It is a humbling experience; I work hard to understand the community, to listen to the community and understand what their concerns are," Councilman Rizzo said. "Hopefully in my decisions, in listening to the community, I make decisions that are in the best interest of the community because that is the bottom line when I make a decision. I'm humbled that the community can recognize that I have given things thought and that I don't take my decisions lightly."

Councilman Herring will be serving his first term as an elected member of the council, while Councilmen Rizzo and Griffiths both ran successful reelection campaigns for another term in office.

"I would like to take this opportunity to thank primarily the residents of Torrance for putting their faith in me to serve as their city councilman for the next four years," Councilman Griffiths said. "It is quite an honor and I am humbled by the actions of the resident of the city. I am honored to be here."

Councilman Herring earned the most votes, 13,789, while Councilman Rizzo tallied 13,472 votes and Councilman Griffiths received 12,880 votes. The three councilmembers beat out candidates Leilani Kimmel-Dagostino with 9,783 votes, Gengmun Eng with 9,666 votes and Asam Sheikh with 5,448 votes. Councilman Herring is planning to use his time on the council as an opportunity to contribute to the growth the city.

"Jared Sydney Torrance had a dream of a balanced city: commercial, industrial and residential," Councilman Herring said after taking his Oath of Office. "In making that dream a reality he collaborated with some of the brightest minds to help layout a beautiful city. In 2012, Torrance celebrated its centennial with the theme of 'Looking Back and Moving Forward.' Whenever I visit the Torrance Historical Society Museum, I am inspired as I look around and see the pictures on the wall of the great contributions that men and women who have gone on before me have dedicated themselves to in making this city the great city that it is. I am proud of to be a part of fashioning our fantastic future."

Also part of the meeting's activities was saying goodbye to retiring Councilman Gene Barnett, who has been a member of the Torrance City Council since June of 2007.

"This marks the conclusion of my nine years as member of the Torrance City Council,"

To the Torrance Community:

"The terrible tragedy that occurred in Dallas Thursday is a shocking reminder that our police officers serve to prevent harm, protect and preserve life, all while accepting the fact that they may lose their own lives protecting our community. Although no community is exempt from this type of tragedy, we take pride in Torrance knowing our training, standards, and leadership are on the cutting edge of our profession. We appreciate the support of our city leaders and especially from the citizens we serve. Over the past few days, our men and women have been touched with an outpouring of support from the Torrance community. Officers have been the recipients of hugs and thanks from citizens in disbelief at what is occurring across our country. They have brought in flowers, food, and offered their emotional support and gratitude for the officers who serve them daily. Notes of encouragement have been left on their police units.

On behalf of the men and women of the Torrance Police Department, I would like to thank our citizens and members of our business community for their outpouring of love and thanks during this very difficult time. We both welcome and appreciate it. Working together we can make a difference."

Comic Gem out of New Zealand 'Hunt for the Wilderpeople' Bursts with Laughs

By Ryan Rojas
for www.cinemacy.com

Coming off of his 2014 little seen but well-received New Zealand vampire mockumentary "What We Do in the Shadows," writer/director Taika Waititi fleshes out his cheeky brand of deadpan humor in his follow-up comedy "Hunt for the Wilderpeople." This fun adventure story bursts with laughs, surprisingly heartfelt pathos, and can be considered his all-around best movie yet.

Waititi previously hit the nail – or rather, coffin – on the head in "Shadows" (starring the dryly hilarious Jemaine Clement) by making audiences laugh throughout the whole movie, not sparing any joke that could perfectly punch up a moment. It is clear Waititi is skilled and gifted in his comedic sensibilities. It's this strength of his that shines through in his movies, including "Wilderpeople," which shows his instincts as a comedian who understands how to craft a deadpan comedy that not only makes a movie move from beat to beat and joke to joke, but presents a heartfelt story as well. If it's Waititi's comedic style that makes "Wilderpeople" a gem, it's to the credit of the movie's cast who brings that comedy to life, their characters being both ridiculously funny and yet so rich in heart and empathy, giving substance to an otherwise quirky and off-beat indie film.

Our main character is Ricky, played by relative newcomer Julian Dennison in a breakout role. He anchors the movie not only with his weighty figure, but also with his cheeky one-liners and wannabe gangster rap attitude, a front that clearly reveals his reluctant wish for love, being that he is a foster care child. If his comically-anarchic swagger has upset other families, his new adoptive mother Bella (Rima Te Wiata) would love him just the same, allowing him to run away from home whenever he wants (just as long as he's back for breakfast). Certainly, the Child Services lady Paula (Rachel House) is happy to be rid of Ricky as she covers up that his past is full of punching stuff, kicking stuff, burning stuff and stealing stuff. A watchful eye is also had by his weary "Uncle" Hec (Same Neill).

Without giving much else away, the movie turns into an unexpected adventure movie with Ricky and Hec finding themselves in the situation of being on the run from the authorities (and a hilariously diligent Paula), leaving the boy and his reluctant guardian to survive in the New Zealand forest with all of the dangers and enemies that wish to hunt them down. The comedy comes a mile-a-minute, balancing from light chuckles to hearty gut-laughs, yet is built on a foundation of love and acceptance, as Ricky and Hec both change and grow in spirit from the beginning to the end.

At a time when comedies in the U.S. range from the Hard-R genre a la "The Hangover" and "Trainwreck," "Hunt for the Wilderpeople" is a much-welcomed movie to watch with family and friends. It's certainly a film that will intrigue audiences to watch Waititi's previous movies, as well as anticipate his next big-screen outing (the sizably bigger "Thor: Ragnarok"), proving that Waititi has become a director that we should join on any adventure.

"Hunt for the Wilderpeople" is rated PG-13 for thematic elements including violent content, and for some language. 101 min. Now playing in select theaters. •

Councilman Barnett said to the audience in attendance. "It has been an extraordinary opportunity for me to serve the city that I have called home for the past 62 years. For those people that have put their trust in me, I want them to know that I am truly grateful."

The retiring councilman took the time to thank "love of my life, my best friend, my wife of 48 years and the former city treasurer," Linda Barnett, as well as their daughters and grandchildren, for their support. With all of his colleagues on the council, and other city employees, sharing thoughts and memories expressing their gratitude and fondness of Barnett, the retiring councilman was quick to praise and give thanks to everyone he ever worked with.

"To my council colleagues, past and present, it has been a privilege and I do count it as an honor to have worked with all of you to accomplish our shared mission of making the City of Torrance the best that it can be," Barnett said. "To City Manager LeRoy Jackson, to the city attorney and his staff, to members of the executive staff and to department managers, and all city employees, past and present, your dedication and quality of work in making Torrance better for all of us residents is a source of great personal pride and I thank you all for the outstanding effort."

"I also want to express to all of the city staff how appreciative I am of the respect that you have shown me since my appointment. It seems like from the time I was appointed it was Councilman Barnett. At one point I had to check my birth certificate. I thought somehow I had a name change in there," said the councilman. "Finally and most importantly, to the people of Torrance, thank you all for your willingness to work for good causes, to speak out on issues and reach out to people in need. Serving you over the past nine years has been at time humbling, for the most part rewarding and without a doubt memorable." •

Havana's Reawakening Preparing to Take Flight

By Rob McCarthy

Cuba is the most intriguing travel destination on the planet right now, yet the only way for Americans to reach the island nation is by ship. That changes this fall when U.S. airlines begin daily service to Havana, including flights from Los Angeles International Airport.

The U.S. Transportation Department last week released a short list of cities to service Havana and its other international airports, and Chicago and Washington, D.C., were snubbed. Their omissions were surprising, given that a D.C.-to-Havana route would connect two nation's capitals, and Chicago is the hometown of President Barack Obama, whose administration pushed for the agreement that normalized relations and opened trade and travel between the Cold War enemies.

Los Angeles International Airport is the choice to become the West Coast hub for nonstops to Cuba. How many daily flights LAX gets is yet to be decided. Service to Havana, which is the closest major city to the U.S. mainland, is scheduled to begin in the fall. The airlines are waiting for the Transportation Department to say jump. Passenger demand is expected to soar, and an early fare sale by American Airlines priced seats at $398 from the West Coast, and $198 from the Southeast.

South Bay's connection to the newly opened Cuba doesn't stop with LAX, however. A Loyola Marymount University film professor recently picked up an Emmy for Arts Department's Associate professor Kurt Daugherty recorded sound; professor Mladen Milicevic composed the music; and Clinical Assistant professor Gino Brancolini contributed to the script and editing of the documentary.

Like the film's producers, U.S. carriers sense there is a pent-up demand to know more about Havana and visit for the first time in 40 years. However, the Castro government clearly isn't prepared for a flood of American tourists, more like a trickle. Havana has agreed to allow 20 flights per day from the United States to Havana, and another 10 to its other international airports.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has selected eight U.S. airlines - Alaska Airlines, American Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Frontier Airlines, JetBlue Airways, Southwest Airlines, Spirit Airlines, and United Airlines. They proposed 60 daily flights per day, but the U.S. government is bound by its agreement with Cuba. The airlines are awaiting final approval from the department to begin selling fares. Airlines and airports that were not selected may appeal the DOT's decision issued last week.

Havana is the capital of Cuba, and a culturally rich urban center that is home to more than 2 million people. The port city sits on the Caribbean Sea, and offers unique architecture, Ernest Hemingway's home that has been preserved, uptempo music, restaurants and plenty of walking.

a short documentary about a lost piece of Cuba's past.

Loyola Marymount University Professor Glenn Gebhard created the documentary, "Cuba: The Forgotten Revolution," about two men never mentioned by Cuban historians. Gebhard, who teaches at LMU's School of Film and Television, said the film uses archival stock footage to tell the story about two revolutionaries who were brushed aside when Fidel Castro seized power on Jan. 1, 1959. The project took years to make, and involved several of his Loyola Marymount colleagues.

"Hopefully the themes of this film will resonate beyond Cuba and highlight the importance of readdressing history, and understanding the reasons why history can be used in any country for political manipulation," Gebhard said in his acceptance speech on June 18.

LMU contributors to the film include screenwriter Tim Guest who co-wrote the film; lecturer Mario Congreve served as co-producer and cinematographer; Recording from the United States and can obtain one by falling under one of the 12 categories mandated by the U.S. government, the airlines contacted for this story reminded me. In the meantime, the surest route to reach Cuba is by ship.

Cruise lines are ferrying Americans this summer across the Gulf of Mexico and the Strait of Florida to Havana, which lies at the northern end of Cuba about 90 miles from the Florida coast. The distance by air from Orlando, Fla., to Havana is 449 miles, and Orlando is one of the airports chosen last week by the Department of Transportation to offer air service from the mainland.

"Restoring regular air service holds tremendous potential to reunite Cuban American families and foster education and opportunities for American businesses of all sizes," U.S. Transportation Secretary Anthony Foxx said on July 7.

South High Volleyball Earns First Place

By Adam Serrao

The High School volleyball season is often one that goes un-talked about in the prep sports ranks. With other sports like baseball, softball and even track and field and swimming all going on at the same time, the one indoor sport seems to always get left out of the mix. Don't tell that to the South High boys volleyball team and their head coach Aaron Saldana, though. Saldana and his crew worked extremely hard this season to put together massive winnings streaks, take first place in the Pioneer League standings and ultimately make it into this year's CIF Division 2 playoffs. A 26-10 overall record this season, in addition to an 11-0 mark in league play, made this South High Spartans volleyball team the best that the city of Torrance had to offer this season.

"Los Angeles International Airport is the choice to become the West Coast hub for nonstops to Cuba. How many daily flights LAX gets is yet to be decided."

The South High volleyball team faced a tough test to open this year's 2016 volleyball season. The Redondo Sea Hawks were the Spartans first opponent of the year and perhaps one of their toughest in the seasons early going. Redondo wound up winning their first four games of the season, and were it not for one mere loss, would have opened the year up with an incredible 11-0 record. The very first win for the Sea Hawks was against the Spartans, handing them their very first loss of the season. Stepping into a brand new season, it took South a while to get going. Offense was a bit hard to come by on the night as Redondo took it to the Spartans in the first set, 25-20. The second was a bit closer and may just have taken the rest of the fight that South had left in them on the night. A 27-25 victory for Redondo, however, led into a 25-16 third-set victory and a sweep for the Sea Hawks, giving the Spartans a season-opening first game loss and a bad taste in their mouths.

While the first game started off slowly for the Spartans, things were soon to begin looking up. After their opening day loss to start the season, the South High boys would rattle off four victories in a row, including wins against Cathedral and their biggest rivals this year, the Torrance Tartars. South beat their inner-city foes in their first matchup of the year by taking the first set 25-16 and the third set 15-10 of the match, extending their own personal win streak to four, in the process. Like every long and trying season, though, the ups come with the downs. South High's first extended winning streak of the year was quickly followed by the team's lowest point of the season. Losses to Tesoro, Santa Margarita and Palos Verdes gave the Spartans their first losing streak of the season. They tried to battle back in this year's Las Vegas Invitational, but two more losses to Bishop Gorman and Beckman would soon follow. Luckily for the Spartans, league play is all that would matter this year and it was right around the corner.

There was no better team for South to get back on track against than their rivals from Torrance High. The Tartars had beaten the Spartans both times that the cross-town rivals matched up last season, so this year, South was certainly out for revenge. Senior Troy Ellis stepped up to the plate for the Spartans. His 21 kills and two blocks led South to a sweep of their league rivals (25-20, 31-29, 25-17) and marked the second time this year that South would come up on top of their inner-city foes.

"It's huge. It's a huge win for us," coach Saldana explained after the win. "These are our league rivals and they beat us both times last year, so to jump on them early is a great thing." The Spartans were hot coming into the matchup against the Tartars, but South gained even more momentum from the win. Their second victory of the season over their rivals was part of a massive 17-game winning streak for the Spartans that would lead the team directly into this year's playoffs.

South's incredible winning streak didn't slow down once the playoffs started. Crescenta Valley was first up on the postseason schedule to take the brunt of the Spartans newly found force. A victory was in short order. 25-23, 25-18, and 25-21 led to a straight-sets sweep in round one for South High. Costa Mesa was next. Behind strong play from Kohl Kutsch and Luke Krzmarzick, the Spartans would find themselves sweeping again. A 3-0 victory over Costa Mesa would lead the team into the quarterfinals of the playoffs where they would match up with West Ranch.

The West Ranch Wildcats proved to be a team that would finally give the Spartans matchup problems. Michael Flores provided 21 kills for the Wildcats on a night when South, at last, simply looked overmatched. A close first set (25-22) led into an ugly second (25-10). Losing by 15 points seemed to take all of the remaining wind out of South's sails. The third and final set of the match was soon taken by West Ranch as well (25-20). The Spartans ultimately fell in a sweep that would prove to end their season.

Though South High couldn't make it out of the quarterfinals of the playoffs, they enjoyed a very successful season that saw them get revenge towards Torrance High and finish in first place in the Pioneer League standings. The Spartans will have to find a way to deal with the loss of senior captains Chase Ceballos and Troy Ellis next season, but young athletes like Joseph Sico and Cole Rossi are primed to take over as leaders of the team. Coach Saldana and the rest of the Spartans will certainly be back next season. Don't be surprised to see them finishing on top of the Pioneer League standings once again. •

First Half Finale

By Adam Serrao

The Los Angeles Dodgers are heading into the 2016 All-Star Break on a high note. After making it through some rough patches; like losing two of three to the Baltimore Orioles or three of four to the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Dodgers have weathered the storm - and some injuries - to remain in this year's playoff race. At a little bit past the halfway point of the regular season (91 of 162 games) the Dodgers have a lot of work to do if they want to catch the first place San Francisco Giants. Heading into the break having won three of four versus the San Diego Padres and seven of their last 10 games overall bodes well for a team that still has holes in certain areas, but exhibits major strengths in others.

"So, if the Dodgers starting rotation has been next to excellent, then their bullpen must be horrible, right? Not quite."

Six and a half games can be seen as quite a bit of ground to make up on the first place Giants if the Dodgers want to win this year's NL West for the fourth season in a row. Despite their recent success within the division, however, Los Angeles has failed to achieve any postseason success. When you have the best pitcher in the entire league, simply getting to the National League Division Series or even the Championship Series just isn't good enough. Clayton Kershaw, who has now been accepted into his sixth consecutive All-Star Game, should be enough to get the Dodgers to the World Series and this year, he is once again proving why. Though he's been injured for the past couple of weeks, Kershaw continues to sport the best ERA and WHIP in the entire league and was leading in strikeouts as well, before his injury. Despite Zack Greinke's departure to the Arizona Diamondbacks, the Dodgers starting rotation, behind Kershaw, ranks in the top five in the entire league. A stable of pitchers that is only getting healthier as the season draws on still expects better results from Hyun-Jin Ryu and the return of Brett Anderson to help improve on their 3.44 team ERA that ranks them only behind the Washington Nationals, Chicago Cubs, and New York Mets at the break.

So, if the Dodgers starting rotation has been next to excellent, then their bullpen must be horrible, right? Not quite. As good as the starters have been, L.A. relief pitchers have been even better. The Dodgers bullpen ranks second in the league at the break and has actually pitched more innings than the starting rotation has, as a whole. The bullpen, headed by the nastiness coming from closer Kenley Jansen's arm, ranks as the best bullpen in the entire league with a 2.83 combined ERA. Jansen, who has finally garnered his first All-Star Game appearance, has been the linchpin. His 27 saves tie him for second most in the league and his 1.16 ERA, while basically being unhittable, is also second among closers in the MLB. Jansen isn't the only one getting things done in the Dodgers pen, though. Adam Liberatore has been nothing short of outstanding. He recently set the franchise record for most consecutive scoreless appearances (24), passing John Candelaria. Liberatore now sports a 0.61 ERA, while Joe Blanton (2.09) and Casey Fien (2.49) have been excellent, to lead the league's best bullpen, as well.

With all of the great pitching going around, the Dodgers one major area of weakness has been their offense. Corey Seager has been the lone bright spot, earning his first All-Star bid to become the youngest position player in Dodgers history to make the All-Star team. Seager leads the team in almost every offensive statistical category, including batting average (.297), runs scored (60), and home runs (17). He'll also be participating in this year's Home Run Derby at the All Star Break. Behind Seager, Adrian Gonzalez has been his usual self while Justin Turner and Yasmani Grandal have also turned things up a bit lately. Overall, though, the offense has been inconsistent. With the MLB trade deadline coming up (July 31), the Dodgers should be major players for another bat in the lineup. Look for the team to dangle Yasiel Puig in front of other teams to see what kind of offers they receive. With Andre Ethier set to return soon, the Dodgers have a surplus of outfielders that they can afford to play with in order to get another .300 bat in the lineup; something only Seager has managed to accomplish lately.

The Dodgers 51-40 record at this year's break will put the team 11 games over the .500 mark and rank them as the eighth best team in the entire league, right on the heels of the Boston Red Sox (49-38). Through 91 games last season, the Dodgers held the same exact record as they do now, at 51-40. Winners of seven of their last 10 games heading into the break, the only difference between this year's Dodgers team and last year's is the record of their rivals from San Francisco (47-43 last year, compared to 57-33 this year). First place might be pretty tough to accomplish in an even year when the Giants have the best record in baseball and are favored to win it at all, but if the Dodgers remain healthy and rested behind their three All-Stars, it's not something that's seen as being completely impractical. With 71 games remaining on the schedule after the break, anything is possible for the Boys in Blue. •

The Visiting Goats in Torrance

Story and Photos by TerriAnn Ferren

Have you ever spent a tedious afternoon under the hot sun, on your hands and knees pulling weeds? Why do weeds make their way up through the soil easier, it seems, than the flowers I so gently attend? Every gardener, I am sure, has asked that questions at least once. I have seen crabgrass infiltrate pristine Dichondra seemingly almost overnight. And flowers aren't immune to the 'weed' flowers, as I call them. You know the ones – the pretty 'wildflowers' that pop up in between flower beds. Well, I found out there is an easy way which eradicates those pesky weeds and overgrown brush on larger areas, like hillsides, at city hall or someone else will recommend another site if they need help with clearing the brush," said Andy. Also, there was a time when the city of Torrance used goats for clearing the fields on Crenshaw Boulevard right near the train tracks. Andy told me, "The new bus depot is going in, so it is already pretty much leveled, so there was nothing there. I think he probably brought in around 200 [goats] this year. It saves us a lot of weed-eating trouble and this guy makes it pretty easy on us. He has got all the access, he knows how to set up, he knows how to get water, he makes it real easy on us."

Andy explained that once the city secures and undeveloped fields, naturally, and safely. If you are curious about how, one needs only look around and observe how the city of Torrance deals with the problem. Goats.

Yes, goats. I spoke with Andy Darlak, Water Operations Supervisor for the city of Torrance, who told me, "We have been using goats for the past ten years and this is my first year organizing this." I learned that goats are 'hired' for the weed abatement of Elm Street, Via Corona, Newton Street, Yukon Street, and Walteria Reservoir, which includes the tennis court area, a fenced area on the side, and a park area. These set sites, make up the usual areas the goats visit, but this year, in addition to the usual sites, they 'munched away' on Del Amo Blvd. and Van Ness Avenue. The Fire Department mandates that brush clearing be done by July 3, probably because of the holiday and the fireworks. "I went and met with him [George] on Saturday when he was pulling his last load of goats out. For these sites, we do it once a year. Sometimes, people the quote from the goat herder and finalizes all approvals, the goats move in for about two weeks, munching on overgrown vacant land. George Gonzales has been bringing his goats into Torrance for quite a few years. Andy then told me, "He [the goat man] knows which sites to hit, how to set up, knows about how long it will take, and he makes it real easy. I have friends who, once they found out I was organizing it, they came up there and we hung out with the goats in Walteria one day. I texted George before they came out and let him know we had a bit of a coyote problem – he wasn't worried about it – that is why he's got the dog. I think depending upon how the weather is, if we go through draughts, we might need them twice a year." That might be a good idea. If the draught continues, and we get a little bit of rain at the reservoir, the brush grows quickly and keeping the growth down keeps the fire danger low.

Then I caught up with the goat herder himself, George Gonzales, owner of Ranchito Tivo Boer Goats, based in Chino. At the time, George was busy removing the fence used to corral the goats during their two-week stay, along with his two helpers, Leonsio Guerrero, 24, and Victor Ochoa. Both men told me they enjoy working with the animals. George said, "I have been with the city of Torrance eight years now. I do about four or five sites for them. First of all, goats work every day, seven days a week, Christmas, New Years, every day, and they never call in sick. They only time they 'come home' is during my vacation in January for two weeks and my wife Dr. Liz Gonzales, who is a veterinarian, she gives them medicines, and checks them and that is what we do once a year." Goats eat nearly everything. And they love to eat. Goats have four stomachs, much like a cow and chew their cud. They eat weeds, brush, and even poisoned ivy and roses! They never complain, are very quiet, never take a day off, or ask for a raise. They eat brush to within nearly five inches of the ground, pulling out grasses by the roots. Also, goats droppings are small, odorless, and biodegradable and do not have to be cleaned up or hauled away. But, "Goats are like the world – they are backstabbers, jealous, bullies, they will go after each other and hit each other for no reason, no compassion, no mercy – but – they herd good and they eat everything. They eat poison oak and palm trees," stated George. Also, goats are a bargain. Compare clearing a large area for $30,000, as compared to a herd of goats for $5,000. Tax dollars saved. Yes, George and his goats are saving Torrance tax dollars by allowing the goats to eat our brush.

Goats in their pen.

George told me he owns a total of 450 of these efficient goats, but soon will top 500, in addition to some sheep. "My wife, Dr. Liz

George Gonzales.

Gonzales, wants to make soap out of them [sheep milk] for a hobby," added George.

Guarding these voracious eaters are four Great Pyrenees dogs (one for each herd). George told me the dogs take care of the coyotes, stray dogs, and anything else that might bother the goats. They don't let anything get into 'their herd'. If any animal, including a bear or a lion, which they may encounter in the cities of Monrovia, Glendora, or Duarte, comes near the sheep, the Great Pyrenees Dogs are on guard. The dogs, trained for this job exclusively in Texas, are not domesticated and love goats. They protect their goats. George told me, "The goats are from South Africa and they will withstand 110 degree heat, and weigh 300 pounds, and are very strong. They are good eaters. They eat 24/7. They eat all day long. I breed my own animals, and mostly we have girls. Girls are better workers. I rescue goats."

Chatting with George Gonzales opened my eyes and reminded me how simple things can be. Goats clearing brush in the city of Torrance is economical, efficient, and I would contend, nice to have around. Many people I spoke with said they had seen the goats grazing at various places around town. Gary Johnson told me, "We realized that goats don't 'neigh' – I 'herd' that."

The goats have finished their 'work' in Torrance for the season, but keep a lookout because you never know when they may be back. Now I just wish I could call on one goat for my garden! •

and Charlotte the Northeast; and Houston the Southwest. Atlanta will service the South, and Miami, Fort Lauderdale and Orlando have the Southeast. Its plan for air service allocates nonstop Havana service to areas of "substantial Cuban-American population, as well as to important aviation hub cities," the department said.

The deal between the governments works both ways, giving Havana-based airlines 20 nonstop flights per day to the mainland. Another 10 flights per day are allowed between the U.S. and each of Cuba's nine international airports. The flight caps were announced in June, and the two countries continue to iron out travel details, including places where American visitors may go on the island.

The Castro government has loosened earlier restrictions, so anyone fortunate enough to catch a seat on a Havana-bound jet this fall should ask about last-minute changes in the rules for visitors. The same goes for cruise ship passengers, some of whom sent back reports in May that tour operators weren't taking advantage of all of the sights open to American visitors. Their advice? Bring comfortable shoes and be prepared for a lot of walking.

A journalist with CruiseCompete.com said passengers to Cuba were confused about how Carnival's Fathom ship tours are organized. U.S. rules limit Americans visiting Cuba to certain activities, such as cultural exchanges, but that leaves some latitude to explore Havana's restaurants and music clubs.

"I was under the impression you had to do everything with the cruise line," editor-at-large Heidi Allison-Shane told the Associated Press.

Carnival randomly assigned passengers to visit museums, historic sites or performance venues without giving them a choice, Hanson said. A Carnival spokeswoman said the cruise line in the early summer was having a hard time adjusting its port visits and programs because U.S. policies are changing daily.

The Transportation Department will issue a final list of carriers and airports by end of July, and airlines contacted by the Herald say they will begin selling airfares once the list is released. Cubans and Americans will soon be rubbing shoulders, in the streets and on the dance floor. Whether by plane or boat, the Yankees are coming. •

Ancho Chile Rubbed Smoked Beef Brisket

Recipe by omahasteaks.com, provided by BPT.

Ingredients

- 1 Whole Omaha Steaks Brisket for smoking
- 2 cups white vinegar
- 2/3 cup yellow mustard
- 3/4 cup Omaha Steaks Ancho Chile Rub
- 4 cups Ancho Chile Smoking Spritzer, divided (recipe below)
- 8 cups apple or cherry wood chips, soaked in water

Preparation

- Prep time: 1 hour, Cook time: 11-13 hours, Rest time: 1-2 hours*
1. Remove brisket from bag and rinse with white vinegar then rinse with water. Dry completely using paper towels.
 2. Slather brisket generously with yellow mustard. Rub generously with ancho chile rub and inject with 1 cup Ancho Chile Smoking Spritzer.
 3. Prepare smoker using 1 chimney of pure lump charcoal fully lit and one chimney of pure lump charcoal unlit. Make sure water pan is full and adjust vents until smoker maintains a temperature between 225 and 250 F.
 4. Place brisket on smoker fat side up and brush smoking spritzer over top. Every hour, check smoker temp, squirt with smoking spritzer and add handful of wood chips.
 5. After 3 hours, flip brisket fat side down and squirt with spritzer. After 6 hours, flip brisket fat side up. Wrap heavy duty foil around the last 3-4 inches of brisket tip to prevent it from drying out. Restock water pan and add lump charcoal as needed. Adjust vents until temperature is between 225 and 250 F. Beginning at 8 hours, check internal temperature every hour and apply spritzer and wood chips as needed. Between 11-13 hours, when internal temperature is between 195 and 200 F, if fork slides easily into brisket, it is done.
 6. Let brisket rest for 1-2 hours before slicing and serving.

If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability you can email us at info@msfr.org. Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one!

My new name is Wrigley and I am looking for my forever home. My previous owner passed away and left my three siblings and me behind. Since I'm a 4-year-old, male purebred Miniature Schnauzer, the rescue group helping my siblings, contacted the nice folks at MSFR to help me find a new family. I don't think it will be too hard because I'm a pretty happy little guy who is very friendly and gets along great with other dogs. I only weighs about 16 pounds, have natural ears and a natural tail that looks kind of fancy. I have been checked out by the vet and had a dental – guess what – no extractions!! I'm really a terrific companion and would be an awesome addition to your family. If you are interested in Wrigley, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

Ziggy is the diminutive form of the name Ziegfried and one thing for certain is that I'm definitely diminutive. I'm a 2-year-old, female, Maltese/Poodle mix. I ended up at an L.A. county shelter as a stray and was accompanied by two friends, Stardust and Major Tom. Both of my friends have found perfect homes but I'm still looking for mine. I can't remember how long I was "on the streets" but I certainly was a mess when I arrived at the shelter. I was in dire need of bath and my beautiful coat was so matted and dirty that it looked like grey dreadlocks. After some grooming magic, I've been transformed to a lovely, long-legged "Multi-Poo" with an adorable face. I'm pretty quiet, a bit shy at first meeting but I'm 13 pounds of sweetness and affection. I get along great with other dogs and would love to have a doggie pal. If you are interested in Ziggy, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

Frankie is my name and I am looking for a new family who will want to love me as much as I'm going to love them. My previous owner wasn't very loving when they just dumped me at the shelter. They had been my family since I was just a puppy and, according to them, I contracted juvenile cataracts when I was a year old. I was a loyal and great companion for six years so I was really surprised when they decided to leave me at the shelter because they were moving to a non-pet residence. Now here I sit, a 6-year-old male, purebred Miniature Schnauzer looking for my forever home. Due to my limited vision, I can be a bit nervous at first meeting but once I get comfortable with my surroundings, I become people friendly in no time at all. I get along great with other dogs and I really need to be adopted by a family who has another doggie pal to show me the ropes. I'm only 18 pounds but it's all personality and sweetness. If you are interested in Frankie, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

Ziggy

Hello, I'm a 3-year-old, female purebred Miniature Schnauzer named Reese. One night when I was out looking for adventure, I injured my paw and fractured two teeth – bad idea. Next thing I knew I was captured and taken to a shelter and assigned a bed in their medical building. It was only a soft tissue injury that healed quickly but now I need a home. No one was interested when I was at the shelter but then I definitely was not a pretty sight. I was a stinky, matted mess with a goofy smile so it's no surprise that no one wanted to adopt me. After being rescued I had a dental and my damaged teeth – one was an upper canine – were removed. Then it was off to the groomer where I was bathed and shaved down a bit. I am happy to say I am now 16 pounds of beauty in the form of a black and silver girl with a natural, plume of a tail. I get along great with dogs and love people so please come to adoptions and ask for Reese. If you are interested in Reese, please email info@msfr.org for more information. •

Saving one animal won't change the world, but the world will surely change for that animal.

Reese

708 Lomita Street, El Segundo

When you enter this magnificent home notice the travertine tiled entry leading you into the formal living room where custom built-ins flank the fireplace and a window seat is built in to the large picture window that captures the front yard view. The dining room boasts a large custom built-in buffet with a refrigerator, a tiled back splash and butcher block counter top. The office is in a great location off the main living area and features custom cabinetry. The office would make a great bedroom with a full bathroom outside the door. The kitchen is an entertainers dream with stainless professional grade appliances, granite counter tops and large island. Enjoy your morning coffee underneath the custom built patio covering in the backyard. The backyard has flagstone pavers with Mexican Beach pebble and is large enough for a trampoline! The master suite is complete with wood vaulted ceilings, a fireplace, his/her large walk-in closets, large bath complete with Jacuzzi tub, walk-in shower, dual sinks and separate w/c. Also featured off the master bedroom is the custom built deck with city views. The upstairs guest room has high ceilings and an en suite bathroom. The additional two upstairs bedrooms share a large Jack and Jill bathroom. Asking $2,075,000
